Charges Filed In Shooting; Victim Is Poor

A formal charge of assault with a deadly weapon was brought late yesterday against a Novato man in the shooting earlier of a civil engineer in his San Rafael apartment.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Leonard Shaw brought the reduced complaint against John W. Frederick, 36, of 50 Sullivan Lane, Novato, who had been booked earlier on suspicion of assault with intent to murder.

The victim, Matt Cernac Jr., 43, of 1825 Lincoln Avenue, was reported in poor condition today in Marin General Hospital.

Authorities remain puzzled over the shooting. Frederick, who called police to the shooting scene, has refused to talk, and Cernac's condition prevents questioning of him.

Frederick, in stocking feet, was arraigned on the charge before Judge Hadden W. Roth of Marin Municipal Court. Roth reduced to $25,000 bail of $55,000 set after the earlier booking.

Hearing for counsel and plea was set for 1:30 p.m. Monday. Joseph A. Dahlman, Frederick's attorney, was not present at the arraignment. He had previously recommended his client remain silent.

Cernac was found lying in a hallway in his apartment about 1:30 a.m. with a bullet in the head. A .22 caliber automatic pistol was found by police near Cernac.

Shaw said two drinks were found in the apartment, indicating Frederick might have been invited in. Shaw said there was no evidence of forced entry.

Shaw said authorities have learned that Frederick had spent his last $5 in the Gold Clown Bar on Fourth Street, San Rafael, before going to Cernac's.

Shaw identified the gun as Cernac's, and said state criminal identification men were running tests on the weapon.

'HAVEN'T AN ENEMY'

Beating Victim Is Baffled By Midnight Ambush At His Home

By JOHN F. KEARNEY

A San Rafael man lies today in a hospital bed hopelessly baffled as to the motive for the brutal attack which put him there.

Leonard N. Atwood, 50, reached for a cigarette with shaking fingers, lit it and said, "I haven't an enemy in the world . . . not one. I've racked my brains and I can't find an answer."

At his charming single-story home overlooking a peaceful San Rafael Bay, his wife, Betty Ann said, "He has no one but friends. My own theory is that it was a prowler."

Atwood, a buyer for U.S. Steel Co., had stayed late in San Francisco Tuesday night on business.

He arrived at his home at 816 Point San Pedro Road about 12:25 a.m. Wednesday and the first thing he noticed was that the lights—usually left on outside by his wife—were out.

He started down the steps to his front door and it was then it happened. He was ambushed.

"I'm almost sure I was hit from behind. It came so suddenly. I put up my right hand to ward off a blow which I feel certain would have been fatal," said Atwood. He had about $75 on him, which he said was not taken.

The light bulbs outside had been removed, apparently by the attacker, believed by the couple to have been at least as tall as Atwood, who is 6 feet 5 inches, because of the height of the bulbs from from the ground.

This is one aspect of the attack most puzzling to both the Atwoods and the Sheriff's deputies: what reason would an assailant have for removing the light bulbs in preparation for the attack? Loosening them would have served to hide his face if he thought he could be identified by the victim. The bulbs were never found.

At the moment of the attack, Mrs. Atwood, alone in the darkened house, believed herself in danger.

"I must have gone to bed about 11 o'clock and was awakened by a most horrible sound. It was like a heavy scuffling. Then I heard a terrible moaning sound as if someone was trying to say something," she explained.

She went out into the passageway the front door and noticed the outside lights were out. She called out: "Is that you, Leonard?" There was no answer.

She said: "Whoever you are, please go away." Mrs. Atwood went immediately to the telephone and dialed the operator. "I'm alone in the house and I think there is a prowler outside the door. Please get me some help," she told the operator.

Suddenly, the midnight silence was broken by the clang of a miniature ship's bell which the couple had put outside their home.

Now thoroughly terrified, Mrs. Atwood said she called out again and received the reply: "Yes, it's me. Let me in."

When she opened the door, she found her husband covered in blood.

Yesterday, she said her only

Red Guard Military Unit Storms Anti-Mao Hideout

TOKYO (AP) — A Red Chinese military unit has stormed a hideout of military officers opposed to Communist Chairman Mao Tse-tung and arrested "scores" of the officers, a Japanese newspaper reported today.

It appeared to be the first report of violence within China's 2.5-million-man People's Liberation Army over Mao's purge of his opponents. Peking radio reported earlier that an "acute and complicated" struggle involving a small but influential group of anti-Maoists had built up within the army.

A RETRACTION

Other Japanese reports said President Liu Shao-chi, the top anti-Mao leader, recently demanded before the Communist Central Committee a retraction of his "self-criticism" widely publicized last December.

The reports said the demand could indicate that Liu was confident of maintaining his power and that he had launched a counterattack against Mao and Defense Minister Lin Paio.

The Peking correspondent of Mainichi Shimbun said the officers were arrested last Tuesday in Lanchow, a city of more than 150,000 persons 700 miles west of Peking on the Yellow River.

WALL POSTER

The correspondent quoted a wall poster put up in Peking and signed by "the 750th Lantzu Regiment." The regiment is stationed in Lanchow.

The poster reportedly said the captured officers were "black military elements" loyal to Gen. Liu Chih-chien, ousted by Mao's supporters as director of the Military Revolution Committee and No. 2 man in charge of ideological matters in the army. The officers' documents were reported confiscated.

Unruh Urges Halt To Tuition Charges

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh says Gov. Reagan should wait before trying to charge tuition at the University of California and state colleges.

Unruh, D-Inglewood, said yesterday his Joint Committee on Higher Education should be given time to consider tuition. He promised that the committee "will be able to develop a sound mechanism for financing institutions of higher learning in the state."

A $400 annual tuition — mentioned only as an example by Finance Director Gordon P. Smith — would make U.C. the most expensive major state university in the country, Unruh said. He explained the total annual cost would be $643, if tuition were added to present incidental fees.

Unruh offered no comment on Reagan's standing order to cut 1967-68 state operations by 10 per cent.

Reagan has so far made no specific proposal on tuition but has said he favors the idea.

State officials and financial experts began yesterday to look for ways to cut spending and explain it to voters. Some outside reaction was bitter.

The Reagan administration has called a halt to hiring new employees, put a freeze on buying office equipment and ordered closing of eight of 13 new aid centers for the poor in racially troubled areas.

Many state department heads, including appointees of Democratic Gov. Brown, indicated yesterday they expected to carry out necessary services and still trim costs.

Meanwhile on the U. C. campus, President Clark Kerr has ordered the nine campuses of the 87,000-student school to hold up admission until the financing crisis is clarified.

Kerr's ban on admissions included both graduate and undergraduate applicants. He said it would stay in force until after the chancellors of the university's campuses meet to discuss what to do about the economy edict.

The chancellors have a meeting scheduled for Jan. 18.

In other developments Friday, Governor Reagan announced he would appear on statewide television Monday night for a three-minute "report to the people." The subject was not announced, but it was assumed it would deal with state finances in general and school finances in particular.

San Francisco Couple Terrorized On Road

Husband In Hospital; Novato Boys Held

A 23-year-old San Francisco man lay in Marin General Hospital today, reportedly the victim of a carload of Novato boys bent on a night of sadistic thrills.

Roger T. Jensen was in fair condition with a possible back injury, possible concussion and multiple bruises—the results of an exercise in terror, given by four 17-year-old boys.

Jensen told Mill Valley police that his ordeal began on Highway 101 last night, when the boys pulled alongside his car in their 1955 Chevrolet.

They began their harrassment by shouting obscenities at Jensen and his wife Patricia, he said. As the "game" progressed, the boys would race their car past Jensen's, then pull in front and slow down.

Apparently unsatisfied with the results of this fun, the boys next began bombing his car with bottles, Jensen told police.

One of Jensen's tires blew out and he pulled the car to the side of the highway. When he and his wife emerged to fix the tire, the youths drove up and began throwing rocks, police said.

The terrified couple scrambled back into the car, and drove on the flat tire to a Union 76 service station at 679 East Blithedale Avenue. Their antagonists followed.

When Jensen got out of his car, one of the boys walked up and struck him with his fist, knocking him unconscious. A service station operator called police and the boys raced off in their car.

UNCONSCIOUS

When officers arrived, they found Jensen unconscious. Mrs. Jensen had cuts on her legs suffered when the boys stoned them on the highway, police said. An ambulance took Jensen to the hospital.

The boys were arrested later by Corte Madera police, after Mill Valley broadcast a description of their car. The boys said Jensen tried to run them off the highway and they retaliated.

They were all booked at juvenile hall. The one who struck Jensen, was booked on suspicion of aggravated assault, conspiracy and throwing substance at a vehicle with intent to do bodily harm. The other three were booked on the last two charges.

A check with Novato police showed that, in the past, the boys had been in brushes with the law over curfew violations, "and other minor things. Nothing really serious," said Sgt. Douglas Stone of Mill Valley.

Special LBJ Note To Reds On Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A special message urging agreement on ways to halt further deployment of antimissile defense systems was understood to be on its way from President Johnson to Soviet leaders today.

Officials yesterday listed this as one of the principal items touched upon in a confidential communication which the new American Ambassador to Russia, Llewellyn E. Thompson, is to deliver.

Thompson is to present the note to Soviet President Nickolai Podgorny.

Official sources said the basic theme of the presidential message concerns the desire of the United States to make every effort to improve relations with the Soviet Union and to arrive at various disarmament agreements.

Johnson said in his State of the Union address Tuesday that Russia "has begun to place near Moscow a limited antimissile defense." He made it clear the United States will not begin similar deployment of its Nike-X antiballistic missiles until it has made an effort to persuade the Russians to abandon their plans and avoid a costly new arms spiral.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, who believes that the best defense against nuclear missiles is an improved offense, is opposed to entering an arms race with the Soviet Union for deployment of vast antiballistic missile systems.

The United States hopes to get Russia to stop at this point and try to negotiate an agreement which will save the United States up to $40 billion and presumably have the same financial advantages for the Russians.

The President needs quick assurance from the Russians of their willingness to suspend further deployment of defensive missiles. Otherwise, he will face intense pressure in Congress in the months ahead to go ahead and begin deployment of a similar American system.

Year's First Golden Gate Span Victim

Someone bought a bus ticket to death yesterday.

A man, aged about 35, asked for a ticket to Sausalito at the Greyhound bus depot in Martinez. The schedule he was given said the bus would arrive at 1 p.m.

At 2:05 p.m., two workmen glanced over the railing of the Golden Gate Bridge and saw a body floating in the water. The body was recovered at 2:50 p.m.

San Francisco Deputy Coroner Ken Kindred searched the pockets of the unidentified man and found a canceled bus ticket from Martinez to Sausalito.

No one saw the man jump from the bridge, reported the California Highway Patrol, who listed the case as a suicide.

The man achieved a notoriety of a kind. He was the first known suicide off the bridge this year and the 308th since the bridge was opened.

Soul Searching May Continue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The soul searching that led to dumping Adam Clayton Powell's wife from a Congressional payroll seems to be spreading in the House.

Members were talking today about getting all relatives off the Congressional payroll, and one complained that the Senate was "dragging its feet" in its investigation of the activities of Sen. Thomas Dodd, D-Conn.

B-52s Attack DMZ; Thailand Base In Order

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. B-52 bombers today attacked North Vietnamese troop concentrations in the demilitarized zone (DMZ), and it was learned that the mighty Stratofortresses now are stationed at a new base in Thailand.

The B-52 bombing strike today was against a regular Communist force which intelligence sources spotted in the DMZ that divides the warring Vietnamese. It was not known if the bombers took off from nearby Thailand or from their regular station 2,500 miles away in Guam.

Informed sources said, however, B-52s already are on station at U-Tapao Air Base in Thailand and bombing runs either have begun or will shortly. The proximity of Thailand cuts down air-to-air refueling requirements and could results in a step-up in attacks by the high-flying bombers.

U.S. 7th Fleet destroyers used their five-inch guns to support the B-52 strike.

Spokesmen also said that in ground action yesterday, more than 74 guerrillas were killed in scattered actions in the northern provinces.

In one of the battles, U.S. Marines defending a Central Highlands artillery outpost inflicted heavy casualties on Viet Cong raiders armed with mortar, machineguns and hand grenades.

In another, 330 miles northeast of Saigon, artillery supporting South Korean marines killed 27 soldiers out of a 300-man guerrilla force. Two other clashes in the same area resulted in another 27 enemy dead, spokesmen said.

Meanwhile, the Soviet news agency Tass reported that in recent raids U.S. airplanes have bombed every section of the North Vietnamese capital. In one case, the report said, 300 houses in a single street were "razed to the ground."

In a channel to Saigon harbor today, a U.S. Navy minesweeper was sunk when rammed by a Norwegian freighter.

New Episcopal Bishop Seated; Succeeds Pike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rt. Rev. C. Kilmer Myers today urged churchmen to work for an end "of violence, both in Vietnam and in the great cities of our land," as he was installed sixth bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California.

The former suffragan bishop of Michigan succeeded retired Bishop James A. Pike in colorful ceremonies at Grace Cathedral. Rt. Rev. John E. Hines of New York City, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States, presided.

Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken of San Francisco attended, the first chief pastor of his Roman Catholic archdiocese ever to enter an Episcopal Cathedral and occupy a throne.

Drath To Join Medical Supply Trip Into North

By DAVID DIETZ

"We want to make as much fuss as possible. We want to show how much we are opposed to this terrible war, and that the people of the North need as much help as the people in the South."

So said Phillip Drath today as the unsuccessful peace candidate for Congress prepared to leave for North Vietnam with seven others to deliver medical supplies.

"We're not just pro-South; we're pro-people," he continued. "We believe in helping all people. We don't have any enemies, except war itself, poverty and ignorance."

Drath said the trip, which starts Monday with a flight from San Francisco to Tokyo, was organized by an ad hoc committee of the Society of Friends (Quakers) to which Drath belongs.

"We have been trying for some time to send medical supplies to the Red Cross in North Vietnam, but the State Department has interfered," Drath said. "So we decided to go on our own."

He reported that the society had received permission from North Vietnamese officials to enter the country, but that the group had not gotten approval from Washington.

"I don't think there's a law against it (the trip)," Drath said.

Drath said he and Horace Champney, a society member from Iowa, would depart for Tokyo at 1 p.m. Monday and join six other society members in Tokyo. From there, the group will sail in a 55-foot schooner owned by a society member to Hong Kong and Haiphong, North Vietnam.

B-52s Attack DMZ; Thailand Base In Order

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. B-52 bombers today attacked North Vietnamese troop concentrations in the demilitarized zone (DMZ), and it was learned that the mighty Stratofortresses now are stationed at a new base in Thailand.

The B-52 bombing strike today was against a regular Communist force which intelligence sources spotted in the DMZ that divides the warring Vietnamese. It was not known if the bombers took off from nearby Thailand or from their regular station 2,500 miles away in Guam.

Informed sources said, however, B-52s already are on station at U-Tapao Air Base in Thailand and bombing runs either have begun or will shortly. The proximity of Thailand cuts down air-to-air refueling requirements and could results in a step-up in attacks by the high-flying bombers.

U.S. 7th Fleet destroyers used their five-inch guns to support the B-52 strike.

Spokesmen also said that in ground action yesterday, more than 74 guerrillas were killed in scattered actions in the northern provinces.

In one of the battles, U.S. Marines defending a Central Highlands artillery outpost inflicted heavy casualties on Viet Cong raiders armed with mortar, machineguns and hand grenades.

In another, 330 miles northeast of Saigon, artillery supporting South Korean marines killed 27 soldiers out of a 300-man guerrilla force. Two other clashes in the same area resulted in another 27 enemy dead, spokesmen said.

Meanwhile, the Soviet news agency Tass reported that in recent raids U.S. airplanes have bombed every section of the North Vietnamese capital. In one case, the report said, 300 houses in a single street were "razed to the ground."

In a channel to Saigon harbor today, a U.S. Navy minesweeper was sunk when rammed by a Norwegian freighter.

New Episcopal Bishop Seated; Succeeds Pike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rt. Rev. C. Kilmer Myers today urged churchmen to work for an end "of violence, both in Vietnam and in the great cities of our land," as he was installed sixth bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California.

The former suffragan bishop of Michigan succeeded retired Bishop James A. Pike in colorful ceremonies at Grace Cathedral. Rt. Rev. John E. Hines of New York City, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States, presided.

Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken of San Francisco attended, the first chief pastor of his Roman Catholic archdiocese ever to enter an Episcopal Cathedral and occupy a throne.

PHILLIP DRATH
To North Vietnam

Drath To Join Medical Supply Trip Into North

By DAVID DIETZ

"We want to make as much fuss as possible. We want to show how much we are opposed to this terrible war, and that the people of the North need as much help as the people in the South."

So said Phillip Drath today as the unsuccessful peace candidate for Congress prepared to leave for North Vietnam with seven others to deliver medical supplies.

"We're not just pro-South; we're pro-people," he continued. "We believe in helping all people. We don't have any enemies, except war itself, poverty and ignorance."

Drath said the trip, which starts Monday with a flight from San Francisco to Tokyo, was organized by an ad hoc committee of the Society of Friends (Quakers) to which Drath belongs.

"We have been trying for some time to send medical supplies to the Red Cross in North Vietnam, but the State Department has interfered," Drath said. "So we decided to go on our own."

He reported that the society had received permission from North Vietnamese officials to enter the country, but that the group had not gotten approval from Washington.

"I don't think there's a law against it (the trip)," Drath said.

Drath said he and [illegible]race Champney, a society member from Iowa, would depart [illegible] Tokyo at 1 p.m. Monday to join six other society members in Tokyo. From there, the group will sail in a 55-foot schooner owned by a society member to Hong Kong and Haiphong, North Vietnam.

Reds Free Wortham On Bail

MOSCOW (UPI)—A Soviet court has released imprisoned American Buel Ray Wortham on bail to await appeal on his three-year conviction for blackmarketeering, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said today.

Wortham

The embassy spokesman said the Soviet Supreme Court had also granted the 25-year-old North Little Rock, Ark., youth permission to make a personal plea for freedam at a hearing expected later this month or early in February.

Wortham and a fellow American, Craddock M. Gilmour Jr., of Salt Lake City, Utah, were convicted by a Leningrad court Dec. 21 on charges of exchanging American and Finnish dollars for rubles o the black market.

Gilmour, 24, was fined $1,111, but Wortham, who was also convicted of stealing a Russian bear statue, was given three years of a possible maximum eight year sentence.

The American Embassy spokesman said that Wortham's appearance at the coming appeal hearing was the prime condition laid down when bail was granted.

Wortham was released this morning from Leningrad city jail where he has been held in solitary confinement most of the time since his arrest Oct. 1.

The spokesman said Wortham would take the overnight train to Moscow and stay at the U.S. Embassy until his appeal hearing.

The bail money was raised by his father, Buel Wortham, a North Little Rock machine operator, from a $20,000 bank loan and contributions from fellow citizens of the Arkansas town.

German Lays Wreath At Tomb

PARIS (AP) — West German Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger made a symbolic gesture today that seemed to reflect his government's hopes for a new era of good feeling with French President Charles de Gaulle's regime.

Kiesinger

The chancellor began the final day of his first official visit to Paris by laying a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier under the Arch of Triumph.

It was a gesture former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer made in the early days of Franco-German conciliation.

Kiesinger, accompanied by Foreign Minister Willy Brandt and other members of the West German delegation, stood at attention as a band played the French and German national anthems over the din of Paris traffic.

From the ceremony, Kiesinger went to the presidential palace for his final round of talks with De Gaulle.

Today marked the fourth anniversary of De Gaulle's veto of British entry into the Common Market. There was no indication that, at De Gaulle's urging, West Germany had backed away from its support of British membership in the Economic Union.

Appointment Ends Family Feud

WASHINGTON (AP)—The appointment of Undersecretary of Labor John F. Henning as ambassador to New Zealand draws the curtain on a unique Johnson administration family fight.

Henning

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, who tried to force Henning's resignation two years ago, reportedly warmly congratulated him after President Johnson announced he had selected Henning for the ambassadorship.

But since 1964, when organized labor galloped to Henning's defense and then Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg had to mediate a truce, the Wirtz-Henning relationship at best has been a kind of coexistence.

Wirtz denies the two are still "at odds" two years after the fracas and Henning won't talk about it at all.

But the climate of New Zealand is certain to be welcome to Henning after spending two years in the discomfort of being unwanted as the Labor Department's No. 2 man.

Wirtz' original reason for wanting to replace Henning reportedly was that he wanted to make his own choice of his second in command.

The two also differed on philosophical approaches to some labor matters.

Judge Sees Short Baker Trial

WASHINGTON (AP)—U. S. Dist. Judge Oliver Gasch has told jurors that the Bobby Baker trial may end much sooner than the originally predicted 2 to 2½ months.

The government announced yesterday it can conclude by the middle of next week its case against the former Senate Democratic secretary charged with tax evasion, theft and conspiracy.

Gasch then announced his "good news," as he called it, to the jury and later recessed the trial until Monday morning when he will hear arguments on a defense motion to dismiss the charges because of a government admission that it electronically eavesdropped on Baker.

Although the Justice Department confirmed that two conversations involving Baker were bugged in March 1965, it said the recordings had no connection with the indictment against him.

Two Million Year Old Bone Is Uncovered

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Man may be older than he thinks — by some 800,000 years.

Prof. Bryan Patterson, a paleontologist at Harvard University, announced the discovery Friday. Patterson said he came upon a fossilized chunk of a upper arm bone while walking near Lake Rudolph in Kenya, Africa.

"I found it about 4 p.m. on a hot afternoon lying on the surface," he said. "I saw this thing and said 'ho-hum, another damn knuckle thing.' "

A few hundred steps later, "a light went on inside my head," Patterson said, "and I thought, 'By God, this must be it.' "

It was. Special measurements showed the bone was about 2½ million years old — give or take 200,000 years.

Up to now, scientists have proof of man existing about 1,700,000 years ago. It is based on the discovery of man-like fragments in Tanzania several years ago by African paleontologist Louis Leakey.

Patterson said Leakey's discovery was called "Zinjanthropus," or the "Nutcracker Man."

After Patterson made his find in August, 1965, a Harvard computer cleared up any doubts by him and other scientists that it may have been a bone from a chimpanzee or other ape.

He said the bone structure was closer to modern man's than those of apes or even Leakey's discovery.

Prof. Ernst Mayer, director of Harvard's Museum of Comparative Zoology, said the Patterson discovery indicates that the bone is from a type of early man called "Australopithecus," believed to be in the main line of man's evolution.

Leakey's find, he said, is from a branch line of man which became extinct.

The scientists have knicknamed their find "K.H.-1" and surmise he was about five feet tall, walked erect, had humanlike teeth and possessed a small brain and large jaw.

Non-Students Defy Judge's New Order

BERKELEY (UPI)—Two nonstudent leaders of the recent University of California uprising were sought by police today because they defied a judge's "gag rule."

Michael J. Smith Jr., 25, and Stewart Albert, 26, were wanted on criminal contempt warrants.

Jerry Rubin, 28, and Steven C. Hamilton, 23, were arrested last night on the same warrants.

Municipal Court Judge George Brunn issued the arrest orders after the four men held a sidewalk news conference to discuss why they were taken into custody during the November campus crisis.

Brunn had forbade the four men, university officials and the Alameda County District Attorney's office from talking with newsmen in an attempt to guarantee a fair trial.

The "gag rule" also applied to two other non-student leaders —Mario Savio, 24, and William Miller, 25—but they did not participate in yesterday's meeting with newsmen.

When the judge heard of the four men's defiance, he said, "I do not plan to tolerate willful flouting of my order—there's no point in making court orders if people can violate them with impunity."

"The gag rule was imposed to protect the defendants," Brunn said. "At the time the defendants made no objection and, in the meantime, there has been no effort by their attorney to modify the rule."

During the news conference Rubin said he and the other defendants were being persecuted for political reasons, not for participating in the demonstration at UC.

The six men were arrested Nov. 30 on charges of trespassing and creating a public nuisance during a sit-in demonstration near a Navy recruiting table in the Student Union Building. The action touched off a student strike. They are to go on trial Monday.

Surplus Bidding

Waste lubricants and light unprepared steel scrap will be sold in a bid sale by the Defense Surplus Sales office at Hamilton Air Force Base. Bids will be opened at 1 p.m., Jan. 26, at the surplus sales office, Oakland Naval Supply Center.

Hanoi Rejects New Peace Feelers Through Cambodia

SAIGON (UPI)—The Vietnamese Communists have rejected peace feelers from western diplomats relayed through Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia, it was disclosed today.

The western diplomats were identified only as "white skinned gentlemen" by Sihanouk. He stressed, however, they were not Americans.

The disclosure came in a broadcast of a lengthy speech made by Sihanouk at the Jan. 1 opening of the 23rd Buddhist Congress in Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia.

It went unnoticed because his remarks were carried only on domestic Cambodian radio.

But according to a text of the broadcast, which was recorded and received here today, Sihanouk said the western diplomats asked him to approach Hanoi and the Viet Cong and find out if they were willing to negotiate a settlement to the Vietnam war.

"In response to their request, I have met with the North Vietnamese—that is their ministers—and I also have met with the minister of the National Liberation Front (political arm of the Viet Cong)," Sihanouk said.

"I have asked them whether they are willing to cease the struggle and accept negotiations, for I know that they have suffered a lot following the American bombing of Hanoi and other cities, killing a large number of children, women, old men and others.

"I have asked how can they fight further pain and suffering. Can they stop the fighting and accept talks?"

Sihanouk said the Communists replied in these words:

"We cannot accept negotiations, for even if there are negotiations they will not grant us independence and freedom. They will not allow us to reunify the country, that is, to reunify the north and south.

"They want negotiations in order to perpetuate the division of Vietnam with half the country belonging to them. So we cannot accept negotiations."

Four Parkways Recommended To Legislature

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The State Park Commission yesterday recommended the legislature designate four parkways totaling 177 miles.

They are a three-county Tahoe Parkway, 47 miles, from U.S. 50 at Echo Summit to Interstate 80 at Truckee; Avenue of the Giants; 38 miles, in the Humboldt County redwoods; Skyline Boulevard, 40 miles, San Mateo, Santa Clara and Santa Cruz counties, and Mulholland Drive, 52 miles, Los Angeles County.

The parkways would include turnouts to roadside picnic areas and trails for hiking, bicycling and horseback riding.

Nine Perish In Row House Fire

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A fire that engulfed a three-story row house in a ball of flame killed nine members of one family today, police said. Three others were injured or were unaccounted for, according to police.

The fire was a few blocks from Girard College in the North Philadelphia section of the city.

Marin Pair On Regional Panel

Two Marin officials will participate in a public information conference on Bay Area regional government scheduled for Jan. 28 in Phelan Hall at the University of San Francisco.

Sausalito Mayor Mel Wax will moderate a panel examining regionalization from a municipal and county viewpoint at 10 a.m. Alan Bruce, Marin County administrator, will be a panelist. The conference will last until 5 p.m.

Counsel's Office Still Operating

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The State Consumer Counsel's Office in the State Capitol is still functioning, but on a smaller scale and on a tentative basis.

Mrs. Kay Valory of Lafayette, a faithful supporter of Ronald Reagan, was appointed acting consumer counsel to succeed Helen E. Nelson of Mill Valley. Governor Reagan said she would head a study team to investigate the value of the office. During the campaign, Reagan had indicated he doubted the necessity of the office.

William Clark, cabinet secretary, announced an immediate cutback in the consumer counsel's staff that would reduce the cost of operation by $40,000 to $50,000.

Recall Of Caster Oil Is Ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Food and Drug Administration (EDA) has ordered a West Coast manufactuere to recall all shipments of castor oil after it was discovered the bottles contained poisonous camphorated oil.

The EDA said yesterday it issued the order to Howe & Co. of Seattle when a young woman was hospitalized after drinking the mislabeled product. The company distributes the oil to the states of Washington and Alaska.

Magazine Rejects Final Kennedy Plea

HAMBURG, Germany (UPI) —A West German magazine has turned down a last-ditch appeal by a close friend of Mrs. John F. Kennedy to stop serialization of an uncut version of William Manchester's controversial book, "The Death of a President."

"There is no cause for abridging or changing the manuscript," Henri Mannen, second and third parts of the series.

Stern, which has a circulation of more than two million in Germany, will publish the second installment Tuesday. Copies of the magazine are available in many U.S. cities.

be "very upset" about the plans of the German magazine to continue publishing the serialization which describes events during and after the assassination of President Kennedy in 1963.

Stern has already published the first installment of Manchester's book last week and it was sold out in two days. But the passages in the serialization said to be offensive to Mrs. Kennedy were contained in the chief editor of Stern, said last night.

He made the statement after a two-and-a-half hour meeting with William Vanden Heuvel, an attorney and close friend who flew here yesterday morning in an attempt to persuade Nannen to delete certain passages to which Mrs. Kennedy had objected.

Stern bought an unabridged version of the serialization for $72,000, but refused to cut the sections which Look magazine agreed to delete under threat of a lawsuit by the former First Lady. William Attwood, editor-in-chief of Look, also took part in Friday's talks with Nannen.

Negligence Probe Made In Big Fire

NEW YORK (AP) — Investigations were under way on several fronts today to determine if negligence led to yesterday's gas explosion and fire that leveled a Queens residential area.

City, state and county agencies began looking into statements by residents who said they were brushed off when they complained about gas odors last week to the Department of Health and the Brooklyn Union Gas Co., which services the area.

No one was injured in the fire which demolished nine frame homes and badly damaged eight others in a drab working-class neighborhood of Jamaica, Queens, about two miles north of John F. Kennedy International Airport.

Mayor John V. Lindsay ordered James Marcus, commissioner of water supply, gas and electricity, to investigate the charges. The city fire marshal's office, the State Public Service Commission and detectives from the Queens district attorney's office also were conducting separate probes.

"It is difficult to determine if serious complaints were made to the gas company in advance of the explosion and fire," Lindsay said.

About 300 people were driven from their homes.

Reagan Names License Aide

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Henry M. Shine Jr., an official of the National Assn. of Home Builders was named director of professional and vocational standards by Gov. Reagan yesterday.

Shine, 45, a Sacramento resident, assumes the $21,500 a year job Feb. 1. He is director of the home builders' National Housing Center.

His Department of Professional and Vocational Standards is in charge of licensing and regulating businesses and professions ranging from physicians to television repairmen. He replaces Harold J. (Butch) Powers.

Military Chief Begins Togo Rule

LOME, Togo (AP) — Togo's new military chief began his authoritarian rule today faced with the same conflicts which he says crippled the civil regime the army overthrew Friday.

In an interview with the Associated Press Lt. Col. Etienne Guassingbe Eyadema said it was "in the superior interest of the nation that I took over power" in the bloodless coup.

Israel Says Terrorists Explode Bomb

JERUSALEM, Israel (UPI)—Israel said today Syrian terrorists set off two explosive charges at an Israeli border water pumping station near the Lebanese frontier.

An Israeli military communique said the two charges exploded last night near the "defensive wall" of the Israeli pumping station of Dishon just one mile from the Lebanese border. The wall was slightly damaged, the communique said.

Three other explosive charges were discovered in the same area and disarmed, the communique said. The incident was the latest of numerous border clashes reported by Israel and Syria this year.

The Israeli note blamed the incident on Syria whom Israel had accused earlier this week of escalating border incidents between the two countries in a bid to infiltrate and take over demilitarized frontier zones.

This latest incident followed a two hour gun battle between Syrian and Israeli tanks, machine guns and troops Wednesday. Both were part of a series of continuing clashes during the last few months that have kept tensions high along the Syrian-Israeli frontier.

Reds Free Wortham On Bail

MOSCOW (UPI)—A Soviet court has released imprisoned American Buel Ray Wortham on bail to await appeal on his three-year conviction for blackmarketeering, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said today.

Wortham

The embassy spokesman said the Soviet Supreme Court had also granted the 25-year-old North Little Rock, Ark., youth permission to make a personal plea for freedam at a hearing expected later this month or early in February.

Wortham and a fellow American, Craddock M. Gilmour Jr., of Salt Lake City, Utah, were convicted by a Leningrad court Dec. 21 on charges of exchanging American and Finnish dollars for rubles o the black market.

Gilmour, 24, was fined $1,111, but Wortham, who was also convicted of stealing a Russian bear statue, was given three years of a possible maximum eight year sentence.

The American Embassy spokesman said that Wortham's appearance at the coming appeal hearing was the prime condition laid down when bail was granted.

Wortham was released this morning from Leningrad city jail where he has been held in solitary confinement most of the time since his arrest Oct. 1.

The spokesman said Wortham would take the overnight train to Moscow and stay at the U.S. Embassy until his appeal hearing.

The bail money was raised by his father, Buel Wortham, a North Little Rock machine operator, from a $20,000 bank loan and contributions from fellow citizens of the Arkansas town.

German Lays Wreath At Tomb

PARIS (AP) — West German Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger made a symbolic gesture today that seemed to reflect his government's hopes for a new era of good feeling with French President Charles de Gaulle's regime.

Kiesinger

The chancellor began the final day of his first official visit to Paris by laying a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier under the Arch of Triumph.

It was a gesture former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer made in the early days of Franco-German conciliation.

Kiesinger, accompanied by Foreign Minister Willy Brandt and other members of the West German delegation, stood at attention as a band played the French and German national anthems over the din of Paris traffic.

From the ceremony, Kiesinger went to the presidential palace for his final round of talks with De Gaulle.

Today marked the fourth anniversary of De Gaulle's veto of British entry into the Common Market. There was no indication that, at De Gaulle's urging, West Germany had backed away from its support of British membership in the Economic Union.

Appointment Ends Family Feud

WASHINGTON (AP)—The appointment of Undersecretary of Labor John F. Henning as ambassador to New Zealand draws the curtain on a unique Johnson administration family fight.

Henning

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, who tried to force Henning's resignation two years ago, reportedly warmly congratulated him after President Johnson announced he had selected Henning for the ambassadorship.

But since 1964, when organized labor galloped to Henning's defense and then Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg had to mediate a truce, the Wirtz-Henning relationship at best has been a kind of coexistence.

Wirtz denies the two are still "at odds" two years after the fracas and Henning won't talk about it at all.

But the climate of New Zealand is certain to be welcome to Henning after spending two years in the discomfort of being unwanted as the Labor Department's No. 2 man.

Wirtz' original reason for wanting to replace Henning reportedly was that he wanted to make his own choice of his second in command.

The two also differed on philosophical approaches to some labor matters.

Judge Sees Short Baker Trial

WASHINGTON (AP)—U. S. Dist. Judge Oliver Gasch has told jurors that the Bobby Baker trial may end much sooner than the originally predicted 2 to 2½ months.

The government announced yesterday it can conclude by the middle of next week its case against the former Senate Democratic secretary charged with tax evasion, theft and conspiracy.

Gasch then announced his "good news," as he called it, to the jury and later recessed the trial until Monday morning when he will hear arguments on a defense motion to dismiss the charges because of a government admission that it electronically eavesdropped on Baker.

Although the Justice Department confirmed that two conversations involving Baker were bugged in March 1965, it said the recordings had no connection with the indictment against him.

Two Million Year Old Bone Is Uncovered

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Man may be older than he thinks — by some 800,000 years.

Prof. Bryan Patterson, a paleontologist at Harvard University, announced the discovery Friday. Patterson said he came upon a fossilized chunk of a upper arm bone while walking near Lake Rudolph in Kenya, Africa.

"I found it about 4 p.m. on a hot afternoon lying on the surface," he said. "I saw this thing and said 'ho-hum, another damn knuckle thing.' "

A few hundred steps later, "a light went on inside my head," Patterson said, "and I thought, 'By God, this must be it.' "

It was. Special measurements showed the bone was about 2½ million years old — give or take 200,000 years.

Up to now, scientists have proof of man existing about 1,700,000 years ago. It is based on the discovery of man-like fragments in Tanzania several years ago by African paleontologist Louis Leakey.

Patterson said Leakey's discovery was called "Zinjanthropus," or the "Nutcracker Man."

After Patterson made his find in August, 1965, a Harvard computer cleared up any doubts by him and other scientists that it may have been a bone from a chimpanzee or other ape.

He said the bone structure was closer to modern man's than those of apes or even Leakey's discovery.

Prof. Ernst Mayer, director of Harvard's Museum of Comparative Zoology, said the Patterson discovery indicates that the bone is from a type of early man called "Australopithecus," believed to be in the main line of man's evolution.

Leakey's find, he said, is from a branch line of man which became extinct.

The scientists have knicknamed their find "K.H.-1" and surmise he was about five feet tall, walked erect, had human-like teeth and possessed a small brain and large jaw.

Non-Students Defy Judge's New Order

BERKELEY (UPI)—Two non-student leaders of the recent University of California uprising were sought by police today because they defied a judge's "gag rule."

Michael J. Smith Jr., 25, and Stewart Albert, 26, were wanted on criminal contempt warrants.

Jerry Rubin, 28, and Steven C. Hamilton, 23, were arrested last night on the same warrants.

Municipal Court Judge George Brunn issued the arrest orders after the four men held a sidewalk news conference to discuss why they were taken into custody during the November campus crisis.

Brunn had forbade the four men, university officials and the Alameda County District Attorney's office from talking with newsmen in an attempt to guarantee a fair trial.

The "gag rule" also applied to two other non-student leaders —Mario Savio, 24, and William Miller, 25—but they did not participate in yesterday's meeting with newsmen.

When the judge heard of the four men's defiance, he said, "I do not plan to tolerate willful flouting of my order—there's no point in making court orders if people can violate them with impunity."

"The gag rule was imposed to protect the defendants," Brunn said. "At the time the defendants made no objection and, in the meantime, there has been no effort by their attorney to modify the rule."

During the news conference Rubin said he and the other defendants were being persecuted for political reasons, not for participating in the demonstration at UC.

The six men were arrested Nov. 30 on charges of trespassing and creating a public nuisance during a sit-in demonstration near a Navy recruiting table in the Student Union Building. The action touched off a student strike. They are to go on trial Monday.

Surplus Bidding

Waste lubricants and light unprepared steel scrap will be sold in a bid sale by the Defense Surplus Sales office at Hamilton Air Force Base. Bids will be opened at 1 p.m., Jan. 26, at the surplus sales office, Oakland Naval Supply Center.

Hanoi Rejects New Peace Feelers Through Cambodia

SAIGON (UPI)—The Vietnamese Communists have rejected peace feelers from western diplomats relayed through Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia, it was disclosed today.

The western diplomats were identified only as "white skinned gentlemen" by Sihanouk. He stressed, however, they were not Americans.

The disclosure came in a broadcast of a lengthy speech made by Sihanouk at the Jan. 1 opening of the 23rd Buddhist Congress in Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia.

It went unnoticed because his remarks were carried only on domestic Cambodian radio.

But according to a text of the broadcast, which was recorded and received here today, Sihanouk said the western diplomats asked him to approach Hanoi and the Viet Cong and find out if they were willing to negotiate a settlement to the Vietnam war.

"In response to their request, I have met with the North Vietnamese—that is their ministers—and I also have met with the minister of the National Liberation Front (political arm of the Viet Cong)," Sihanouk said.

"I have asked them whether they are willing to cease the struggle and accept negotiations, for I know that they have suffered a lot following the American bombing of Hanoi and other cities, killing a large number of children, women, old men and others.

"I have asked how can they fight further pain and suffering. Can they stop the fighting and accept talks?"

Sihanouk said the Communists replied in these words:

"We cannot accept negotiations, for even if there are negotiations they will not grant us independence and freedom. They will not allow us to reunify the country, that is, to reunify the north and south.

"They want negotiations in order to perpetuate the division of Vietnam with half the country belonging to them. So we cannot accept negotiations."

Four Parkways Recommended To Legislature

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The State Park Commission yesterday recommended the legislature designate four parkways totaling 177 miles.

They are a three-county Tahoe Parkway, 47 miles, from U.S. 50 at Echo Summit to Interstate 80 at Truckee; Avenue of the Giants; 38 miles, in the Humboldt County redwoods; Skyline Boulevard, 40 miles, San Mateo, Santa Clara and Santa Cruz counties, and Mulholland Drive, 52 miles, Los Angeles County.

The parkways would include turnouts to roadside picnic areas and trails for hiking, bicycling and horseback riding.

Nine Perish In Row House Fire

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A fire that engulfed a three-story row house in a ball of flame killed nine members of one family today, police said. Three others were injured or were unaccounted for, according to police.

The fire was a few blocks from Girard College in the North Philadelphia section of the city.

Marin Pair On Regional Panel

Two Marin officials will participate in a public information conference on Bay Area regional government scheduled for Jan. 28 in Phelan Hall at the University of San Francisco.

Sausalito Mayor Mel Wax will moderate a panel examining regionalization from a municipal and county viewpoint at 10 a.m. Alan Bruce, Marin County administrator, will be a panelist. The conference will last until 5 p.m.

Counsel's Office Still Operating

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The State Consumer Counsel's Office in the State Capitol is still functioning, but on a smaller scale and on a tentative basis.

Mrs. Kay Valory of Lafayette, a faithful supporter of Ronald Reagan, was appointed acting consumer counsel to succeed Helen E. Nelson of Mill Valley. Governor Reagan said she would head a study team to investigate the value of the office. During the campaign, Reagan had indicated he doubted the necessity of the office.

William Clark, cabinet secretary, announced an immediate cutback in the consumer counsel's staff that would reduce the cost of operation by $40,000 to $50,000.

Recall Of Caster Oil Is Ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Food and Drug Administration (EDA) has ordered a West Coast manufactuere to recall all shipments of castor oil after it was discovered the bottles contained poisonous camphorated oil.

The EDA said yesterday it issued the order to Howe & Co. of Seattle when a young woman was hospitalized after drinking the mislabeled product. The company distributes the oil to the states of Washington and Alaska.

Magazine Rejects Final Kennedy Plea

HAMBURG, Germany (UPI) —A West German magazine has turned down a last-ditch appeal by a close friend of Mrs. John F. Kennedy to stop serialization of an uncut version of William Manchester's controversial book, "The Death of a President."

"There is no cause for abridging or changing the manuscript," Henri Mannen, second and third parts of the series.

Stern, which has a circulation of more than two million in Germany, will publish the second installment Tuesday. Copies of the magazine are available in many U.S. cities.
be "very upset" about the plans of the German magazine to continue publishing the serialization which describes events during and after the assassination of President Kennedy in 1963.

Stern has already published the first installment of Manchester's book last week and it was sold out in two days. But the passages in the serialization said to be offensive to Mrs. Kennedy were contained in the chief editor of Stern, said last night.

He made the statement after a two-and-a-half hour meeting with William Vanden Heuvel, an attorney and close friend who flew here yesterday morning in an attempt to persuade Nannen to delete certain passages to which Mrs. Kennedy had objected.

Stern bought an unabridged version of the serialization for $72,000, but refused to cut the sections which Look magazine agreed to delete under threat of a lawsuit by the former First Lady. William Attwood, editor-in-chief of Look, also took part in Friday's talks with Nannen.

Negligence Probe Made In Big Fire

NEW YORK (AP) — Investigations were under way on several fronts today to determine if negligence led to yesterday's gas explosion and fire that leveled a Queens residential area.

City, state and county agencies began looking into statements by residents who said they were brushed off when they complained about gas odors last week to the Department of Health and the Brooklyn Union Gas Co., which services the area.

No one was injured in the fire which demolished nine frame homes and badly damaged eight others in a drab working-class neighborhood of Jamaica, Queens, about two miles north of John F. Kennedy International Airport.

Mayor John V. Lindsay ordered James Marcus, commissioner of water supply, gas and electricity, to investigate the charges. The city fire marshal's office, the State Public Service Commission and detectives from the Queens district attorney's office also were conducting separate probes.

"It is difficult to determine if serious complaints were made to the gas company in advance of the explosion and fire," Lindsay said.

About 300 people were driven from their homes.

Reagan Names License Aide

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Henry M. Shine Jr., an official of the National Assn. of Home Builders was named director of professional and vocational standards by Gov. Reagan yesterday.

Shine, 45, a Sacramento resident, assumes the $21,500 a year job Feb. 1. He is director of the home builders' National Housing Center.

His Department of Professional and Vocational Standards is in charge of licensing and regulating businesses and professions ranging from physicians to television repairmen. He replaces Harold J. (Butch) Powers.

Military Chief Begins Togo Rule

LOME, Togo (AP) — Togo's new military chief began his authoritarian rule today faced with the same conflicts which he says crippled the civil regime the army overthrew Friday.

In an interview with the Associated Press Lt. Col. Etienne Guassingbe Eyadema said it was "in the superior interest of the nation that I took over power" in the bloodless coup.

Israel Says Terrorists Explode Bomb

JERUSALEM, Israel (UPI)—Israel said today Syrian terrorists set off two explosive charges at an Israeli border water pumping station near the Lebanese frontier.

An Israeli military communique said the two charges exploded last night near the "defensive wall" of the Israeli pumping station of Dishon just one mile from the Lebanese border. The wall was slightly damaged, the communique said.

Three other explosive charges were discovered in the same area and disarmed, the communique said. The incident was the latest of numerous border clashes reported by Israel and Syria this year.

The Israeli note blamed the incident on Syria whom Israel had accused earlier this week of escalating border incidents between the two countries in a bid to infiltrate and take over demilitarized frontier zones.

This latest incident followed a two hour gun battle between Syrian and Israeli tanks, machine guns and troops Wednesday. Both were part of a series of continuing clashes during the last few months that have kept tensions high along the Syrian-Israeli frontier.

SUPER SERPENT OF CEMENT

What with Super Bowls, super-stars and Supermen, children in San Rafael's recreation program for tots were delighted to tackle the job of fashioning a "super" serpent in Santa Margarita Valley Park off Del Ganado Road. It's 20 feet long and pink in color. Suzanne Cutler (on ground), seemingly was explaining a construction problem to Laura Mogerman, Mary Anne Cutcher and Karen Mayer, (left to right). 50th Wedding Anniversary Is Celebrated By Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Ballantyne of San Rafael yesterday observed 50 years of married life that has spanned a continent and two long careers.

Their formula for happiness for any young couple planning marriage, according to Mrs. Ballantyne, is to be found in one's attitude rather than material things: "Contentment and being able to look on the bright side of life."

Ballantyne, a native of Denver, met his wife, who was born in Arlington, Mass., in Hoboken, N.J., where she was a proofreader for a printing company and he a conductor on the Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad.

He remained with the railroad for over 40 years, retiring in 1953, when they moved to Marin County to be near their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Mervyn L. Bain of San Rafael and granddaughter Janet Bain.

On coming to Marin, Mrs. Ballantyne continued her career as a proofreader, joining Phillips and Van Orden of San Francisco, printers of telephone books, like her employers in Hoboken. She retired about 10 years ago.

Ballantyne, 78, and Mrs. Ballantyne, 70, are in the best of health, "just enjoying each day as it comes and taking occasional trips" from their home at 124 Merrydale Road.

Last night they celebrated their anniversary at a dinner at Sabella's Restaurant with the Bains and Mrs. Gladys Lowney of San Anselmo, Mrs. Ballantyne's sister.

peared in Peking last night, said President Liu had defended his sending of "work teams" about the country last year.

CONFESSION

Posters put up by Mao's Red Guard supporters last December said Liu had confessed at a Central Committee meeting in October to dispatching work teams opposed to Mao's purge while Mao was absent from Peking for about 50 days before last July 18.

The 68-year-old Liu, Mao's comrade in arms and close adviser during the Chinese Communist revolution, had been considered Mao's successor before the purge developed last summer. Lin Piao is now thought to be Mao's heir.

Running Halts At A Drive-In

The running stopped for Barkwan Chang in a drive-in eating place at Ignacio.

The Chinese restaurant worker was found asleep in a car Thursday and could speeak no English when questioned by sheriff's deputy Ted Hughes.

Chang was brought to the main office and, through an interpreter, said he had entered the United States illegally through Mexicali, Mexico, a year ago and had been on the run ever since.

He worked in Chinese restaurants until he was forced to move on for fear of being found out, reported Hughes. Chang was handed over to the immigration authorities for questioning.

Colored Paint Is The Best

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI)—Tinted or colored paint used on exterior wood withstands weathering much better than white paint, 16 years of experiments at the Pennsylvania State University indicate.

In the long-range tests, reserchers found that when repainting with tinted or colored paints, single-coat applications usually are sufficient. Two coats were needed when using exterior white paints.

Oscar A. Kimmel, assistant professor of farm mechanics, says repainting of exterior wood is most effective if it is done just before film cracks develop. The trick here, he adds, is to watch closely for first signs of cracks and repaint as promptly as possible.

Eric Jarvis, 18, of 412 Bee Street, Sausalito, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with head injuries suffered Thursday when he fell from a car in the 1700 Block of Bridgeway.

Exchange Student's Interest In U.S. Comes From His Father

Michele (Mike) Tucci, American Field Service Exchange student from Italy at Tamalpais High School, first became interested in the United States when his father told him of the kindness of an American sergeant who captured him in 1943.

"The sergeant who captured him promised that, when he reached Rome, he would inform his parents about my father's condition," Mike said. "So it happened. The sergeant, when he reached Rome in 1944, after one year, brought my grandparents the first news about my father.

"The event struck me very much," said the 18-year-old Roman.

A frank admirer of America "for the solidarity that the states showed other people, especially during and after World War II," he observed that "human dignity" survives science and technology in the United States. He wants to be a nuclear physicist.

Speaking with animated gestures, Mike said he was surprised to find his favorite food in America is Chinese. Italian dishes, of course, share the spotlight with Chinese. He enjoys American pizza because it is not so heavily laced with cheese as the Roman version.

His hosts during the year are the J. Stanley Woodwards of 30 Ashford Avenue, Mill Valley. The most exciting facet of his visit, Mike said, is having an "American brother," Steven Woodward, also 18 and a senior at Tam. The other Woodward children are Claudia, 16, Joan, 12, and Barbara, 14.

At home in Rome are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rodolfo Tucci, and two sisters, Roberta, 16, and Silvia, 5. His father is vice director of the city's central telephone exchange.

Mike said it was difficult to imagine what living here would be like, but since his arrival in September he feels "America and my Mill Valley family are so wonderful, I plan to return in two years to study at the University of California." Under terms of the exchange program, he cannot return to the United States for two years.

Mike particularly likes the variety of classes at Tam in contrast to the more formal education of his Italian school, which allowed little time for relaxation or extra-curricular activities. Despite his devotion to physics, he enjoys all sports, including skin diving, wrestling and hunting. And he likes the Beatles.

"Italian opera?" He grinned, "well, I would say no. There is something about the beat, I believe."

Mike enthusiastically recalled Christmas, "but the nativity scene in music and thought is more prominent in our Christmas celebration."

Mrs. William Pemberton of Mill Valley, president of the American Field Service chapter at Tam, recalled that Mike spoke very little English when he arrived in the fall, "but has learned amazingly well."

"It is still not easy," Mike said, "even though I do better in the morning than in the evening." He studied English for six years in Rome.

"Brother" Steve Woodward said Mike talks in his sleep in rapid-fire Italian, and observed that if he could stay awake long enough, he would be able to learn Italian by just listening to Mike's colorful nocturnal conversations.

"In the American life, I especially like the ideals of freedom that are present in every display of American people," Mike said. "As other people in the world, Italians owe today's prosperity to the help of the United States."

explanation was that her husband had interrupted a prowler who was on the point of breaking into a house he thought empty. "I can see no other reason for the attack," she said. "My husband is not a playboy. He stays out only occasionally to entertain business friends.

"We have been going over it time after time to try and discover someone, somewhere who might have had a grudge against him. We have come up with nothing.

"He is in a competitive business but even his rivals were the first to call up to ask how he was," she said.

The couple have one son, William, who lives in San Francisco. His two children, aged six and nine, were staying with their grandparents at the time but were not awakened by the attack.

Sheriff's deputies found a 21-inch long pipe fashioned with a handle of iron, but Inspector A. V. Menjou, in charge of the investigation, said he was not sure if this was used as a weapon in the attack.

Menjou said today: "The case is still under investigation. We have put quite a lot of time in on this and the work is still going on."

Asked if he was any nearer solving the identity of the attacker, he said: "I can't make any comment on that at this stage."

The Atwoods are well-known at the Loch Lomond Yacht Harbor where they have kept a boat since moving into their nearby home about 18 months ago.

Atwood's physician at Marin General Hospital, Dr. J. Alderson, told him yesterday he could expect to be discharged about next Wednesday.

Meanwhile, his wife said she will have a private detective keeping watch at the house in case the attacker decides to return.

Drath, a San Rafael building contractor, who ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic nomination in the First Congressional District last June, said an early March arrival in North Vietnam is planned. He hoped about $25,000 in medical supplies could be purchased in Japan for delivery.

Drath said the group hoped to set up a Quaker relief mission in North Vietnam upon arrival.

He revealed plans to continue around the world after leaving North Vietnam to speak in principal cities against the war.

Woman Taken To Hospital

A 65-year-old San Rafael woman was taken to Marin General Hospital yesterday after she was found unconscious in her home from a possible overdose of drugs, police said.

A housemaid and a pool service employee found Mrs. Evelyn McIlwaine lying in a her bed at 22 Kinross Drive about 8:45 a.m. Police found a bottle of drugs on a bed table.

She was reported in good condition today in the hospital.

Agenda Includes Liaison Report

Liaison between Fairfax City Council and city commissions will be discussed at an adjourned meeting of the city council Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Women's Club.

The meeting will begin with a closed session to interview applicants for the design review board. Appointment of members to the park and recreation commission to fill unexpired vacancies will be announced.

Plea Entry Set On Auto Theft

Clarice Linda Trowbridge, 27, of San Pablo, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on a felony charge of stealing a car owned by Avis Rent-A-Car in San Rafael last Sept 29.

She was arrested by San Rafael police yesterday, and will enter her plea at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Purse Is Stolen

Someone took $40 from her purse while she was out with the children at recess, Rita Marie Laherty, 36, fifth grade teacher at Hamilton School on Hamilton Air Force Base, reported Thursday to Novato police.

OBITUARIES

Walter D. Mann Dies At Age 82

Walter D. Mann, retired electrician and a resident of Marin for 75 of his 82 years, died yesterday at a local hospital after a lengthy illness.

A native of San Francisco, he came to this county with his parents in 1889 and attended the old grammar school on Mission Avenue at B Street, later going on to San Rafael High School.

He worked for the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. for 50 years, retiring about 20 years ago. Mann, a widower, lived at 915 Irwin Street.

He is survived by a son, Walter Mann of San Rafael; three stepdaughters, Mae Morrissey of San Francisco and Gertrude Venitz and Myrtle Valle of San Rafael; five grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

The Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael.

Requiem Mass will be offered at 9:30 a.m. Monday at St. Raphael's Church, San Rafael. Burial will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

AMY E. DIAMOND

Amy E. Dimond, 70, of 54 Hillsdale Avenue, San Anselmo, died in a local hospital yesterday after a month's illness.

A native of Chicago, Ill., Mrs. Dimond lived in San Francisco before moving to Marin County about 15 years ago.

Her husband, Arthur Dimond, is a retired liquor store manager.

Mrs. Dimond is survived by her husband; a daughter, Mrs. Marion E. Jinks of San Anselmo, and four grandchildren.

SUPER SERPENT OF CEMENT

What with Super Bowls, super-stars and Supermen, children in San Rafael's recreation program for tots were delighted to tackle the job of fashioning a "super" serpent in Santa Margarita Valley Park off Del Ganado Road. It's 20 feet long and pink in color. Suzanne Cutler (on ground), seemingly was explaining a construction problem to Laura Mogerman, Mary Anne Cutcher and Karen Mayer, (left to right). In background, Brian Cuneo, (left) and Bobby Hoffman worked while the women dwadled. Scott Tilden, city parks landscape architect, designed the serpent. (Independent-Journal photo by Bob Hax.)

50th Wedding Anniversary Is Celebrated By Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Ballantyne of San Rafael yesterday observed 50 years of married life that has spanned a continent and two long careers.

Their formula for happiness for any young couple planning marriage, according to Mrs. Ballantyne, is to be found in one's attitude rather than material things: "Contentment and being able to look on the bright side of life."

Ballantyne, a native of Denver, met his wife, who was born in Arlington, Mass., in Hoboken, N.J., where she was a proofreader for a printing company and he a conductor on the Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad.

He remained with the railroad for over 40 years, retiring in 1953, when they moved to Marin County to be near their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Mervyn L. Bain of San Rafael and granddaughter Janet Bain.

On coming to Marin, Mrs. Ballantyne continued her career as a proofreader, joining Phillips and Van Orden of San Francisco, printers of telephone books, like her employers in Hoboken. She retired about 10 years ago.

Ballantyne, 78, and Mrs. Ballantyne, 70, are in the best of health, "just enjoying each day as it comes and taking occasional trips" from their home at 124 Merrydale Road.

Last night they celebrated their anniversary at a dinner at Sabella's Restaurant with the Bains and Mrs. Gladys Lowney of San Anselmo, Mrs. Ballantyne's sister.

peared in Peking last night, said President Liu had defended his sending of "work teams" about the country last year.

CONFESSION

Posters put up by Mao's Red Guard supporters last December said Liu had confessed at a Central Committee meeting in October to dispatching work teams opposed to Mao's purge while Mao was absent from Peking for about 50 days before last July 18.

The 68-year-old Liu, Mao's comrade in arms and close adviser during the Chinese Communist revolution, had been considered Mao's successor before the purge developed last summer. Lin Piao is now thought to be Mao's heir.

Running Halts At A Drive-In

The running stopped for Barkwan Chang in a drive-in eating place at Ignacio.

The Chinese restaurant worker was found asleep in a car Thursday and could speeak no English when questioned by sheriff's deputy Ted Hughes.

Chang was brought to the main office and, through an interpreter, said he had entered the United States illegally through Mexicali, Mexico, a year ago and had been on the run ever since.

He worked in Chinese restaurants until he was forced to move on for fear of being found out, reported Hughes. Chang was handed over to the immigration authorities for questioning.

Colored Paint Is The Best

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI)—Tinted or colored paint used on exterior wood withstands weathering much better than white paint, 16 years of experiments at the Pennsylvania State University indicate.

In the long-range tests, reserchers found that when repainting with tinted or colored paints, single-coat applications usually are sufficient. Two coats were needed when using exterior white paints.

Oscar A. Kimmel, assistant professor of farm mechanics, says repainting of exterior wood is most effective if it is done just before film cracks develop. The trick here, he adds, is to watch closely for first signs of cracks and repaint as promptly as possible.

Falls From Car

Eric Jarvis, 18, of 412 Bee Street, Sausalito, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with head injuries suffered Thursday when he fell from a car in the 1700 Block of Bridgeway.

Exchange Student's Interest In U.S. Comes From His Father

Michele (Mike) Tucci, American Field Service Exchange student from Italy at Tamalpais High School, first became interested in the United States when his father told him of the kindness of an American sergeant who captured him in 1943.

"The sergeant who captured him promised that, when he reached Rome, he would inform his parents about my father's condition," Mike said. "So it happened. The sergeant, when he reached Rome in 1944, after one year, brought my grandparents the first news about my father.

"The event struck me very much," said the 18-year-old Roman.

A frank admirer of America "for the solidarity that the states showed other people, especially during and after World War II," he observed that "human dignity" survives science and technology in the United States. He wants to be a nuclear physicist.

Speaking with animated gestures, Mike said he was surprised to find his favorite food in America is Chinese. Italian dishes, of course, share the spotlight with Chinese. He enjoys American pizza because it is not so heavily laced with cheese as the Roman version.

His hosts during the year are the J. Stanley Woodwards of 30 Ashford Avenue, Mill Valley. The most exciting facet of his visit, Mike said, is having an "American brother," Steven Woodward, also 18 and a senior at Tam. The other Woodward children are Claudia, 16, Joan, 12, and Barbara, 14.

At home in Rome are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rodolfo Tucci, and two sisters, Roberta, 16, and Silvia, 5. His father is vice director of the city's central telephone exchange.

Mike said it was difficult to imagine what living here would be like, but since his arrival in September he feels "America and my Mill Valley family are so wonderful, I plan to return in two years to study at the University of California." Under terms of the exchange program, he cannot return to the United States for two years.

Mike particularly likes the variety of classes at Tam in contrast to the more formal education of his Italian school, which allowed little time for relaxation or extra-curricular activities. Despite his devotion to physics, he enjoys all sports, including skin diving, wrestling and hunting. And he likes the Beatles.

"Italian opera?" He grinned, "well, I would say no. There is something about the beat, I believe."

Mike enthusiastically recalled Christmas, "but the nativity scene in music and thought is more prominent in our Christmas celebration."

Mrs. William Pemberton of Mill Valley, president of the American Field Service chapter at Tam, recalled that Mike spoke very little English when he arrived in the fall, "but has learned amazingly well."

"It is still not easy," Mike said, "even though I do better in the morning than in the evening." He studied English for six years in Rome.

"Brother" Steve Woodward said Mike talks in his sleep in rapid-fire Italian, and observed that if he could stay awake long enough, he would be able to learn Italian by just listening to Mike's colorful nocturnal conversations.

"In the American life, I especially like the ideals of freedom that are present in every display of American people," Mike said. "As other people in the world, Italians owe today's prosperity to the help of the United States."

explanation was that her husband had interrupted a prowler who was on the point of breaking into a house he thought empty. "I can see no other reason for the attack," she said. "My husband is not a playboy. He stays out only occasionally to entertain business friends.

"We have been going over it time after time to try and discover someone, somewhere who might have had a grudge against him. We have come up with nothing.

"He is in a competitive business but even his rivals were the first to call up to ask how he was," she said.

The couple have one son, William, who lives in San Francisco. His two children, aged six and nine, were staying with their grandparents at the time but were not awakened by the attack.

Sheriff's deputies found a 21-inch long pipe fashioned with a handle of iron, but Inspector A. V. Menjou, in charge of the investigation, said he was not sure if this was used as a weapon in the attack.

Menjou said today: "The case is still under investigation. We have put quite a lot of time in on this and the work is still going on."

Asked if he was any nearer solving the identity of the attacker, he said: "I can't make any comment on that at this stage."

The Atwoods are well-known at the Loch Lomond Yacht Harbor where they have kept a boat since moving into their nearby home about 18 months ago.

Atwood's physician at Marin General Hospital, Dr. J. Alderson, told him yesterday he could expect to be discharged about next Wednesday.

Meanwhile, his wife said she will have a private detective keeping watch at the house in case the attacker decides to return.

Reynolds, a visiting professor of anthropology at Hiroshima Women's College. The group will help Reynolds prepare the vessel for the trip, Drath said.

Drath, a San Rafael building contractor, who ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic nomination in the First Congressional District last June, said an early March arrival in North Vietnam is planned. He hoped about $25,000 in medical supplies could be purchased in Japan for delivery.

Drath said the group hoped to set up a Quaker relief mission in North Vietnam upon arrival.

He revealed plans to continue around the world after leaving North Vietnam to speak in principal cities against the war.

Woman Taken To Hospital

A 65-year-old San Rafael woman was taken to Marin General Hospital yesterday after she was found unconscious in her home from a possible overdose of drugs, police said.

A housemaid and a pool service employee found Mrs. Evelyn McIlwaine lying in a her bed at 22 Kinross Drive about 8:45 a.m. Police found a bottle of drugs on a bed table.

She was reported in good condition today in the hospital.

Agenda Includes Liaison Report

Liaison between Fairfax City Council and city commissions will be discussed at an adjourned meeting of the city council Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Women's Club.

The meeting will begin with a closed session to interview applicants for the design review board. Appointment of members to the park and recreation commission to fill unexpired vacancies will be announced.

Plea Entry Set On Auto Theft

Clarice Linda Trowbridge, 27, of San Pablo, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on a felony charge of stealing a car owned by Avis Rent-A-Car in San Rafael last Sept 29.

She was arrested by San Rafael police yesterday, and will enter her plea at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Purse Is Stolen

Someone took $40 from her purse while she was out with the children at recess, Rita Marie Laherty, 36, fifth grade teacher at Hamilton School on Hamilton Air Force Base, reported Thursday to Novato police.

Chiropractor Asks Entry In Medicare

CHICAGO (UPI)—The president of the International Chiropractors Assn. (ICA) has asked that his field be included in the federal government's Medicare program.

L. W. Rutherford, D. C., of Eugene, Ore., said yesterday, "The Medicare program should be expanded to include all legally recognized health professions." This, he said, included chiropody.

He chided the American Medical Assn., which is opposed to chiropractic as "an unscientific cult," for its opposition to Medicare.

"Not being able to stop it (Medicare), they now embrace it as their own and attempt to dictate its terms and course as if they had been its godfather," Rutherford said. "How short and fickle do they think is memory?"

As opening speaker at the first annual National Congress on Chiropractic, Rutherford said, "Chiropractic services should be included in all state and federal hospitals. This most certainly should include chiropractic care for our veterans." He said his group believes "that the basic right of each individual is his freedom of choice of health care."

The two-day meeting was called by the ICA to "present to the public, eminent educators, governmental dignitaries and thought leaders from other professional groups a candid appraisal of chiropractic today."

RETIRES—Edward C. Ward has retired as foreman of the Electric Shop at Hamilton Air Force Base after 30 years. He has seen the base develop from a small bomber base to the center of West Coast defense. He played a major role in developing modern "strobe" runway lighting at Hamilton. He and his wife, Mary, live at 351 Forbes Avenue, San Rafael.

Police Guard Another In Wilson Case

BERKELEY (AP)—Police are guarding a second woman linked with the Painters Union, two of whose officials were killed by shotgun blasts last year.

She is Margaret A. Miller, 46, Berkeley, editor of the Bay Area Painters News.

She said she received a death threat at her home Wednesday. She called it an attempt to prevent publication of the paper which she called "a very effective voice for the reform movement in the Painters Union."

She was named editor by Dow Wilson, San Francisco Painters Union leader before he wa mowed down by a shotgun last spring.

Mrs. Miller said a telephoned threat recalled "what happened to Mrs. Ward" and warned Mrs. Miller "is next."

Mrs. Max Ward of Hayward, wife of the triggerman in the union murders, was the target of a shotgun blast Sunday. It missed. She has been under police guard since. Mrs. Ward is scheduled to be a witness in the murder trial under way in San Francisco of Ben Rasnick of Oakland, an international representative of the union.

Cash Box Looted

Burglars pried open a tin section of the National Auto Glass Co. office at 915 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael, Wednesday night and stole $100 from a metal cash box inside a filing cabinet, manager Robert Zifko told police Thursday.

Looking Eastward From Marin To Mount Diablo

The hills of Marin look eastward to the hills of Contra Costa County, where Mount Diablo, rival in majesty to Mount Tamalpais, towers above all around it. Joining the two counties is the slender thread of the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge. The long and populous valley leading to the heart of the scene holds Greenbrae, Ross, San Anselmo and Fairfax. To the left of Ross Valley is the more gently rolling landscape of Terra Linda. San Rafael lies partially hidden behind its screen of hills, beyond which can be seen San Pedro Point jutting into the Bay. In the upper right, Tiburon Peninsula reaches out to form Richardson Bay, and points at Angel Island just across Raccoon Strait. (Photo by Areo Photographers of Sausalito)

RETIRES—Edward C. Ward has retired as foreman of the Electric Shop at Hamilton Air Force Base after 30 years. He has seen the base develop from a small bomber base to the center of West Coast defense. He played a major role in developing modern "strobe" runway lighting at Hamilton. He and his wife, Mary, live at 351 Forbes Avenue, San Rafael.

Police Guard Another In Wilson Case

BERKELEY (AP)—Police are guarding a second woman linked with the Painters Union, two of whose officials were killed by shotgun blasts last year.

She is Margaret A. Miller, 46, Berkeley, editor of the Bay Area Painters News.

She said she received a death threat at her home Wednesday. She called it an attempt to prevent publication of the paper which she called "a very effective voice for the reform movement in the Painters Union."

She was named editor by Dow Wilson, San Francisco Painters Union leader before he wa mowed down by a shotgun last spring.

Mrs. Miller said a telephoned threat recalled "what happened to Mrs. Ward" and warned Mrs. Miller "is next."

Mrs. Max Ward of Hayward, wife of the triggerman in the union murders, was the target of a shotgun blast Sunday. It missed. She has been under police guard since. Mrs. Ward is scheduled to be a witness in the murder trial under way in San Francisco of Ben Rasnick of Oakland, an international representative of the union.

Cash Box Looted

Burglars pried open a tin section of the National Auto Glass Co. office at 915 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael, Wednesday night and stole $100 from a metal cash box inside a filing cabinet, manager Robert Zifko told police Thursday.

Looking Eastward From Marin To Mount Diablo

The hills of Marin look eastward to the hills of Contra Costa County, where Mount Diablo, rival in majesty to Mount Tamalpais, towers above all around it. Joining the two counties is the slender thread of the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge. The long and populous valley leading to the heart of the scene holds Greenbrae, Ross, San Anselmo and Fairfax. To the left of Ross Valley is the more gently rolling landscape of Terra Linda. San Rafael lies partially hidden behind its screen of hills, beyond which can be seen San Pedro Point jutting into the Bay. In the upper right, Tiburon Peninsula reaches out to form Richardson Bay, and points at Angel Island just across Raccoon Strait. (Photo by Areo Photographers of Sausalito)

"I have had great success with the Independent Want Ads for many years. Selling things, getting housekeepers and now, the VERY FIRST CALL and I sold my dog."

BEST-SELLER WANT ADS

WHY BUY NOW?

Just So Much Land Available

There are approximately 57,230,000 square miles of land surface on this old earth. And of that there is just so much for Marin County home sites. Land values through the years have increased as roads and highways improve.

Increased Population

By 1970 over half of the population of the United States will be under 25. Some experts predict the population is going to increase by an estimated 100 million people during the next 30 years. Where are they all going to live?

3.

More People in Home Buying Bracket

The age group which buys the largest number of single family homes is from 30 to 34. Many good buys in existing homes are on the market now and the so-called "tight money" has not materially affected buyers applying for FHA, GI or VA loans.

A Hedge Against Inflation

Many economists agree that buying a home is a great hedge against possible inflation. Instead of spending money you are investing it. You also enjoy the pride and joy of ownership of the home that reflects your way of life.

Tax Deductions

When you buy a home you can deduct from your income tax return every penny you pay in interest on your home loan. This can be a sizable deduction. You are not able to deduct rent receipts though.

Wage Increases Reflected in Building Costs

Whenever skilled labor receives an increase in wages these increases, in one way or another, are passed along to the consumers. This holds true for wage increases for unskilled labor and for those receiving the minimum wage.

Trend of Interest Rates

Over the past several months interest rates have inched up. They may stabilize although some expect them to climb. At the moment they may be lower than they will be later on.

Good Buys Are on the Market Now

New real estate becomes available every day as family situations change by expansion, transfer or death. If your credit standing is good let your real estate broker help you explore the various financing means which are available today.

Study Body Campaigning For Officers

Campaigning for student body and class offices at San Rafael High School was in full swing today, with elections scheduled next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Seventy students have been nominated for office. All will be introduced to the entire school Monday in the gymnasium at 10:50 a.m., when candidates for student body office will make their speeches.

Balloting will be in the noon hour on both days, in room 108 for seniors; room 217 for juniors; room 204 for freshmen and room 109 for sophomores. Results will be posted late Wednesday, with run-off elections — if necessary — slated for the noon hour, in the same rooms, on Jan. 19 and 20.

Candidates for office are:

SENIOR CLASS: president: Kersey Clausen, Craig Pagelow; vice president: Robert Ryan; secretary-treasurer: Debra McLain; director of social affairs: Cynthia Jensen.

Congress: Kersey Clausen, Steven Hauge, John Houston, Edward Johnston, Rodney Lame, Patricia Langlais, Robert Maglione, Donald Timmer, Peter Tupas.

JUNIOR CLASS: president: Val Clayton, Peter Carpou, William Hamilton, Paul Kent; vice president: Herbert Rowland; secretary-treasurer: Shelly Hecht;

Congress: John Buehler, Peter Carpou, William Ceglarz, William Hamilton, Christine O'Kane, Patricia Peterson, Dawn Powlan, Nancy Pridmore.

Congress: Steven Bacon, Catherine Ceglarz, Derek Clark, Constance Croker, Jeffrey Godwin, Jonathan Marlowe, Teresa Moran, Pamela Nelson, Alice Pegues, Marsha Wagner.

Home In Mill Valley Looted

Theft of jewelry, a radio and liquor worth $227 was reported Thursday to Mill Valley police by Mort Staub, 30 Glen Drive. The theft occured sometime during the day while the house was empty, he said.

Suzette Morshead, 445 Throckmorton Avenue, Mill Valley, reported to police that a spare tire worth $36 had been stolen from her car Wednesday night while parked in front of her home.

Two paper towel machines and a soft drink machine at Mill Valley Car Wash, Lomita Drive and Ashford Avenue, were broken into last night and !⅛ in change stolen, police reported.

Drainage Talks Are Scheduled

Directors of the Gallinas Village Community Services District Thursday night agreed to a special session with representatives of the county public works department to discuss drainage problems on Descanso Way next to the district's proposed park.

The meeting was set for 8 p.m., Jan. 26, at John MacPhail School, district secretary Marguerite Clark reported.

Directors last night asked for estimates on playground equipment for the park.

Burglars Loot Home Of Guns

Burglars ransacked the Larkspur home of Joseph E. Wagstaff Thursday and took eight pistols and 200 rounds of ammunitions, according to Larkspur police.

Police said that between 11:30 a. m. and 4 p. m. the theives broke into the house at 80 Ardmore Road by forcing two doors. Taken were three automatic pistols, two revolvers, two derringers and a flintlock pistol made in 1800, plus ammunition, $56 in cash, some old gold coins and a watch.

Report Deadline

Jan. 31 is the deadline to file the 1966 fourth quarter contribution return and report of agricultural wages, Charles J. Brady, auditor in charge of the State Department of Employment office, San Rafael, reminded farmers yesterday.

BACK FROM 18 COUNTRIES— When Mr. and Mrs. Ward H. Austin of Larkspur take a trip, it's really a trip. On their latest one they toured 18 nations of Europe in a camper —and collected the flags of all.

BY MARIN COUPLE

After 50 Years German Trip Finally Comes True On Tour

By CAROL MARSH

Ward H. Austin, former president of College of Marin, was able to reprot this week that he had at last reached Germany, 50 years after starting out.

Hea dn Mrs. Austin have just returned from an 18,000-mile campint trip, with that country a "must see" on their long list.

"I started out for Germany in the late summer of 1917," Austin said, "and it took me 50 years to get there." His "start" was as a World War I soldier.

MANY PHOTOS

The Austins, now at their home in Larkspur sorting the 1,700 pictures he took on the trip, traveled the British Isles and Europe from Scandinavia to the Mediterranean in a Volkswagen "Campmobile," a seeelp-in, cook-in trailer-truck.

They covered 21 countries in their March-to-December trip, bringing to 48 the total number of countries they have visited in the five years since Austin resigned as president of the college. Camping, Austin said, is the adult equivalent to the youth hostels in Europe. Every major city has a large, well-equipped camp ground, and the camps are used by more native Europeans than tourists.

They took delivery on their Campmobile in Rotterdam in the snow, and in the next nine months crossed the continent three times in it "without even a lfat tire."

LEFT DRIVING

In order to cope with driving on the left side of the road in Sweden and Great Britain, Austin pasted a "keep left!" sign onto the windshield.

But having been out of Marin for the better part of a year, Austin said he now finds "driving in San Rafael quite an experience."

On the northernmost point in their trip, the couple visited Hammerfest, Norway, 270 miles north of the Arctic Circle, with 22 hours of sunlight a day while they were there.

"You just stay up later," Austin said of the 11 p.m. sunset and 1 a.m. sunrise.

Going into Hammerfest, Austin got several slides of a reindeer which got ahead of them on the road and would not get off. "I saw the same thing in Mill Valley last week with a non-rein deer," he noted.

On an earlier trip, they had driven the Alaskan Highway, and were surprised to find northern Norway so "civilized and settled" by comparison, they said.

BUS TOUR

They took bus tourn across central Norway and Ireland, and a yacht trip of the Greek islands, one of the highlights of the tirp.

Austin said he found Inverness, Scotland, much like Tomales Bay, and noted, too, that there are more canals in Amsterdam than in Venice.

When they visited Gibralter, they had to walk across the border, as border authoritites would not let them drive. Coming back, as Spain does not allow goods brought in Gibralter to be brought into Spain, Mrs. Austin said, the border guards searched her purse "compartment by compartment."

They flew into Berlin to visit the man who stayed at their home in 1951 as an American Field Service student, Gunter Schiffke. Schiffke served as guide for their tour of West Berlin, but as a West Berliner he could not accompany them on their short trip into East Berlin, which they found "pretty grim."

THEATER TOUR

They also visited Oberammergau, Germany, where the passion play is presented once every ten years, and although this was not one of the years, Austin took a picture of his wife with the actor, in off-years a woodcutter, who plays Herod.

In France they found the French "less friendly than people anywhere else in the world," Mrs. Austin siad. "Anywhere else, if you just pull out a map you're surrounded by people wanting to help you find what you're looking for. But in France, if you don't know the word or mispronounce it, they just shrug and walk away."

"But they're not really hostile, as long as you have money," Austin added.

Their tour ended in Lisbon, Portugal, in December.

"We left Lisbon at 3:15 p.m. and arrived in New York at 3:45 p.m., after a six-hour ride," Austin said. "If they really worked at it, they could have got us to New Yark before we left Lisbon."

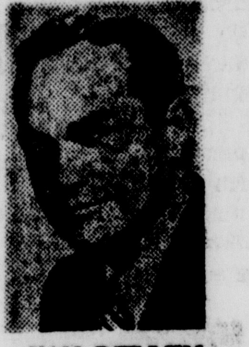
Will Read Poetry

Brother Antoninus of the Dominican Fathers, Kentfield, writer of several books of poetry, will read from his works at 11:10 a.m. Thursday in Guzman Hall of Dominican College, San Rafael.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Friendly Dog Bites Or Not, Treat Them All With Caution



VAN DELLEN

A Brooklyn plastic surgeon has been consulted on many occasions to repair severe dog bites. In most instances the owner and victim have labeled the dog as "friendly." In talking to other plastic surgeons he found that they had similar experiences. At the risk of castigation from dog lovers, he questions whether they are friendly dogs.

Dr. Daniel Klein wrote a special article on this subject in the New York State Journal of Medicine. He is more interested in the prevention of dog bites than in how the injury should be repaired. Most of the victims he treated were bitten by city dogs. In contrast, working and sporting dogs are said to cause the largest percentage of bites; female dogs and puppies are reported to have the highest bite rate.

USING GOVERNMENT figures, Dr. Klein calculated that more than 660,000 persons are bitten annually. But this may be only a drop in the bucket because minor nips and scratches never come to the attention of the authorities and in all probability only one in 10 is reported to health agencies for investigation. In these circumstances our 660,000 becomes more than 2,000,000.

The incidence is greater during warm weather when both children and friendly dogs are out of doors. Most of those bitten are youngsters, followed by delivery boys, milkmen, and salesmen (7,000 mailmen were bitten last year). Almost 80 per cent occur in or near the home of the pet owner and the victim usually is not a stranger. Stray dogs are responsible in 12 per cent. Apparently man has not learned to live with his best friend.

ALL BITES should be washed thouroughly with soap and water. Rabies treatment depends upon the results of the examination of the animal. Laws vary in different states on liability but in many areas the owner is responsible even though the dog was frightened or molested by a child.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer question on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

TOO MANY RED CELLS

J. B. writes: What is polycythemia? Please explain the teratment and prognosis.

REPLY

Polycythemia is the opposite of anemia. This chronic blood disease is characterized by an increase in the number of red cells and hemoglobin. The blood volume is increased and the fluid is more viscid. Clots may block the blood vessels, leading to vascular complications. The treatments most frequently used are removing a pint of blood twice a week (venesection) and the use of radioactive phosphorus. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on this condition.

CHOLESTEROL LEVEL

S. K. writes: What is the significance of a low cholesterol?

REPLY

None except that the cholesterol content of the blood is low in hyperthyroidism (overactive thyroid gland), pernicious anemia, and acute liver disease. A low cholesterol level does not necessarily mean that the individual will not develop arteriosclerosis.

SHINGLES PAINFUL

J. R. Y. writes: Is shingles a serious disease?

REPLY

Not in the sense that it is fatal, but this virus infection is painful and in older persons may persist and interfere with sleep. The most serious form of shingles occurs when the eye is involved, because the scar may interfere with vision.

WEATHERBEATEN HIP

A. A. writes: What causes a dry hip socket?

REPLY

Wear and tear rather than lack of lubrication as so many persons think.

COLOR OF BLOOD

D. F. Y. writes: What is the reason for one person's blood to be lighter than others? If I happen to cut myself, I notice the blood is real light.

REPLY

The appearance of blood is deceiving which is why the physician must rely upon chemical tests rather than the older color charts. If your blood has the necessary ingredients, there is no need for concern. Leukemia means white blood and victims of this disease may notice changes along this line when the white blood count is extremely high.

TEARLESS STOIC

E. L. A. writes: What is wrong with a person who cannot shed tears in time of sorrow? As bad as this person feels, she does not cry.

REPLY

The cause is not known. These individuals are extremely stoic and the tear glands are not stimulated by the sympathetic nervous system. I assume that tears are present at other times to keep the eyeballs moist and clean.

VEGETABLES AND STONE FORMER

T. P. writes: Is it harmful for a person with kidney stones to eat vegetables?

REPLY

This depends upon the type of kidney stone present. If the person has a tendency to form oxalic acid stones, for example, he should omit from his diet vegetables such as spinach, string beans, cabbage, beets, and celery.

HERNIA IN BABY

Mrs. H. Q. writes: Will a truss cure a hernia in a month-old baby?

REPLY

Occasionally it will. However, today surgery is the preferred treatment.

Today's health hint—A sound body is the product of a sound mind. — George Bernard Shaw.

WHY BUY NOW?

Just So Much Land Available

There are approximately 57,230,000 square miles of land surface on this old earth. And of that there is just so much for Marin County home sites. Land values through the years have increased as roads and highways improve.

Increased Population

By 1970 over half of the population of the United States will be under 25. Some experts predict the population is going to increase by an estimated 100 million people during the next 30 years. Where are they all going to live?

3.

More People in Home Buying Bracket

The age group which buys the largest number of single family homes is from 30 to 34. Many good buys in existing homes are on the market now and the so-called "tight money" has not materially affected buyers applying for FHA, GI or VA loans.

A Hedge Against Inflation

Many economists agree that buying a home is a great hedge against possible inflation. Instead of spending money you are investing it. You also enjoy the pride and joy of ownership of the home that reflects your way of life.

Tax Deductions

When you buy a home you can deduct from your income tax return every penny you pay in interest on your home loan. This can be a sizable deduction. You are not able to deduct rent receipts though.

Wage Increases Reflected in Building Costs

Whenever skilled labor receives an increase in wages these increases, in one way or another, are passed along to the consumers. This holds true for wage increases for unskilled labor and for those receiving the minimum wage.

Trend of Interest Rates

Over the past several months interest rates have inched up. They may stabilize although some expect them to climb. At the moment they may be lower than they will be later on.

Good Buys Are on the Market Now

New real estate becomes available every day as family situations change by expansion, transfer or death. If your credit standing is good let your real estate broker help you explore the various financing means which are available today.

BEGINS WEDNESDAY

Five Churches To Join Annual Unity Octave In San Rafael

Five churches will participate in San Rafael's fifth annual Unity Octave to be observed starting Wednesday and continuing through Jan. 25.

This grass roots implementation of the spirit of ecumenism has been a community-wide endeavor since 1963, when the eight-day program was begun here. This year's theme is "Christians in Action."

It is during this period that Christians of many faiths come together to know one another better and to know one another's spiritual aims and achievements.

Co-chairmen of this year's octave are Mr. and Mrs. Allen Parelius of the First Methodist Church.

Working with lay representatives of the other four participating churches, they have developed a program which will begin Wednesday at 8 p.m. in St. Raphael's Catholic Church auditorium, Fifth Avenue and A Street.

After a welcome address by Parelius, there will be a demonstration of the Catholic Mass by Rev. Thomas I. Kennedy, pastor of St. Raphael's and of the Lutheran common service by Rev. Arthur Nitz of Trinity Lutheran Church.

Rev. C. Julian Bartlett, dean of Grace Cathedral in San Francisco, will be principal speaker next Saturday at 7 p.m. in St Paul's Episcopal Church, Court Street at Mission Avenue. He will be introduced by Rev. John Riley of St. Paul's.

The program will begin with a concert by the San Domenico Bell Ringers. Dinner, for which reservations should be made at one of the five churches, will be at 6:30 p.m.

An exchange of pulpits is one of the two events for Sunday, Jan. 22. That morning Rev. Riley of St. Paul's will preach at the First Presbyterian Church, 1410 Fifth Avenue; Rev. Wesley C. Baker of First Presbyterian will preach at the First Methodist, 9 Ross Valley Drive, and Rev. Philip Whitmer of First Methodist. will preach at St. Paul's.

That evening at 6 o'clock there will be a forum for high school juniors and seniors of all Christian faiths at the First Methodis Church.

Topic of the panel discussion will be "A Christian Teen-ager's Commitment in a Secular World." Rev. Miles O'Brien Riley of St. Raphael's will conduct the forum.

Clergy and lay leaders of the five churches will meet Jan. 23 at the First Presbyterian Church to plan a co-ordinated program for church-related year around activities. Rev. Nitz will be chairman.

The octave will close Jan. 25 at 9 p.m. in Angelico Hall, Dominican College, 1520 Grand Avenue.

Guest speaker will be Rev. Whitmer, whose topic will be "The Church: Is a New Model Coming Out?"

Rev. Riley will offer the opening prayer and Rev. Baker the closing prayer.

On the entertainment program will be songs by the Winifred Baker Children's Chorus, singing "The Daniel Jazz" by Herbert Chappel and the Baker Chorale singing the "Te Deum" by Zoltan Kodaly. Soloists will be Corinne Swall, Marietta Sedlock, John Gibb and Robert Reeves.

Octave committee members working with Mr. and Mrs. Parelius are Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Berner, Trinity Lutheran; Mr. and Mrs. Don Lord, Walravine Shanley, Virginia Livermore and Helen Stevens, St. Paul's Episcopal; Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Weber, St. Raphael's, and Mr. and Mrs. Ewing Bone and Mr. and Mrs. Neville Donovan, First Presbyterian.

Three Churches Will Unite For Ecumenical Programs

In keeping with the ecumenical program for Christian unity and the ecumenical action recommended by Vatican Council II, three San Anselmo and Ross churches will observe a week of prayer, beginning Wednesday.

Participating churches are St. John's Episcopal Church in Ross and St. Anselm's Catholic Church and First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo.

They will use a form of service sponsored by the National Council of Churches and the Catholic Bishop's Commission for Ecumenical Affairs.

Periods of prayer will be held independently by each congregation during the first part of the week. However, on the last three days they will unite for common prayer at 8 p.m. each evening.

On Monday, Jan. 23, they will meet at St. Anselm's; on Tuesday, Jan. 24, at the Presbyterian church, and on Wednesday, Jan. 25, at St. John's.

According to a joint announcement, the purpose of the meetings are "not to seek a common denominator in matters of belief, but to pray for the grace of unity, seeking the enlightment and good will that prepares the way for true unity."

Presbyterian Body To Hear Bible Expert

Dr. J. Arthurd Baird, who is presently writing a book on the New Testament at the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, will preach at the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at San Rafael's First Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Baird's subject will be "Hope Is The Light." He is a son of Dr. Jesse Hayes Baird, longtime seminary president.

He is currently on leave from his post as professor of religion at Wooster College in Ohio. He has held the post since 1954.

He is a graduate of Occidental College and the San Anselmo seminary. He obtained his doctorate from Edinburg University in Scotland.

Easter Prayer Weekend Slated

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—An International Prayer Fellowship, sponsored jointly by the Upper Room, daily devotional guide, and Scarritt College, will be held on the Easter Weekend, Friday evening March 24 through Easter Monday afternoon, March 27.

Inspirational addresses at the meetings in The Upper Room Chapel here will center on Gethsemane, The Last Supper, the Crucifixion, the Resurrection and Pentecost.

GUEST SPEAKER—Rev. Geoffrey P. Selth, minister of the Unitarian Fellowship in Sonoma County, will speak at tomorrow's 11 a.m. service at Unitarian Church of Marin in San Rafael. He will fill the pulpit while the San Rafael minister, Karel F. Botermans handles his duties in Sonoma County.

Service To Be By Seminarians

The Presbyterian Church of Santa Venetia of San Rafael will observe "Seminary Sunday" tomorrow with three San Francisco Theological Seminary students in charge of the rites.

Participating will be Byron Burch, David Horosz and John Waide, who also will be working in various church programs during the seminary's winter quarter.

Burch will deliver the sermon which he has entitled, "The Tarnished Image."

Teens To Conduct Rites Tomorrow

The Presbyteens, a high school youth group at Redwoods Presbyterian Church in Larkspur, will conduct the 9:30 and 11 a.m. services tomorrow.

The group will take care of the entire service, including ushering, special anthem, prayer and scripture reading and preaching.

30 Collegians To Help In Church Rites

Between 25 and 30 students from California Concordia College in Oakland will be the guests this weekend of Grace Lutheran Church of Novato as participants in a youth and evangelism program.

First program on the agenda is a youth meeting tonight for young members of the church from fifth grade through high school. Concordia students will present the program and the young churchmen will provide refreshments.

Following the program the visitors will spend the night as guests in homes of congregation members.

At tomorrow morning's worship service, a chancel drama will be presented by the visitors, portraying the parable of "The Pharisee and the Publican."

Activity will culminate tomorrow afternoon when the college visitors will assist in a church canvass of the community.

World Religion Day Observance

The Bah'ai Assembly of San Rafael will meet at 2 p.m. tomorrow at the Novato Community House on Machin Avenue to observe World Religion Day.

Guest speaker for the two-hour meeting wlil be Mrs. Douglas Gibson, who with her husband has just moved to Lucas Valley from St. Louis.

The meeting is one of 500 being held tomorrow throughout the nation by members of the Baha'i faith.

Third Lecture In Series Is Monday Night

The new light shed on biblical events and customs by his archeaological excavations at Ashdod in the Holy Land, is the subject of a lecture by Rev. David Noel Freedman at 8 p.m. Monday at the First Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo.

Dr. Freedman, acting dean of faculty and professor of Hebrew and Old Testament literature at San Francisco Theological Seminary, will tell of the summers he spent in Israel directing the excavation of what has proved to be the major Philistine stronghold in the Holy Land, and the significance of discoveries made there, including portions of a monument to Saigon II who captured the city in 712 B.C.

His lecture is the third in the seminary's 1966-67 popular series directed to the general public of Marin County. Others will be "The Realization of Future" by the Rev. Dieter Georgi, professor of New Testament Feb. 13, and "The Protestant Ethic and the Spirit of Revolution," by Rev. E. David Willis, associate professor of historical theology, on March 13.

All lectures are at 8 p.m. in the church's sanctuary, Kensington Road and Ross Avenue.

Church Council Head To Speak

SACRAMENTO—Dr. Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon and the newly elected president of the National Council of Churches, will be the keynote speaker at the 25th annual fellowship dinner of the Northern California Council of Churches here Thursday.

At the 6:30 dinner in the Scottish Rites Temple the new president of the state Council of Churches, Rt. Rev. G. Richard Millard, suffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, will be installed. He will serve as the 1967 leader of the 20 denominational bodies which form the council.

Church Plans Literary Move

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI)—A new area of emphasis by the Assemblies of God has been established with the appointment of William G. Eastlake, of Springfield as the denomination's manager of literature sales.

Eastlake will be responsible for promotion and sale of Sunday school curricular materials and vacation Bible school items, including more than 60 publications with a quarterly circulation of 2.3 million.

Lutheran Leader

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dr. Henry J. Whiting, a social welfare specialist from New York, and Howard E. Holcomb, director of admissions at Gustavus Adolphus College at St. Peter, Minn., have been named to staff positions in the new Lutheran Council in the United States of America.

Terra Linda Churches Plan Unity Services

Seven Terra Linda churches will join in a week of "Prayer for Christian Unity" beginning Wednesday with an ecumenical service of worship and prayer at 8 p.m. at St. Isabella's Catholic Church.

Two other special events are scheduled during the week.

On Sunday, Jan. 22 at 7:30 p.m. Rev. Philip Farnham, assistant director of the California Migrant Ministry, will speak on "The Meaning of Delano for the Church and Society," in St. Isabella's parish center.

The concluding program will be a joint service on Wednesday, Jan. 25 at Christ Presbyterian Church at 8 p.m., featuring a panel of laymen discussing "Living Room Dialogues."

Participating churches are Aldersgate Methodist Church, Christ Presbyterian, Faith Lutheran Church, Church of the Nativity, First Congregational Church and St. Isabella's.

Pulpit Guest Tomorrow In Corte Madera

Rev. Roscoe C. Robison, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, Providence, R.I., will be the guest preacher at tomorrow's 10:55 a.m. service at the First Baptist Church in Corte Madera.

He is presently a member of the National Board of Managers of the American Baptist Home Missions Societies and has also served on the committee of Latin American Work and the Division of Support and Interpretation.

In addition to his duties as pastor of one of the historic and strategic churches in New England, he has also served several capacities in Rhode Island as chairman of the Strategy Committee for American Baptist Churches, chairman of the Research Department of the state's Council of Churches; eastern vice president of the American Baptist Ministers National Council

He is a graduate of Washburn University in Kansas and holds two graduate degrees from Andover-Newton Theological School in Massachusetts.

The Corte Madera First Baptist Church, a community church, cordially invites the public to hear him, according to its pastor, Rev. Henry I. Fox.

Facts On New Bible Will Be Topic Of Talk

Joseph D. Gargiulo, vice principal of Novato High School and a College of Marin trustee, will speak on the new Jerusalem Bible at tomorrow's 9:40 a.m. adult inquirers class at the Novato Community Methodist Church.

The new bible includes seven books not in the King James and American Revised Standard Bibles. It was published by Doubleday in June.

Gargiulo presented his first talk on the new bible at a meeting in December.

Guests are cordially invited to attend the talk.

Witnesses Back From Conference

San Rafael's congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses have resumed their regular schedule following last weekend's convention in San Fracnisco.

According to Francis Paulson, presiding minister, more than 1,500 attended the conference.

NORMAN B. HOLMES
Lectures on Thursday

Public Lecture Set Thursday In Mill Valley

"God—Not Chance" will be the title of a public lecture by Norman B. Holmes at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Old Mill School auditorium in Mill Vallry under sponsorship of Mill Valley's First Church of Christ Scientist.

Holmes, a Christian Science teacher and practitioner in Chicago, is currently on a tour as member of the Church's Board of Lectureship.

He is a graduate of Northwestern University and served as a U.S. Naval chaplain during World War II and the Korean War.

The lecture is open to the public.

Lord's Supper To Be Observed

The Lord's Supper will be observed tomorrow at both the services at the Novato Presbyterian Church wth Rev. C. M. Croughan officiating and assisted by Dr. John J. Canoles.

The annual congregational meeting of the church will be held at 6:30 p.m. Preceding the congregational meeting a pot luck dinner will be held. Reservations are to be made with Mrs. Mike Jones. The dinner is being planned by the deasons of the church. The junior high group will serve.

Baby sitting will be available for the tiny tots beginning at 5:15 p.m. and will continue throughout dinner and the meeting.

Study Body Campaigning For Officers

Campaigning for student body and class offices at San Rafael High School was in full swing today, with elections scheduled next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Seventy students have been nominated for office. All will be introduced to the entire school Monday in the gymnasium at 10:50 a.m., when candidates for student body office will make their speeches.

Balloting will be in the noon hour on both days, in room 108 for seniors; room 217 for juniors; room 204 for freshmen and room 109 for sophomores. Results will be posted late Wednesday, with run-off elections — if necessary — slated for the noon hour, in the same rooms, on Jan. 19 and 20.

Candidates for office are:

SENIOR CLASS: president: Kersey Clausen, Craig Pagelow; vice president: Robert Ryan; secretary-treasurer: Debra McLain; director of social affairs: Cynthia Jensen.

Congress: Kersey Clausen, Steven Hauge, John Houston, Edward Johnston, Rodney Lame, Patricia Langlais, Robert Maglione, Donald Timmer, Peter Tupas.

Congress: John Buehler, Peter Carpou, William Ceglarz, William Hamilton, Christine O'Kane, Patricia Peterson, Dawn Powlan, Nancy Pridmore.

Congress: Steven Bacon, Catherine Ceglarz, Derek Clark, Constance Croker, Jeffrey Godwin, Jonathan Marlowe, Teresa Moran, Pamela Nelson, Alice Pegues, Marsha Wagner.

Home In Mill Valley Looted

Theft of jewelry, a radio and liquor worth $227 was reported Thursday to Mill Valley police by Mort Staub, 30 Glen Drive. The theft occured sometime during the day while the house was empty, he said.

Suzette Morshead, 445 Throckmorton Avenue, Mill Valley, reported to police that a spare tire worth $36 had been stolen from her car Wednesday night while parked in front of her home.

Two paper towel machines and a soft drink machine at Mill Valley Car Wash, Lomita Drive and Ashford Avenue, were broken into last night and !⅛ in change stolen, police reported.

Drainage Talks Are Scheduled

Directors of the Gallinas Village Community Services District Thursday night agreed to a special session with representatives of the county public works department to discuss drainage problems on Descanso Way next to the district's proposed park.

The meeting was set for 8 p.m., Jan. 26, at John MacPhail School, district secretary Marguerite Clark reported.

Directors last night asked for estimates on playground equipment for the park.

Burglars Loot Home Of Guns

Burglars ransacked the Larkspur home of Joseph E. Wagstaff Thursday and took eight pistols and 200 rounds of ammunitions, according to Larkspur police.

Police said that between 11:30 a. m. and 4 p. m. the theives broke into the house at 80 Ardmore Road by forcing two doors. Taken were three automatic pistols, two revolvers, two derringers and a flintlock pistol made in 1800, plus ammunition, $56 in cash, some old gold coins and a watch.

Report Deadline

Jan. 31 is the deadline to file the 1966 fourth quarter contribution return and report of agricultural wages. Charles J. Brady, auditor in charge of the State Department of Employment office, San Rafael, reminded farmers yesterday.

BACK FROM 18 COUNTRIES— When Mr. and Mrs. Ward H. Austin of Larkspur take a trip, it's really a trip. On their latest one they toured 18 nations of Europe in a camper —and collected the flags of all.

After 50 Years German Trip Finally Comes True On Tour

By CAROL MARSH

Ward H. Austin, former president of College of Marin, was able to reprot this week that he had at last reached Germany, 50 years after starting out.

Hea dn Mrs. Austin have just returned from an 18,000-mile campint trip, with that country a "must see" on their long list.

"I started out for Germany in the late summer of 1917," Austin said, "and it took me 50 years to get there." His "start" was as a World War I soldier.

MANY PHOTOS

The Austins, now at their home in Larkspur sorting the 1,700 pictures he took on the trip, traveled the British Isles and Europe from Scandinavia to the Mediterranean in a Volkswagen "Campmobile," a seeelp-in, cook-in trailer-truck.

They covered 21 countries in their March-to-December trip, bringing to 48 the total number of countries they have visited in the five years since Austin resigned as president of the college. Camping, Austin said, is the adult equivalent to the youth hostels in Europe. Every major city has a large, well-equipped camp ground, and the camps are used by more native Europeans than tourists.

They took delivery on their Campmobile in Rotterdam in the snow, and in the next nine months crossed the continent three times in it "without even a lfat tire."

In order to cope with driving on the left side of the road in Sweden and Great Britain, Austin pasted a "keep left!" sign onto the windshield.

But having been out of Marin for the better part of a year, Austin said he now finds "driving in San Rafael quite an experience."

On the northernmost point in their trip, the couple visited Hammerfest, Norway, 270 miles north of the Arctic Circle, with 22 hours of sunlight a day while they were there.

"You just stay up later," Austin said of the 11 p.m. sunset and 1 a.m. sunrise.

Going into Hammerfest, Austin got several slides of a reindeer which got ahead of them on the road and would not get off. "I saw the same thing in Mill Valley last week with a non-rein deer," he noted.

On an earlier trip, they had driven the Alaskan Highway, and were surprised to find northern Norway so "civilized and settled" by comparison, they said.

BUS TOUR

They took bus tourn across central Norway and Ireland, and a yacht trip of the Greek islands, one of the highlights of the tirp.

Austin said he found Inverness, Scotland, much like Tomales Bay, and noted, too, that there are more canals in Amsterdam than in Venice.

When they visited Gibralter, they had to walk across the border, as border authoritites would not let them drive. Coming back, as Spain does not allow goods brought in Gibralter to be brought into Spain, Mrs. Austin said, the border guards searched her purse "compartment by compartment."

They flew into Berlin to visit the man who stayed at their home in 1951 as an American Field Service student, Gunter Schiffke. Schiffke served as guide for their tour of West Berlin, but as a West Berliner he could not accompany them on their short trip into East Berlin, which they found "pretty grim."

THEATER TOUR

They also visited Oberammergau, Germany, where the passion play is presented once every ten years, and although this was not one of the years, Austin took a picture of his wife with the actor, in off-years a woodcutter, who plays Herod.

In France they found the French "less friendly than people anywhere else in the world," Mrs. Austin siad. "Anywhere else, if you just pull out a map you're surrounded by people wanting to help you find what you're looking for. But in France, if you don't know the word or mispronounce it, they just shrug and walk away."

"But they're not really hostile, as long as you have money," Austin added.

Their tour ended in Lisbon, Portugal, in December.

"We left Lisbon at 3:15 p.m. and arrived in New York at 3:45 p.m., after a six-hour ride," Austin said. "If they really worked at it, they could have got us to New Yark before we left Lisbon."

Will Read Poetry

Brother Antoninus of the Dominican Fathers, Kentfield, writer of several books of poetry, will read from his works at 11:10 a.m. Thursday in Guzman Hall of Dominican College, San Rafael.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Friendly Dog Bites Or Not, Treat Them All With Caution

VAN DELLEN

A Brooklyn plastic surgeon has been consulted on many occasions to repair severe dog bites. In most instances the owner and victim have labeled the dog as "friendly." In talking to other plastic surgeons he found that they had similar experiences. At the risk of castigation from dog lovers, he questions whether they are friendly dogs.

Dr. Daniel Klein wrote a special article on this subject in the New York State Journal of Medicine. He is more interested in the prevention of dog bites than in how the injury should be repaired. Most of the victims he treated were bitten by city dogs. In contrast, working and sporting dogs are said to cause the largest percentage of bites; female dogs and puppies are reported to have the highest bite rate.

USING GOVERNMENT figures, Dr. Klein calculated that more than 660,000 persons are bitten annually. But this may be only a drop in the bucket because minor nips and scratches never come to the attention of the authorities and in all probability only one in 10 is reported to health agencies for investigation. In these circumstances our 660,000 becomes more than 2,000,000.

The incidence is greater during warm weather when both children and friendly dogs are out of doors. Most of those bitten are youngsters, followed by delivery boys, milkmen, and salesmen (7,000 mailmen were bitten last year). Almost 80 per cent occur in or near the home of the pet owner and the victim usually is not a stranger. Stray dogs are responsible in 12 per cent. Apparently man has not learned to live with his best friend.

ALL BITES should be washed thouroughly with soap and water. Rabies treatment depends upon the results of the examination of the animal. Laws vary in different states on liability but in many areas the owner is responsible even though the dog was frightened or molested by a child.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer question on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

TOO MANY RED CELLS

J. B. writes: What is polycythemia? Please explain the teratment and prognosis.

REPLY

Polycythemia is the opposite of anemia. This chronic blood disease is characterized by an increase in the number of red cells and hemoglobin. The blood volume is increased and the fluid is more viscid. Clots may block the blood vessels, leading to vascular complications. The treatments most frequently used are removing a pint of blood twice a week (venesection) and the use of radioactive phosphorus. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on this condition.

CHOLESTEROL LEVEL

S. K. writes: What is the significance of a low cholesterol?

REPLY

None except that the cholesterol content of the blood is low in hyperthyroidism (overactive thyroid gland), pernicious anemia, and acute liver disease. A low cholesterol level does not necessarily mean that the individual will not develop arteriosclerosis.

SHINGLES PAINFUL

J. R. Y. writes: Is shingles a serious disease?

REPLY

Not in the sense that it is fatal, but this virus infection is painful and in older persons may persist and interfere with sleep. The most serious form of shingles occurs when the eye is involved, because the scar may interfere with vision.

WEATHERBEATEN HIP

A. A. writes: What causes a dry hip socket?

REPLY

Wear and tear rather than lack of lubrication as so many persons think.

COLOR OF BLOOD

D. F. Y. writes: What is the reason for one person's blood to be lighter than others? If I happen to cut myself, I notice the blood is real light.

REPLY

The appearance of blood is deceiving which is why the physician must rely upon chemical tests rather than the older color charts. If your blood has the necessary ingredients, there is no need for concern. Leukemia means white blood and victims of this disease may notice changes along this line when the white blood count is extremely high.

TEARLESS STOIC

E. L. A. writes: What is wrong with a person who cannot shed tears in time of sorrow? As bad as this person feels, she does not cry.

REPLY

The cause is not known. These individuals are extremely stoic and the tear glands are not stimulated by the sympathetic nervous system. I assume that tears are present at other times to keep the eyeballs moist and clean.

VEGETABLES AND STONE FORMER

T. P. writes: Is it harmful for a person with kidney stones to eat vegetables?

REPLY

This depends upon the type of kidney stone present. If the person has a tendency to form oxalic acid stones, for example, he should omit from his diet vegetables such as spinach, string beans, cabbage, beets, and celery.

HERNIA IN BABY

Mrs. H. Q. writes: Will a truss cure a hernia in a month-old baby?

REPLY

Occasionally it will. However, today surgery is the preferred treatment.

Today's health hint—A sound body is the product of a sound mind. — George Bernard Shaw.

Mission Sesquicentennial Recalls Old Hispanic Ties

AS WAVE AFTER WAVE of newcomers have swept over California since World War II, the last human links with our state's Spanish and Mexican heritage has been largely obliterated.

In this year of our Mission San Rafael's 150th birthday anniversary, we recall earlier days with nostalgia.

If you attended high school in one of the older established communities along the route of El Camino Real — the trail from one Spanish Mission to the next, extending from San Diego to Sonoma — chances were good that you would have a classmate named Yorba, Arguello, Salido, Pacheco, Vallejo, Carillo or one of the many other family names firmly established here long before the first Yankee set foot in what is now the Golden State.

In those 1920s and 1930s Mexicans, especially in Southern California, were the targets for social and economic discrimination as bad as the worst applied to Negroes in Southern States. Anybody with an Hispanic name was not highly regarded.

IF YOU COULD pierce this wall of discrimination that surrounded people who bore any of the honored names of history, the story was thrilling.

Take the Salidos. Their forebears came in 1519 with Cortez and the conquistadores who conquered Montezuma's Aztecs and plundered all Mexico. The first Salido wound up as overlord for the rich silver mines in Alamos, Sonora. How did the Salidos get to the California we know? Ultimately they became political refugees and found asylum in Arizona and Southern California.

Arguello? A proud early California family whose descendants were caretakers of Mission Capistrano in the 1920s.

Yorba? The first Yorba was a corporal in the Portola expedition sent to make the first overland exploration and colonization effort.

Corporal Yorba picked out a beautiful site for a rancho overlooking Santa Ana River canyon, in what is now Orange County.

Before World War II, Yorbas still lived on what remained of that rancho, some of them in an ancient adobe structure which dated back to the time of the Portola exploration and colonization trek in 1669.

Leo Carrillo, the late movie actor, was a native San Franciscan who bore his famous name proudly.

In Marin County, the name Pacheco still survives, as do a few others.

To repeat, as waves and waves of newcomers have swept over California since World War II, most of the last of these human links with our state's Spanish and Mexican heritage have been largely lost.

It is tragic but probably unavoidable.

CALIFORNIA'S connection with Mexico and Spain was always through what we now know as Baja California.

When the Hispanic connections were cut in 1850, as the Yankees took over California, they were severed almost completely.

For more than a century, Baja has been ignored by U.S. Californians.

The last of Baja's great chain of missions was built long before the first of our California missions were begun.

Baja's earliest missions were about two centuries old before Father Serra began his mission work in what is now our U.S. California.

Most latter-day Yankee immigrants to U.S. California are largely ignorant of these historic facts.

THE LITTLE PUBLICIZED "Commission on the Californias" authorized nearly three years ago by our State Legislature seems to be making a start toward overcoming this public apathy toward our sister Californias — the state of Baja California del Norte and the territory of Baja California del Sur — south of the border.

Our sister state to the south has formed a similar commission. The two commissions have informally and unofficially amalgamated to act as one.

Lt. Gov. Finch of the new administration in Sacramento has indicated his intention to be an active supporter and participant in the commissions' efforts to reestablish cooperative communications and contacts between the two sister California states.

The commissions plan their next meeting in early spring at the University of California at Davis.

It is to be hoped that 1967 will see the mission sesquicentennial in San Rafael renew people's interest in Marin's Hispanic heritage and that 1967 will see the Commission on the Californias focus public attention on the desirability of being neighborly with the two Californias who are our closest neighbors to the south.

It took Baja California about 200 years to wake up to the important potential of the California we know.

It has taken us about 100 years to wake up to the importance of establishing more neighborly relations with Baja California.

Let us hope we make progress more swiftly in the future.

CHILD'S SEVERED ARM RESTORED

A little girl whose arm was completely severed can now use it to wash, feed and dress herself.

When an auto collision with a speeding train near Denver, Colorado, badly injured the 4-year-old, her arm was left lying on the ground. But a state policeman saw the arm and put it in the ambulance, thinking that doctors might be able to do something with it. They did.

Eight surgeons, three pediatricians and two anesthesiologists spent six hours attempting the state's first reimplantation of a severed limb.

Sixteen months later the little girl could move her wrist and elbow and some feeling had returned to her hand. Doctors cautiously stated that the arm was "doing quite well."

Despite the heavy odds against success, the law officer's decision vitally affected the girl's future life. In a similar way, as long as we make the effort, the Lord can bring good out of a critical situation. But He expects us to try wholeheartedly.

Best Traffic Safety Idea: Cut Speeding

Editor, Independent-Journal:

This is a contribution to your "What Our Readers Say" column. SPEED-DRIVING.

Is the administration barking at the wrong tree? Why get on the automobile manufacturers for safety devices? We can have all kinds of safety devices in our cars but if the driver loses control of his driving due to speed then all these safety devices are in vain. Why not encourage slow driving instead? We can always correct ourselves if we go slow. I am all against fast driving. Going 45 mph and 50 mph is fast enough.

What's the hurry anyway? Are we in a race? America, or shall I say "Department of Motor Vehicles," please wake up. The killer is speed. Remember these old adages "haste makes waste" and "slow but sure."

I hope you could use this for your paper.

Report Of Collision Results In Protest

Editor, Independent-Journal:

In the Jan. 4 issue of your paper you printed a story captioned "Kentfield School Staffers in Collision" (or similar words).

The collision occurred at 9:40 a.m. as the three staff members were on their way from their duties at Wolfe Grade School to their next classes at Greenbrae School.

Your gross and inexcusable error in time (your article said the incident occurred at One a.m.) gave a connotation of unsavory flavor to a simple, unfortunate traffic accident.

Is it your policy to write up every accident that happens in the county? Do you list occupations and ages (every age you quoted was incorrect) of every person involved in every minor traffic mishap?

It is my hope that "Marin's Best-Seller" will take its responsibilities for honest reporting more seriously in the future.

AVANELL MUNCH

(A teletype transmission foulup resulted in the accident being reported as having happened at 1 a.m. It was at 9:40 a.m. The Independent-Journal regrets this error. As to identification of employment, this was done because it is highly unusual for three people in the same employ to be involved in a traffic accident.—Editor)

At 56 You're Young Enough To Run For President But Not For P-TA

NEW YORK (AP) — A glance at the calendar reminds me that next month I'll be 56 years old.

What other blows can mankind take and still endure?

The prospect of being 56 inevitably inflicts philosphic thoughts on a fellow.

Reaching that age may be a hollow victory, but it is still a victory. A majority of the human beings who have teemed the earth never lived to be 56.

Once you go beyond 55 you are getting into winter territory. You have an instinctive realization that there's frost ahead. It hits you somewhere inside like the blow of a mammoth hammer.

YOU HAVE TO face up to the fact that in many ways you are definitely over the hill. This has a glad as well as a sad side.

It is pleasant to know that you are still young enough to run for the presidency, if your country should call you, but too hold to have to run for a post in the local P-TA.

There are other erosions and compensations at 56:

You no longer have to read the morale messages the boss pins up on the company bulletin board.

The doctor has a pretty definite idea what's wrong with you, and you know pretty well what's wrong with him. You enjoy exchanging symptoms.

If you donate a pint to the office blood bank, everybody tells you that you are a hero —something you've known for a long time.

ON YOUR ACTUAL birthday you get 27 get well cards and three careful pecks on the cheek by three homely secretaries.

You figure it is rather foolish to get short-winded bending over tying your shoelaces when they now sell shoes that don't need shoelaces.

Every time you wear a bow tie you feel devilish.

You decide it is easier to leave your bifocal glasses on all day than to waste your strength whipping them on and off.

It occurs to you now and and then that William McKinley and Calvin Coolidge have never been really fully appreciated.

You abandon any idea of growing a beard because you know it would come out all white.

WHEN YOU SEE a fellow go up the stairs two at a time you realize the world will never run out of fools.

It is a matter of quiet pride that you are married to a woman who doesn't wear a miniskirt.

It worries you terribly if one of your enemies falls ill. What a gap there'd be if there weren't any old enemies left to keep your spleen healthy.

You secretly agree with most of the things your wife says, but you'd rather die than admit it to her.

You can express most of your own opinions about the world with a clearcut grunt.

At 56 you lose any fear you ever had of second childhood. In your heart of hearts you realize you are still in your first childhood, that nobody ever really grows up inside, and that life is always a kindergarten — but a worthwhile one.

LBJ's State Of Union Message Differs From His Earlier Ones

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, bouncing back from months of comparative silence, is as full of energy and ideas as ever, which would seem to wash out any guessing that he won't try for a second term in 1968.

There was a time, earlier in his presidency, when Johnson kept himself almost constantly in the public eye with speeches or pronouncements. He did an almost complete about face on that in the last months of 1966.

BUT HIS State of the Union message Tuesday night, delivered to Congress in person and taking up almost one hour and 10 minutes of national television and radio time, was like his three previous messages, starting in 1964.

It dripped with proposals and programs and promises to get on with unfinished business. In domestic affairs alone the President dipped into at least 21 different fields with recommendations made then or to be made.

Yet, there was a difference between Tuesday night's talk and the previous State of the Union messages, both in what he said and the way he said it.

GONE WAS the excessive use of facial expressions as he explored the problems and made his points. He was straightfaced as he addressed Congress.

Those who have been critical of him for the way he delivered a talk — the expressions, the eye-squinting, the gestures — would have trouble finding the same fault in this latest talk.

In short, Johnson on television Tuesday night was a different Johnson. This showed up, too, at his televised news conference Dec. 31. There is as much ginger as ever but less self-consciousness.

The new Johnson is a lot more careful and thoughtful about his public image.

FURTHER the writing technique in Tuesday night's message was better than the earlier ones in sentence structure and matter-of-factness without trimmings or over-use of short sentences.

And, full of ideas as Tuesday night's message was, it still was less controversial than some of its predecessors. Except for his suggestion to increase taxes to help pay for the war in Vietnam, there was very little to stir his listeners on racial, economic or other grounds.

Such hot issues of the past, like medicare or federal aid to education, were missing. Johnson's stress was on a better life for everybody in this country.

HIS SUGGESTIONS for improvement ranged from fighting poverty to building up better police forces to fight crime and giving the states ever more federal aid and cooperation.

But Johnson did not propose giving the states a bundle of federal tax revenue to use as they pleased, an idea that has been talked about a lot recently, particularly by Republicans.

The recommendations he made covered such a broad field of American life — backed up by his promise to send Congress special messages on a number of them — will keep him busy and in the public mind for months.

IN SHORT, the whole thrust of his talk on domestic problems was one of aggressive action by him although, by repetition, he made it plain he wouldn't be high-handed but would seek the advice and consent and approval of Congress.

He was far less specific and inclusive in the foreign field. There he generalized mostly on American help and cooperation in all the continents of the world.

BUT THE ONE place where he was very specific and emphatic was Vietnam. He didn't budge an inch on American participation in the war there.

Church Must Fight Racial Prejudice

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG JR.

The immorality of racial prejudice and discrimination presents a great challenge to the churches of America. As guardians of our ethical heritage, they must bear a greater responsibility for creating a moral climate which will help break down the barriers which imprison people in substandard living conditions for no reason other than their color.

THE PROBLEM the churches face is compounded by the prejudice of many of their congregations. Two Protestant clergymen in Pennsylvania were recently forced to leave their churches for other assignments because they were too active in the civil rights struggle.

One was subject to harassment which included threatening phone calls and attempts to force his car off the road. The other was told he should have preached more sermons on "peace of mind." Apparently some people believe sermons should be "talk to sleep by" rather than stimulating moral challenges.

This refusal to face the moral crisis of our national life is shared by too many congregations. In the South many churches actively aid segregationists, even allowing segregated schools to be set up in church buildings for the purpose of frustrating public school integration. And many ministers in all sections are content to follow their parishioner's prejudices, in defiance of the ideals of brotherhood and equality.

FORTUNATELY, the mainstream of American religious life is fully committed to these ideals. Religious leaders of all faiths have spoken out for social justice and have taken the lead in fighting for equal rights.

Last spring the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, representing more than 3 million people, overwhelmingly approved a creedal statement affirming its obligation to work for social justice. Other leading church bodies have made similar statements.

Countless priests, nuns, ministers and rabbis have risked danger in civil rights demonstrations in the South, and some have been martyred there. Their courage and dedication are symbols of the determination of enlightened religious leaders to keep their faith relevant to the modern world and to help solve the great problems of our day.

MANY CHURCHES are active in anti-poverty programs and others are using church contacts to help insure fair employment practices by companies working for them.

Recently the National Conference of Catholic Bishops issued a Pastoral statement on Race Relations and Poverty which called for "changing the hearts of men" by instilling a "true sense of neighborliness, based upon a religiously inspired conviction that all men are equal before God and that all should be welcomed in our midst."

"Changing the hearts of men" will not be easy, but it is a task for which our churches are eminently suited. A start should be made in some of our more comfortable suburbs where racial exclusion in housing seems to be an article of faith. An effort must also be made to help those insecure, newly-arrived members of the lower-middle class, like those in Chicago who threw rocks at priests and nuns demonstrating for open housing. Their moral education has not increased as much as their incomes have.

BEGINS WEDNESDAY

Five Churches To Join Annual Unity Octave In San Rafael

Five churches will participate in San Rafael's fifth annual Unity Octave to be observed starting Wednesday and continuing through Jan. 25.

This grass roots implementation of the spirit of ecumenism has been a community-wide endeavor since 1963, when the eight-day program was begun here. This year's theme is "Christians in Action."

It is during this period that Christians of many faiths come together to know one another better and to know one another's spiritual aims and achievements.

Co-chairmen of this year's octave are Mr. and Mrs. Allen Parelius of the First Methodist Church.

Working with lay representatives of the other four participating churches, they have developed a program which will begin Wednesday at 8 p.m. in St. Raphael's Catholic Church auditorium, Fifth Avenue and A Street.

After a welcome address by Parelius, there will be a demonstration of the Catholic Mass by Rev. Thomas I. Kennedy, pastor of St. Raphael's and of the Lutheran common service by Rev. Arthur Nitz of Trinity Lutheran Church.

Rev. C. Julian Bartlett, dean of Grace Cathedral in San Francisco, will be principal speaker next Saturday at 7 p.m. in St Paul's Episcopal Church, Court Street at Mission Avenue. He will be introduced by Rev. John Riley of St. Paul's.

The program will begin with a concert by the San Domenico Bell Ringers. Dinner, for which reservations should be made at one of the five churches, will be at 6:30 p.m.

An exchange of pulpits is one of the two events for Sunday, Jan. 22. That morning Rev. Riley of St. Paul's will preach at the First Presbyterian Church, 1410 Fifth Avenue; Rev. Wesley C. Baker of First Presbyterian will preach at the First Methodist, 9 Ross Valley Drive, and Rev. Philip Whitmer of First Methodist. will preach at St. Paul's.

That evening at 6 o'clock there will be a forum for high school juniors and seniors of all Christian faiths at the First Methodis Church.

Topic of the panel discussion will be "A Christian Teen-ager's Commitment in a Secular World." Rev. Miles O'Brien Riley of St. Raphael's will conduct the forum.

Clergy and lay leaders of the five churches will meet Jan. 23 at the First Presbyterian Church to plan a co-ordinated program for church-related year around activities. Rev. Nitz will be chairman.

The octave will close Jan. 25 at 9 p.m. in Angelico Hall, Dominican College, 1520 Grand Avenue.

Guest speaker will be Rev. Whitmer, whose topic will be "The Church: Is a New Model Coming Out?"

Rev. Riley will offer the opening prayer and Rev. Baker the closing prayer.

On the entertainment program will be songs by the Winifred Baker Children's Chorus, singing "The Daniel Jazz" by Herbert Chappel and the Baker Chorale singing the "Te Deum" by Zoltan Kodaly. Soloists will be Corinne Swall, Marietta Sedlock, John Gibb and Robert Reeves.

Octave committee members working with Mr. and Mrs. Parelius are Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Berner, Trinity Lutheran; Mr. and Mrs. Don Lord, Walravine Shanley, Virginia Livermore and Helen Stevens, St. Paul's Episcopal; Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Weber, St. Raphael's, and Mr. and Mrs. Ewing Bone and Mr. and Mrs. Neville Donovan, First Presbyterian.

Three Churches Will Unite For Ecumenical Programs

In keeping with the ecumenical program for Christian unity and the ecumenical action recommended by Vatican Council II, three San Anselmo and Ross churches will observe a week of prayer, beginning Wednesday.

Participating churches are St. John's Episcopal Church in Ross and St. Anselm's Catholic Church and First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo.

They will use a form of service sponsored by the National Council of Churches and the Catholic Bishop's Commission for Ecumenical Affairs.

Periods of prayer will be held independently by each congregation during the first part of the week. However, on the last three days they will unite for common prayer at 8 p.m. each evening.

On Monday, Jan. 23, they will meet at St. Anselm's; on Tuesday, Jan. 24, at the Presbyterian church, and on Wednesday, Jan. 25, at St. John's.

According to a joint announcement, the purpose of the meetings are "not to seek a common denominator in matters of belief, but to pray for the grace of unity, seeking the enlightment and good will that prepares the way for true unity."

Presbyterian Body To Hear Bible Expert

Dr. J. Arthurd Baird, who is presently writing a book on the New Testament at the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, will preach at the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at San Rafael's First Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Baird's subject will be "Hope Is The Light." He is a son of Dr. Jesse Hayes Baird, longtime seminary president.

He is currently on leave from his post as professor of religion at Wooster College in Ohio. He has held the post since 1954.

He is a graduate of Occidental College and the San Anselmo seminary. He obtained his doctorate from Edinburg University in Scotland.

Easter Prayer Weekend Slated

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—An International Prayer Fellowship, sponsored jointly by the Upper Room, daily devotional guide, and Scarritt College, will be held on the Easter Weekend, Friday evening March 24 through Easter Monday afternoon, March 27.

Inspirational addresses at the meetings in The Upper Room Chapel here will center on Gethsemane, The Last Supper, the Crucifixion, the Resurrection and Pentecost.

GUEST SPEAKER—Rev. Geoffrey P. Selth, minister of the Unitarian Fellowship in Sonoma County, will speak at tomorrow's 11 a.m. service at Unitarian Church of Marin in San Rafael. He will fill the pulpit while the San Rafael minister, Karel F. Botermans handles his duties in Sonoma County.

Service To Be By Seminarians

The Presbyterian Church of Santa Venetia of San Rafael will observe "Seminary Sunday" tomorrow with three San Francisco Theological Seminary students in charge of the rites.

Participating will be Byron Burch, David Horosz and John Waide, who also will be working in various church programs during the seminary's winter quarter.

Burch will deliver the sermon which he has entitled, "The Tarnished Image."

Teens To Conduct Rites Tomorrow

The Presbyteens, a high school youth group at Redwoods Presbyterian Church in Larkspur, will conduct the 9:30 and 11 a.m. services tomorrow.

The group will take care of the entire service, including ushering, special anthem, prayer and scripture reading and preaching.

30 Collegians To Help In Church Rites

Between 25 and 30 students from California Concordia College in Oakland will be the guests this weekend of Grace Lutheran Church of Novato as participants in a youth and evangelism program.

First program on the agenda is a youth meeting tonight for young members of the church from fifth grade through high school. Concordia students will present the program and the young churchmen will provide refreshments.

Following the program the visitors will spend the night as guests in homes of congregation members.

At tomorrow morning's worship service, a chancel drama will be presented by the visitors, portraying the parable of "The Pharisee and the Publican."

Activity will culminate tomorrow afternoon when the college visitors will assist in a church canvass of the community.

World Religion Day Observance

The Bah'ai Assembly of San Rafael will meet at 2 p.m. tomorrow at the Novato Community House on Machin Avenue to observe World Religion Day.

Guest speaker for the two-hour meeting wlil be Mrs. Douglas Gibson, who with her husband has just moved to Lucas Valley from St. Louis.

The meeting is one of 500 being held tomorrow throughout the nation by members of the Baha'i faith.

Third Lecture In Series Is Monday Night

The new light shed on biblical events and customs by his archeaological excavations at Ashdod in the Holy Land, is the subject of a lecture by Rev. David Noel Freedman at 8 p.m. Monday at the First Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo.

Dr. Freedman, acting dean of faculty and professor of Hebrew and Old Testament literature at San Francisco Theological Seminary, will tell of the summers he spent in Israel directing the excavation of what has proved to be the major Philistine stronghold in the Holy Land, and the significance of discoveries made there, including portions of a monument to Saigon II who captured the city in 712 B.C.

His lecture is the third in the seminary's 1966-67 popular series directed to the general public of Marin County. Others will be "The Realization of Future" by the Rev. Dieter Georgi, professor of New Testament Feb. 13, and "The Protestant Ethic and the Spirit of Revolution," by Rev. E. David Willis, associate professor of historical theology, on March 13.

All lectures are at 8 p.m. in the church's sanctuary, Kensington Road and Ross Avenue.

Church Council Head To Speak

SACRAMENTO—Dr. Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon and the newly elected president of the National Council of Churches, will be the keynote speaker at the 25th annual fellowship dinner of the Northern California Council of Churches here Thursday.

At the 6:30 dinner in the Scottish Rites Temple the new president of the state Council of Churches, Rt. Rev. G. Richard Millard, suffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, will be installed. He will serve as the 1967 leader of the 20 denominational bodies which form the council.

Church Plans Literary Move

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI)—A new area of emphasis by the Assemblies of God has been established with the appointment of William G. Eastlake, of Springfield as the denomination's manager of literature sales.

Eastlake will be responsible for promotion and sale of Sunday school curricular materials and vacation Bible school items, including more than 60 publications with a quarterly circulation of 2.3 million.

Lutheran Leader

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dr. Henry J. Whiting, a social welfare specialist from New York, and Howard E. Holcomb, director of admissions at Gustavus Adolphus College at St. Peter, Minn., have been named to staff positions in the new Lutheran Council in the United States of America.

Terra Linda Churches Plan Unity Services

Seven Terra Linda churches will join in a week of "Prayer for Christian Unity" beginning Wednesday with an ecumenical service of worship and prayer at 8 p.m. at St. Isabella's Catholic Church.

Two other special events are scheduled during the week.

On Sunday, Jan. 22 at 7:30 p.m. Rev. Philip Farnham, assistant director of the California Migrant Ministry, will speak on "The Meaning of Delano for the Church and Society," in St. Isabella's parish center.

The concluding program will be a joint service on Wednesday, Jan. 25 at Christ Presbyterian Church at 8 p.m., featuring a panel of laymen discussing "Living Room Dialogues."

Participating churches are Aldersgate Methodist Church, Christ Presbyterian, Faith Lutheran Church, Church of the Nativity, First Congregational Church and St. Isabella's.

Pulpit Guest Tomorrow In Corte Madera

Rev. Roscoe C. Robison, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, Providence, R.I., will be the guest preacher at tomorrow's 10:55 a.m. service at the First Baptist Church in Corte Madera.

He is presently a member of the National Board of Managers of the American Baptist Home Missions Societies and has also served on the committee of Latin American Work and the Division of Support and Interpretation.

In addition to his duties as pastor of one of the historic and strategic churches in New England, he has also served several capacities in Rhode Island as chairman of the Strategy Committee for American Baptist Churches, chairman of the Research Department of the state's Council of Churches; eastern vice president of the American Baptist Ministers National Council

He is a graduate of Washburn University in Kansas and holds two graduate degrees from Andover-Newton Theological School in Massachusetts.

The Corte Madera First Baptist Church, a community church, cordially invites the public to hear him, according to its pastor, Rev. Henry I. Fox.

Facts On New Bible Will Be Topic Of Talk

Joseph D. Gargiulo, vice principal of Novato High School and a College of Marin trustee, will speak on the new Jerusalem Bible at tomorrow's 9:40 a.m. adult inquirers class at the Novato Community Methodist Church.

The new bible includes seven books not in the King James and American Revised Standard Bibles. It was published by Doubleday in June.

Gargiulo presented his first talk on the new bible at a meeting in December.

Guests are cordially invited to attend the talk.

Witnesses Back From Conference

San Rafael's congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses have resumed their regular schedule following last weekend's convention in San Fracnisco.

According to Francis Paulson, presiding minister, more than 1,500 attended the conference.

NORMAN B. HOLMES
Lectures on Thursday

Public Lecture Set Thursday In Mill Valley

"God—Not Chance" will be the title of a public lecture by Norman B. Holmes at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Old Mill School auditorium in Mill Vallry under sponsorship of Mill Valley's First Church of Christ Scientist.

Holmes, a Christian Science teacher and practitioner in Chicago, is currently on a tour as member of the Church's Board of Lectureship.

He is a graduate of Northwestern University and served as a U.S. Naval chaplain during World War II and the Korean War.

The lecture is open to the public.

Lord's Supper To Be Observed

The Lord's Supper will be observed tomorrow at both the services at the Novato Presbyterian Church wth Rev. C. M. Croughan officiating and assisted by Dr. John J. Canoles.

The annual congregational meeting of the church will be held at 6:30 p.m. Preceding the congregational meeting a pot luck dinner will be held. Reservations are to be made with Mrs. Mike Jones. The dinner is being planned by the deasons of the church. The junior high group will serve.

Baby sitting will be available for the tiny tots beginning at 5:15 p.m. and will continue throughout dinner and the meeting.

Livermore Faces Challenges

SACRAMENTO (UPI)— California's new resources agency administrator is an outspoken "preservationist" trying to walk the tightrope between industry and the forces of conservation.

The path he chooses could make him unpopular with both —but few are quite as suited to walk it.

Norman B. Livermore Jr. of San Rafael, is a wealthy lumber company executive and a former Sierra Club director. Hei s a former High Sierra guide and an ardent hunter.

During the news conference Wednesday in which Gov. Ronald Reagan announced his appointment to the $27,500 post, Livermore plunged into the hottest conservation issues around. He took industry to task for negligent forest practices and chided the Sierra Club as being "not honest and not fair."

A newsman asked Livermore, 55, who is quitting as treasurer of Pacific Lumber Co. after 15 years, to respond to charges the lumber industry does not conform to provisions of the forest practices act.

"I frankly think the industry is vulnerable on this," Livermore said. "Now that I have left Pacific, I can give them a kick in the pants." He said an executive of his firm was chairman of the industry's Forest Practices Committee and he didn't call a meeting for three years."

But then he turned on the Sierra Club. He charged it distributed a dishonest and unfair portrayal of the plight of the redwood forests in its book, "The Last Redwoods."

Then he went on to say nobody had done more for the Sierra Club than he had, and endorsed the Redwood National Park plan of Rep. Don Clausen, R-Calif., in opposition to the club plan.

His job as agency head involves overseeing operation of the departments of fish and game, water resources, conservation and parks and recreation. For that, he gets $27,500 a year.

"I guess I will be spread pretty thin," Livermore said during an interview with United Press International. He will split his duties between the state and being treasurer of Pacific Lumber Co., San Francisco, for the next five weeks before taking the agency post on a fulltime basis in February.

Livermore, an active outdoorsman, outlined his major interests in the areas of fish and game and conservation.

"My biggest, broadest concern is for the whole wilderness concept," the High Sierra type of wilderness, he said. He wants real remote wilderness and he wants lots of it.

"I know the whole High Sierra like a book. I am a wilderness man," he said.

His background as a High Sierra guide and his love of the wilderness dictates his favorite types of hunting and fishing.

Deer hunting is his favorite, but he also is very big on ducks and quail. His fishing has been concentrated in the High Sierra, above the timberline, for golden and rainbow trout.

As Resources Agency Administrator, Livermore will be in a position of policy-making influence in the Reagan administration.

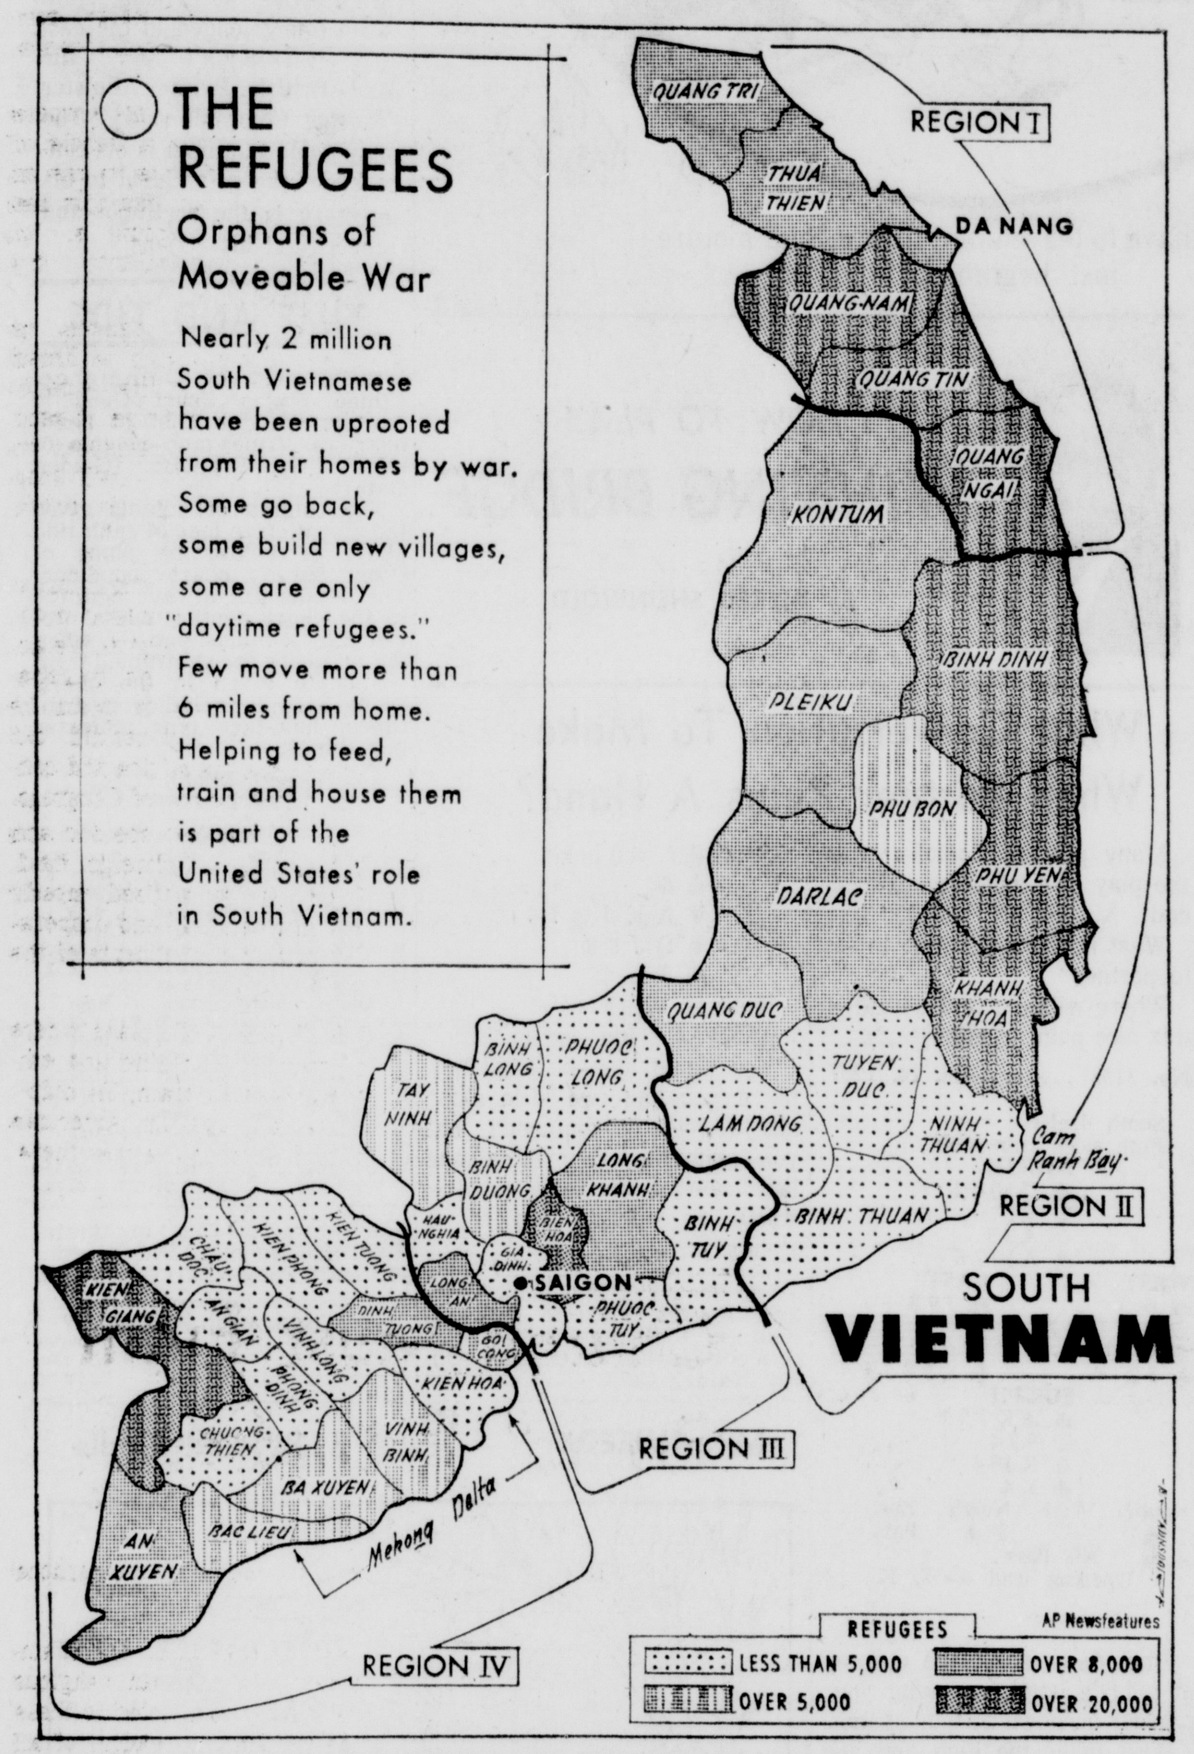
Vietnam: The Land Of The War Refugees



Over One Million Homeless; Relief Aid Costs Are High

By KENNETH L. WHITING

SAIGON (AP)—More than 10 per cent of South Vietnam's 15 million people are war refugees. Another half million are expected to pour into refugees camps this year.

The flood of refugees has created problems for the Saigon government and American advisers. It has also created hardships for the Communist guerrillas.

"Whenever villagers flee, the Viet Cong are denied coolie labor to haul their supplies, and rice growers and taxpayers," said Edward L. Lawrence of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

"The refugees are people who vote with their feet. They are voting against the Viet Cong just as those who fled East Germany voted against the Communists there," he said.

The Viet Cong clearly regard refugee relief as a danger. They have attacked resettlement villages and infiltrated temporary camps.

Vietnamese statistics show there were 1,616,663 refugees in this country from January 1964 to December 1966. More than a half million of them have been returned to their villages or have resettled in 412 government-sponsored hamlets. The Saigon regime provides 280 temporary camps — most of them crowded and unsanitary — for 754,709 who are still homeless.

Vietnamese officials label them "anti-Communist refugees." They do not include the estimated 45,000 made homeless by seasonal floods in the Mekong Delta last year.

Refugees come from all classes and areas of Vietnam. They speak different dialects and have varied backgrounds. There are highland Montagnards, Khmers, ethnic Vietnamese lowlanders, survivors of the ancient Cham empire and Thai border tribesmen.

Most were driven from their homes by the climate of brutality and uncertainty which lies over Vietnam.

Some fled excessive taxation, forced labor or impressment of their young men into military service—either by the Viet Cong or the Saigon military junta. Some are politically motivated. Some fear reprisals. Most flee to escape the crossfire of war.

The refugee flow increases sharply during and just after a major battle. The heaviest concentrations of Vietnamese in temporary shelters are along the central coast stretching north from Cam Ranh Bay to Da Nang.

Bin Dinh province, with 187,755 in temporary camps, is the leading refugee concentration. A number of vicious battles were fought in Binh Dinh in the past two years and the province has been hammered by U.S. bombers.

Rural Vietnam is roughly divided into areas held by the Saigon government, that controlled by the Viet Cong and contested regions. Most refugees come from the latter.

Few refugees trek outside their home provinces. Officials say most travel less than six miles from their home villages.

Some of those uprooted are "daytime refugees," Lawrence said. They stay in government centers at night and return to their villages by daylight.

Those who flee sometimes return to bring out relatives or property. Some have dismantled and moved their homes piece by piece.

In Operation Rice Harvest," the Vietnamese army provided security while refugees moved into a contested area during the day to harvest rice. They withdrew to refugee centers at night.

The Saigon government is expected to increase the rice subsidy this year to lure refugee farmers back to their paddies.

Military action has been increasing largely in the fertile Mekong Delta where almost half of all South Vietnamese live. Refugees will increase in the delta if large scale military operations get underway—as expected—in 1967, experts said.

Temporary refugee camps grow into permanent hamlets if there is sufficinet arable land. Where farmland is scarce relief officials hope to retrain refugees to hold technical or semi-skilled jobs.

Refugee centers near Cam Ranh Bay are training Vietnamese to work in the sprawling U.S. installation. They are needed now for the war effort and officials expect they will provide a labor force when it is converted to peacetime usage.

Refugees are questioned closely when they turn themselves in. They are issued an identification card which serves as an emergency ration card. A duplicate is kept by authorities as a security check.

The homeless each get 10 piasters (about 7 cents U.S.) per day for a month. In emergencies, this payment is extended for two or three months.

The government aims to get refugees back home or resettled quickly. Those who resettle receive 5,000 piasters (about $35) per family, a six-month rice ration and 10 bags of cement and 20 sheets of aluminum to build a new house.

About $14 million in U.S. commodities will be used for refugee relief this year.

State Of The Union And Reaction

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

From Peking to Peoria, from Karachi to Kalamazoo, governments and plain citizens listened closely this week while the President of the United States delivered his annual State of the Union message.

And in a world split by conflicting ideologies and in a democratic nation where partisan politics are a way of life, almost anything he could say was bound to provoke controversy.

President Johnson, in his 75-minutes speech, spoke of many things—the funds necessary to pay for expanding Great Society and the war in Vietnam; the conduct of the war itself; the easing of the cold-war; civil rights legislation; the war against crime; the merging of the Labor and Commerce departments; and an increase in Social Security benefits.

Domestically, Johnson's proposal for a 6 per cent surcharge on both corporate and individual income taxes, drew the most critical reaction.

In the field of foreign affairs, the President drew the loudest applause when he declared that the United States would stand firm in Vietnam and maintain its pressure on the Communist foe "until he realizes that the war he started is costing him more than he can hope ever to gain."

Behind The News

Commission Of The Californias Will Get Close Reagan Attention

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—The Commission of the Californias is expected to get considerable attention from Gov. Ronald Reagan in the coming months.

It is a little known two-year-old commission, but highly important issues are pending before it such as culture, tourism, economics and education involving California, Mexico.

Representatives of the commission along with Gov. Hugo Cervantes del Rio of Baja California territory and Gov. Raul Sanchez Diaz of the state of Baja California and federal officials of both countries hope to meet with Reagan, Lt. Gov. Robert Finch and others early in March to determine the future of the organization.

Primarily, it will be a get acquainted meeting but accomplishments and plans will play a key role.

Reagan in December sent a letter to Southbay Daily Breeze Editor and Publisher Robert Curry, a commission member, announcing his support of the organization.

Finch will be a member of the commission and told Dr. Ernest O'Byrne, secretary general of the commission that he would take a "very active role."

A major problem, however, will be appointment of members to the commission. Seven members are appointed by the governor, five by the Assembly speaker and five by the Senate.

The current projects were undertaken during the administration fo Gov. Edmund G. Brown and the March meeting will go a long way towards determining if the same course should be followed or if some changes will be made.

The commission was given birth in a bill introduced by then Sen. Aaron Quick, D-Calexico, in March, 1964. Brown and the late Gov. Eligio Esquivel of Baja California officially established it June 25, 1964.

In law, California has a commission and the State of Baja California also has a commission.

The territory of Baja California that part below the 28th parallel also is involved but under present state law the California commission is not charged with working with the territory.

In fact, the organizations act as one group and meet on an average of about every three months or less in a major California or Baja California city.

In less than two years the commission has established a rehabilitation and vocational training center for the deaf in Tijuana, has been instrumental in creating vocational schools in Baja California and has helped convince the Mexican Tourist Department to cut restrictions on U. S. citizens visiting Mexico by boat.

Curry last June announced his newspaper had given a $12,000 grant to establish an art center and school in La Paz, Baja California.

Much of the work of the commission was delayed or changed after Eligio Esquivel died.

An interim governor was appointed until the election of Sanchez Diaz. Some commission officials feel the same problem may occur again with the new Reagan administration.

The organization is urging construction of a highway traversing the length of Baja California to open the primitive wilderness areas to tourists.

The commission also may be called on to coordinate a bicentennial celebration in 1969 to mark the 200th anniversary of the founding of the first chain of missions begun by Father Junipero Serra.

Various suggestions are being considered at the present with the idea of an international exposition adjacent to the border the one receiving most consideration The commission has no official standing in this yet but expects to become involved soon.

As part of this upcoming celebration, the commission has urged restoration of the missions Father Serra founded, starting with the first one, the mission of San Fernando Velicata near Loreto in the Territory of Baja California.

The Mexican government has given its approval, and at the request of the commission, Mayor John Shelly of San Francisco recently put through a resolution calling for a caravan of cars to travel from mission to mission, celebrating their founding. The caravan would end at Loreto, but the problem of poor roads may hamper the plans.

Call For Mediation Service In Agricultural Labor Feuds

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — The Senate fact-finding committee on agriculture has recommended establishment of a conciliation and mediation service in the state Department of Agriculture to endeavor to resolve agricultural labor disputes.

The committee's report also recommended that legislation be enacted to require that any contract between growers and employees include a "no strike at harvest or other critical time" provision. A possible alternative to this would be the requirement that a 30 or 60-day notice of intention to strike be given an employer by the employee group.

This waiting period could be used to submit the dispute to the mediation and conciliation service.

The report was presented by Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ojai.

The report said the committee found a very real problem in the lack of communication between employers and employees in agriculture in the areas of union recognition, hours, wages, and working conditions. This lack of communication has been extremely costly in that it has resulted in strikes which have harmed the parties involved, as well as the consuming public.

A fourth recommendation of the committee was that the secret ballot be mandatory in any representation election. And it said that, after a bargaining agent is selected, the period of at least one year should elapse before a succeeding representation election could be held.

The committee said the mediation and conciliation service could be patterned after the proposal for such a service by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Lagomarsino said the report was based primarily upon the voluminous testimony presented to the committee at the comprehensive and in depth hearings held at Delano and Sacramento during 1966. Two other incumbent senators, Howard Way, R-Exeter, and Jack Schrade, R-San Diego, signed the report along with Lagomarsino.

The report also was signed by former Sens. Hugh P. Donnelly, D-Turlock; Aaron Quick, D-Chula Vista; Joseph A. Rattigan, D-Santa Rosa (with reservations); Harold Sedgwick, R-Yuba City, William Symons, Jr., R-Laws; Robert D. Williams, D-Hanford; Vernon L. Sturgeon, R-Paso Robles.

Mission Sesquicentennial Recalls Old Hispanic Ties

AS WAVE AFTER WAVE of newcomers have swept over California since World War II, the last human links with our state's Spanish and Mexican heritage has been largely obliterated.

In this year of our Mission San Rafael's 150th birthday anniversary, we recall earlier days with nostalgia.

If you attended high school in one of the older established communities along the route of El Camino Real — the trail from one Spanish Mission to the next, extending from San Diego to Sonoma — chances were good that you would have a classmate named Yorba, Arguello, Salido, Pacheco, Vallejo, Carillo or one of the many other family names firmly established here long before the first Yankee set foot in what is now the Golden State.

In those 1920s and 1930s Mexicans, especially in Southern California, were the targets for social and economic discrimination as bad as the worst applied to Negroes in Southern States. Anybody with an Hispanic name was not highly regarded.

IF YOU COULD pierce this wall of discrimination that surrounded people who bore any of the honored names of history, the story was thrilling.

Take the Salidos. Their forebears came in 1519 with Cortez and the conquistadores who conquered Montezuma's Aztecs and plundered all Mexico. The first Salido wound up as overlord for the rich silver mines in Alamos, Sonora. How did the Salidos get to the California we know? Ultimately they became political refugees and found asylum in Arizona and Southern California.

Arguello? A proud early California family whose descendants were caretakers of Mission Capistrano in the 1920s.

Yorba? The first Yorba was a corporal in the Portola expedition sent to make the first overland exploration and colonization effort.

Corporal Yorba picked out a beautiful site for a rancho overlooking Santa Ana River canyon, in what is now Orange County.

Before World War II, Yorbas still lived on what remained of that rancho, some of them in an ancient adobe structure which dated back to the time of the Portola exploration and colonization trek in 1669.

Leo Carrillo, the late movie actor, was a native San Franciscan who bore his famous name proudly.

In Marin County, the name Pacheco still survives, as do a few others.

To repeat, as waves and waves of newcomers have swept over California since World War II, most of the last of these human links with our state's Spanish and Mexican heritage have been largely lost.

It is tragic but probably unavoidable.

CALIFORNIA'S connection with Mexico and Spain was always through what we now know as Baja California.

When the Hispanic connections were cut in 1850, as the Yankees took over California, they were severed almost completely.

For more than a century, Baja has been ignored by U.S. Californians.

The last of Baja's great chain of missions was built long before the first of our California missions were begun.

Baja's earliest missions were about two centuries old before Father Serra began his mission work in what is now our U.S. California.

Most latter-day Yankee immigrants to U.S. California are largely ignorant of these historic facts.

THE LITTLE PUBLICIZED "Commission on the Californias" authorized nearly three years ago by our State Legislature seems to be making a start toward overcoming this public apathy toward our sister Californias — the state of Baja California del Norte and the territory of Baja California del Sur — south of the border.

Our sister state to the south has formed a similar commission. The two commissions have informally and unofficially amalgamated to act as one.

Lt. Gov. Finch of the new administration in Sacramento has indicated his intention to be an active supporter and participant in the commissions' efforts to reestablish cooperative communications and contacts between the two sister California states.

The commissions plan their next meeting in early spring at the University of California at Davis.

It is to be hoped that 1967 will see the mission sesquicentennial in San Rafael renew people's interest in Marin's Hispanic heritage and that 1967 will see the Commission on the Californias focus public attention on the desirability of being neighborly with the two Californias who are our closest neighbors to the south.

It took Baja California about 200 years to wake up to the important potential of the California we know.

It has taken us about 100 years to wake up to the importance of establishing more neighborly relations with Baja California.

Let us hope we make progress more swiftly in the future.

—Jack Craemer

CHILD'S SEVERED ARM RESTORED

A little girl whose arm was completely severed can now use it to wash, feed and dress herself.

When an auto collision with a speeding train near Denver, Colorado, badly injured the 4-year-old, her arm was left lying on the ground. But a state policeman saw the arm and put it in the ambulance, thinking that doctors might be able to do something with it. They did.

Eight surgeons, three pediatricians and two anesthesiologists spent six hours attempting the state's first reimplantation of a severed limb.

Sixteen months later the little girl could move her wrist and elbow and some feeling had returned to her hand. Doctors cautiously stated that the arm was "doing quite well."

Despite the heavy odds against success, the law officer's decision vitally affected the girl's future life. In a similar way, as long as we make the effort, the Lord can bring good out of a critical situation. But He expects us to try wholeheartedly.

"He gave skill to men that He might be glorified . . . By them He heals and takes away pain."

(Sirach 38:6-7)

Give me a sense of undaunted hope, Father, so that with Your help, I may improve even the worst of situations.

Best Traffic Safety Idea: Cut Speeding

Editor, Independent-Journal:

This is a contribution to your "What Our Readers Say" column. SPEED-DRIVING.

Is the administration barking at the wrong tree? Why get on the automobile manufacturers for safety devices? We can have all kinds of safety devices in our cars but if the driver loses control of his driving due to speed then all these safety devices are in vain. Why not encourage slow driving instead? We can always correct ourselves if we go slow. I am all against fast driving. Going 45 mph and 50 mph is fast enough.

What's the hurry anyway? Are we in a race? America, or shall I say "Department of Motor Vehicles," please wake up. The killer is speed. Remember these old adages "haste makes waste" and "slow but sure."

I hope you could use this for your paper.

Report Of Collision Results In Protest

Editor, Independent-Journal:

In the Jan. 4 issue of your paper you printed a story captioned "Kentfield School Staffers in Collision" (or similar words).

The collision occurred at 9:40 a.m. as the three staff members were on their way from their duties at Wolfe Grade School to their next classes at Greenbrae School.

Your gross and inexcusable error in time (your article said the incident occurred at One a.m.) gave a connotation of unsavory flavor to a simple, unfortunate traffic accident.

Is it your policy to write up every accident that happens in the county? Do you list occupations and ages (every age you quoted was incorrect) of every person involved in every minor traffic mishap?

It is my hope that "Marin's Best-Seller" will take its responsibilities for honest reporting more seriously in the future.

AVANELL MUNCH

(A teletype transmission foulup resulted in the accident being reported as having happened at 1 a.m. It was at 9:40 a.m. The Independent-Journal regrets this error. As to identification of employment, this was done because it is highly unusual for three people in the same employ to be involved in a traffic accident.—Editor)

At 56 You're Young Enough To Run For President But Not For P-TA

NEW YORK (AP) — A glance at the calendar reminds me that next month I'll be 56 years old.

What other blows can mankind take and still endure?

The prospect of being 56 inevitably inflicts philosphic thoughts on a fellow.

Reaching that age may be a hollow victory, but it is still a victory. A majority of the human beings who have teemed the earth never lived to be 56.

Once you go beyond 55 you are getting into winter territory. You have an instinctive realization that there's frost ahead. It hits you somewhere inside like the blow of a mammoth hammer.

YOU HAVE TO face up to the fact that in many ways you are definitely over the hill. This has a glad as well as a sad side.

It is pleasant to know that you are still young enough to run for the presidency, if your country should call you, but too hold to have to run for a post in the local P-TA.

There are other erosions and compensations at 56:

You no longer have to read the morale messages the boss pins up on the company bulletin board.

The doctor has a pretty definite idea what's wrong with you, and you know pretty well what's wrong with him. You enjoy exchanging symptoms.

If you donate a pint to the office blood bank, everybody tells you that you are a hero —something you've known for a long time.

ON YOUR ACTUAL birthday you get 27 get well cards and three careful pecks on the cheek by three homely secretaries.

You figure it is rather foolish to get short-winded bending over tying your shoelaces when they now sell shoes that don't need shoelaces.

Every time you wear a bow tie you feel devilish.

You decide it is easier to leave your bifocal glasses on all day than to waste your strength whipping them on and off.

It occurs to you now and and then that William McKinley and Calvin Coolidge have never been really fully appreciated.

You abandon any idea of growing a beard because you know it would come out all white.

WHEN YOU SEE a fellow go up the stairs two at a time you realize the world will never run out of fools.

It is a matter of quiet pride that you are married to a woman who doesn't wear a miniskirt.

It worries you terribly if one of your enemies falls ill. What a gap there'd be if there weren't any old enemies left to keep your spleen healthy.

You secretly agree with most of the things your wife says, but you'd rather die than admit it to her.

You can express most of your own opinions about the world with a clearcut grunt.

At 56 you lose any fear you ever had of second childhood. In your heart of hearts you realize you are still in your first childhood, that nobody ever really grows up inside, and that life is always a kindergarten — but a worthwhile one.

LBJ's State Of Union Message Differs From His Earlier Ones

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, bouncing back from months of comparative silence, is as full of energy and ideas as ever, which would seem to wash out any guessing that he won't try for a second term in 1968.

There was a time, earlier in his presidency, when Johnson kept himself almost constantly in the public eye with speeches or pronouncements. He did an almost complete about face on that in the last months of 1966.

BUT HIS State of the Union message Tuesday night, delivered to Congress in person and taking up almost one hour and 10 minutes of national television and radio time, was like his three previous messages, starting in 1964.

It dripped with proposals and programs and promises to get on with unfinished business. In domestic affairs alone the President dipped into at least 21 different fields with recommendations made then or to be made.

Yet, there was a difference between Tuesday night's talk and the previous State of the Union messages, both in what he said and the way he said it.

GONE WAS the excessive use of facial expressions as he explored the problems and made his points. He was straightfaced as he addressed Congress.

Those who have been critical of him for the way he delivered a talk — the expressions, the eye-squinting, the gestures — would have trouble finding the same fault in this latest talk.

In short, Johnson on television Tuesday night was a different Johnson. This showed up, too, at his televised news conference Dec. 31. There is as much ginger as ever but less self-consciousness.

The new Johnson is a lot more careful and thoughtful about his public image.

FURTHER the writing technique in Tuesday night's message was better than the earlier ones in sentence structure and matter-of-factness without trimmings or over-use of short sentences.

And, full of ideas as Tuesday night's message was, it still was less controversial than some of its predecessors. Except for his suggestion to increase taxes to help pay for the war in Vietnam, there was very little to stir his listeners on racial, economic or other grounds.

Such hot issues of the past, like medicare or federal aid to education, were missing. Johnson's stress was on a better life for everybody in this country.

HIS SUGGESTIONS for improvement ranged from fighting poverty to building up better police forces to fight crime and giving the states ever more federal aid and cooperation.

But Johnson did not propose giving the states a bundle of federal tax revenue to use as they pleased, an idea that has been talked about a lot recently, particularly by Republicans.

The recommendations he made covered such a broad field of American life — backed up by his promise to send Congress special messages on a number of them — will keep him busy and in the public mind for months.

IN SHORT, the whole thrust of his talk on domestic problems was one of aggressive action by him although, by repetition, he made it plain he wouldn't be high-handed but would seek the advice and consent and approval of Congress.

He was far less specific and inclusive in the foreign field. There he generalized mostly on American help and cooperation in all the continents of the world.

BUT THE ONE place where he was very specific and emphatic was Vietnam. He didn't budge an inch on American participation in the war there.

Church Must Fight Racial Prejudice

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG JR.

The immorality of racial prejudice and discrimination presents a great challenge to the churches of America. As guardians of our ethical heritage, they must bear a greater responsibility for creating a moral climate which will help break down the barriers which imprison people in substandard living conditions for no reason other than their color.

THE PROBLEM the churches face is compounded by the prejudice of many of their congregations. Two Protestant clergymen in Pennsylvania were recently forced to leave their churches for other assignments because they were too active in the civil rights struggle.

One was subject to harassment which included threatening phone calls and attempts to force his car off the road. The other was told he should have preached more sermons on "peace of mind." Apparently some people believe sermons should be "talk to sleep by" rather than stimulating moral challenges.

This refusal to face the moral crisis of our national life is shared by too many congregations. In the South many churches actively aid segregationists, even allowing segregated schools to be set up in church buildings for the purpose of frustrating public school integration. And many ministers in all sections are content to follow their parishioner's prejudices, in defiance of the ideals of brotherhood and equality.

FORTUNATELY, the mainstream of American religious life is fully committed to these ideals. Religious leaders of all faiths have spoken out for social justice and have taken the lead in fighting for equal rights.

Last spring the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, representing more than 3 million people, overwhelmingly approved a creedal statement affirming its obligation to work for social justice. Other leading church bodies have made similar statements.

Countless priests, nuns, ministers and rabbis have risked danger in civil rights demonstrations in the South, and some have been martyred there. Their courage and dedication are symbols of the determination of enlightened religious leaders to keep their faith relevant to the modern world and to help solve the great problems of our day.

MANY CHURCHES are active in anti-poverty programs and others are using church contacts to help insure fair employment practices by companies working for them.

Recently the National Conference of Catholic Bishops issued a Pastoral statement on Race Relations and Poverty which called for "changing the hearts of men" by instilling a "true sense of neighborliness, based upon a religiously inspired conviction that all men are equal before God and that all should be welcomed in our midst."

"Changing the hearts of men" will not be easy, but it is a task for which our churches are eminently suited. A start should be made in some of our more comfortable suburbs where racial exclusion in housing seems to be an article of faith. An effort must also be made to help those insecure, newly-arrived members of the lower-middle class, like those in Chicago who threw rocks at priests and nuns demonstrating for open housing. Their moral education has not increased as much as their incomes have.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Jan. 14, the 14th day of 1967 with 351 to follow.

The moon is between the new and first quarter stages; the morning stars are Mars and Jupiter; the evening stars are Saturn, Jupiter and Venus.

Philippine statesman Carlos Romulo was born on this day in 1899.

On this day in history:

In 1914, Henry Ford began making automobiles by the assembly line method.

In 1943, President Franklin Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill began a 10-day meeting in Morocco to plan Allied offensives aimed at the "unconditional surrender" of the Axis powers.

In 1959, the firing squads of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro executed [illegible] persons in two weeks.

In 1964, more than 140 persons died before a driving snowstorm finally ended in the east.

A thought for the day—British Prime Minister Winston Churchill said: "The only guide to a man is his conscience—the only shield to his memory is the rectitude and sincerity of his actions."

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

What Conversation To Make When Partner Ruins A Hand?

Many players flounder when the play of a hand comes to an end.

What is the right thing to say to partner?

Where will you find advise on this nice point of etiquette?

Imagine yourself the dummy in today's hand, watching your partner go down at four spades.

West takes the king and ace of hearts, and East signals for a continuation by playing the eight of hearts first and then the three.

HE'S STUDYING

West continues with the jack of hearts, and your partner studies the dummy very carefully.

The careful study does not deceive you, for South is wondering whether to ruff with dummy's queen or with dummy's ten of trumps.

South is calculating that the ten of spades has an even chance to shut East out.

The queen of spades will work perhaps 52 per cent of the time, since the jack will drop singleton or doubleton about that often.

EITHER WILL FAIL

You keep a straight face, knowing that either plan will fail. Finally, your partner ruffs with dummy's ten of spades.

East overruffs with the jack, and your partner eventually loses a diamond trick.

Down one.

What do you say to your partner? The correct thing is: "Please cut the cards for the next deal." Then close your teeth tightly together and look at your fingernails.

It is considered poor form to punch your partner in the nose, even though he did throw a cold hand away.

South should not ruff the jack of hearts at all.

Instead, he should throw a diamond from the dummy.

Then he can win any continuation, draw trumps and ruff his third diamond in dummy.

But keep it to yourself; maybe your partner will be equally restrained when you're the villain of the piece.

As dealer, you hold:

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one heart.

You would like the hand better if you had two little clubs and K-J-9-8 of diamonds, but you cannot have everything your little heart desires. The hand is worth an opening bid as it stands.

Livermore Faces Challenges

SACRAMENTO (UPI)— California's new resources agency administrator is an outspoken "preservationist" trying to walk the tightrope between industry and the forces of conservation.

The path he chooses could make him unpopular with both —but few are quite as suited to walk it.

Norman B. Livermore Jr. of San Rafael, is a wealthy lumber company executive and a former Sierra Club director. He is a former High Sierra guide and an ardent hunter.

During the news conference Wednesday in which Gov. Ronald Reagan announced his appointment to the $27,500 post, Livermore plunged into the hottest conservation issues around. He took industry to task for negligent forest practices and chided the Sierra Club as being "not honest and not fair."

A newsman asked Livermore, 55, who is quitting as treasurer of Pacific Lumber Co. after 15 years, to respond to charges the lumber industry does not conform to provisions of the forest practices act.

"I frankly think the industry is vulnerable on this," Livermore said. "Now that I have left Pacific, I can give them a kick in the pants." He said an executive of his firm was chairman of the industry's Forest Practices Committee and he didn't call a meeting for three years."

But then he turned on the Sierra Club. He charged it distributed a dishonest and unfair portrayal of the plight of the redwood forests in its book, "The Last Redwoods."

Then he went on to say nobody had done more for the Sierra Club than he had, and endorsed the Redwood National Park plan of Rep. Don Clausen, R-Calif., in opposition to the club plan.

His job as agency head involves overseeing operation of the departments of fish and game, water resources, conservation and parks and recreation. For that, he gets $27,500 a year.

"I guess I will be spread pretty thin," Livermore said during an interview with United Press International. He will split his duties between the state and being treasurer of Pacific Lumber Co., San Francisco, for the next five weeks before taking the agency post on a fulltime basis in February.

Livermore, an active outdoorsman, outlined his major interests in the areas of fish and game and conservation.

"My biggest, broadest concern is for the whole wilderness concept," the High Sierra type of wilderness, he said. He wants real remote wilderness and he wants lots of it.

"I know the whole High Sierra like a book. I am a wilderness man," he said.

His background as a High Sierra guide and his love of the wilderness dictates his favorite types of hunting and fishing.

Deer hunting is his favorite, but he also is very big on ducks and quail. His fishing has been concentrated in the High Sierra, above the timberline, for golden and rainbow trout.

As Resources Agency Administrator, Livermore will be in a position of policy-making influence in the Reagan administration.

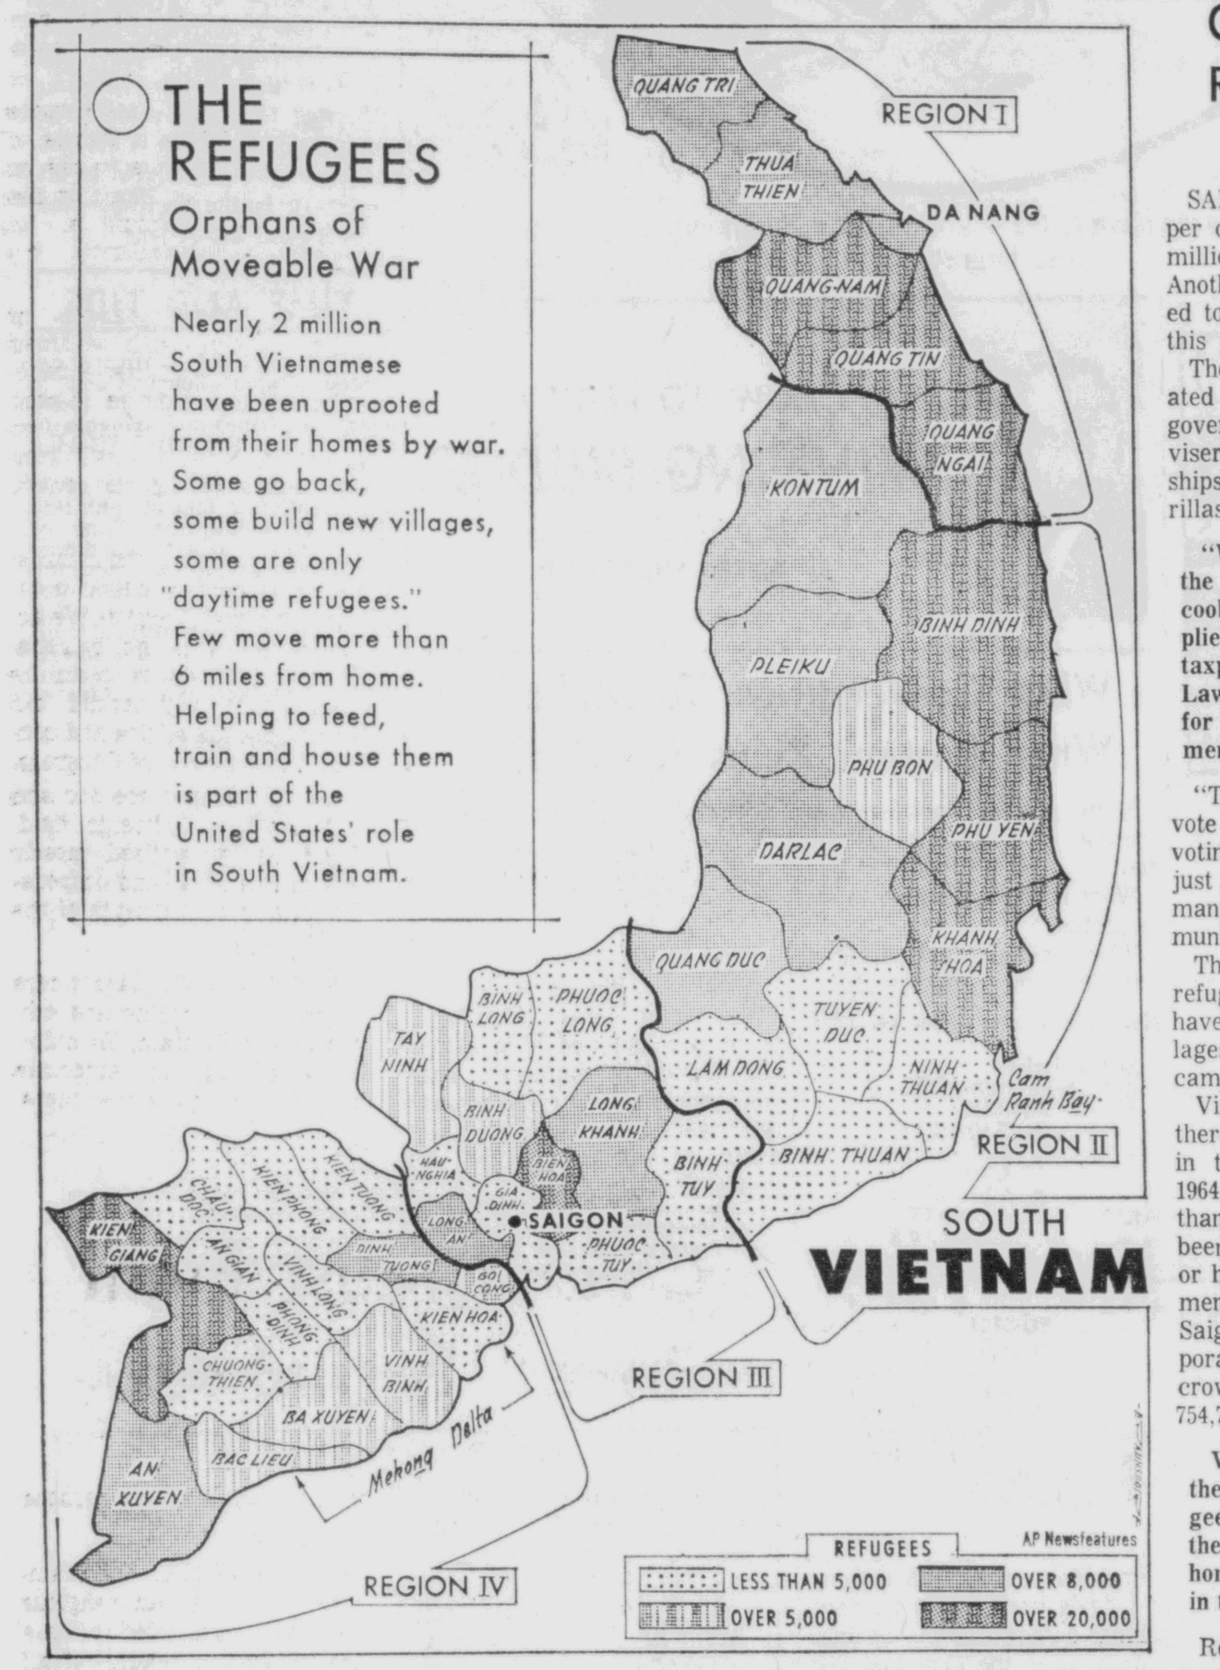
Vietnam: The Land Of The War Refugees



THE REFUGEES
Orphans of Moveable War

Nearly 2 million South Vietnamese have been uprooted from their homes by war. Some go back, some build new villages, some are only "daytime refugees." Few move more than 6 miles from home. Helping to feed, train and house them is part of the United States' role in South Vietnam.

Over One Million Homeless; Relief Aid Costs Are High

By KENNETH L. WHITING

SAIGON (AP)—More than 10 per cent of South Vietnam's 15 million people are war refugees. Another half million are expected to pour into refugees camps this year.

The flood of refugees has created problems for the Saigon government and American advisers. It has also created hardships for the Communist guerrillas.

"Whenever villagers flee, the Viet Cong are denied coolie labor to haul their supplies, and rice growers and taxpayers," said Edward L. Lawrence of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

"The refugees are people who vote with their feet. They are voting against the Viet Cong just as those who fled East Germany voted against the Communists there," he said.

The Viet Cong clearly regard refugee relief as a danger. They have attacked resettlement villages and infiltrated temporary camps.

Vietnamese statistics show there were 1,616,663 refugees in this country from January 1964 to December 1966. More than a half million of them have been returned to their villages or have resettled in 412 government-sponsored hamlets. The Saigon regime provides 280 temporary camps — most of them crowded and unsanitary — for 754,709 who are still homeless.

Vietnamese officials label them "anti-Communist refugees." They do not include the estimated 45,000 made homeless by seasonal floods in the Mekong Delta last year.

Refugees come from all classes and areas of Vietnam. They speak different dialects and have varied backgrounds. There are highland Montagnards, Khmers, ethnic Vietnamese lowlanders, survivors of the ancient Cham empire and Thai border tribesmen.

Most were driven from their homes by the climate of brutality and uncertainty which lies over Vietnam.

Some fled excessive taxation, forced labor or impressment of their young men into military service—either by the Viet Cong or the Saigon military junta. Some are politically motivated. Some fear reprisals. Most flee to escape the crossfire of war.

The refugee flow increases sharply during and just after a major battle. The heaviest concentrations of Vietnamese in temporary shelters are along the central coast stretching north from Cam Ranh Bay to Da Nang.

Bin Dinh province, with 187,755 in temporary camps, is the leading refugee concentration. A number of vicious battles were fought in Binh Dinh in the past two years and the province has been hammered by U.S. bombers.

Rural Vietnam is roughly divided into areas held by the Saigon government, that controlled by the Viet Cong and contested regions. Most refugees come from the latter.

Few refugees trek outside their home provinces. Officials say most travel less than six miles from their home villages.

Some of those uprooted are "daytime refugees," Lawrence said. They stay in government centers at night and return to their villages by daylight.

Those who flee sometimes return to bring out relatives or property. Some have dismantled and moved their homes piece by piece.

In Operation Rice Harvest," the Vietnamese army provided security while refugees moved into a contested area during the day to harvest rice. They withdrew to refugee centers at night.

The Saigon government is expected to increase the rice subsidy this year to lure refugee farmers back to their paddies.

Military action has been increasing largely in the fertile Mekong Delta where almost half of all South Vietnamese live. Refugees will increase in the delta if large scale military operations get underway—as expected—in 1967, experts said.

Temporary refugee camps grow into permanent hamlets if there is sufficinet arable land. Where farmland is scarce relief officials hope to retrain refugees to hold technical or semi-skilled jobs.

Refugee centers near Cam Ranh Bay are training Vietnamese to work in the sprawling U.S. installation. They are needed now for the war effort and officials expect they will provide a labor force when it is converted to peacetime usage.

Refugees are questioned closely when they turn themselves in. They are issued an identification card which serves as an emergency ration card. A duplicate is kept by authorities as a security check.

The homeless each get 10 piasters (about 7 cents U.S.) per day for a month. In emergencies, this payment is extended for two or three months.

The government aims to get refugees back home or resettled quickly. Those who resettle receive 5,000 piasters (about $35) per family, a six-month rice ration and 10 bags of cement and 20 sheets of aluminum to build a new house.

About $14 million in U.S. commodities will be used for refugee relief this year.

This Week In The World

State Of The Union And Reaction

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

From Peking to Peoria, from Karachi to Kalamazoo, governments and plain citizens listened closely this week while the President of the United States delivered his annual State of the Union message.

And in a world split by conflicting ideologies and in a democratic nation where partisan politics are a way of life, almost anything he could say was bound to provoke controversy.

President Johnson, in his 75-minutes speech, spoke of many things—the funds necessary to pay for expanding Great Society and the war in Vietnam; the conduct of the war itself; the easing of the cold-war; civil rights legislation; the war against crime; the merging of the Labor and Commerce departments; and an increase in Social Security benefits.

Domestically, Johnson's proposal for a 6 per cent surcharge on both corporate and individual income taxes, drew the most critical reaction.

In the field of foreign affairs, the President drew the loudest applause when he declared that the United States would stand firm in Vietnam and maintain its pressure on the Communist foe "until he realizes that the war he started is costing him more than he can hope ever to gain."

Behind The News

Commission Of The Californias Will Get Close Reagan Attention

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—The Commission of the Californias is expected to get considerable attention from Gov. Ronald Reagan in the coming months.

It is a little known two-year-old commission, but highly important issues are pending before it such as culture, tourism, economics and education involving California, Mexico.

Representatives of the commission along with Gov. Hugo Cervantes del Rio of Baja California territory and Gov. Raul Sanchez Diaz of the state of Baja California and federal officials of both countries hope to meet with Reagan, Lt. Gov. Robert Finch and others early in March to determine the future of the organization.

Primarily, it will be a get acquainted meeting but accomplishments and plans will play a key role.

Reagan in December sent a letter to Southbay Daily Breeze Editor and Publisher Robert Curry, a commission member, announcing his support of the organization.

Finch will be a member of the commission and told Dr. Ernest O'Byrne, secretary general of the commission that he would take a "very active role."

A major problem, however, will be appointment of members to the commission. Seven members are appointed by the governor, five by the Assembly speaker and five by the Senate.

The current projects were undertaken during the administration fo Gov. Edmund G. Brown and the March meeting will go a long way towards determining if the same course should be followed or if some changes will be made.

The commission was given birth in a bill introduced by then Sen. Aaron Quick, D-Calexico, in March, 1964. Brown and the late Gov. Eligio Esquivel of Baja California officially established it June 25, 1964.

In law, California has a commission and the State of Baja California also has a commission.

The territory of Baja California that part below the 28th parallel also is involved but under present state law the California commission is not charged with working with the territory.

In fact, the organizations act as one group and meet on an average of about every three months or less in a major California or Baja California city.

In less than two years the commission has established a rehabilitation and vocational training center for the deaf in Tijuana, has been instrumental in creating vocational schools in Baja California and has helped convince the Mexican Tourist Department to cut restrictions on U. S. citizens visiting Mexico by boat.

Curry last June announced his newspaper had given a $12,000 grant to establish an art center and school in La Paz, Baja California.

Much of the work of the commission was delayed or changed after Eligio Esquivel died.

An interim governor was appointed until the election of Sanchez Diaz. Some commission officials feel the same problem may occur again with the new Reagan administration.

The organization is urging construction of a highway traversing the length of Baja California to open the primitive wilderness areas to tourists.

The commission also may be called on to coordinate a bicentennial celebration in 1969 to mark the 200th anniversary of the founding of the first chain of missions begun by Father Junipero Serra.

Various suggestions are being considered at the present with the idea of an international exposition adjacent to the border the one receiving most consideration The commission has no official standing in this yet but expects to become involved soon.

As part of this upcoming celebration, the commission has urged restoration of the missions Father Serra founded, starting with the first one, the mission of San Fernando Velicata near Loreto in the Territory of Baja California.

The Mexican government has given its approval, and at the request of the commission, Mayor John Shelly of San Francisco recently put through a resolution calling for a caravan of cars to travel from mission to mission, celebrating their founding. The caravan would end at Loreto, but the problem of poor roads may hamper the plans.

Call For Mediation Service In Agricultural Labor Feuds

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — The Senate fact-finding committee on agriculture has recommended establishment of a conciliation and mediation service in the state Department of Agriculture to endeavor to resolve agricultural labor disputes.

The committee's report also recommended that legislation be enacted to require that any contract between growers and employees include a "no strike at harvest or other critical time" provision. A possible alternative to this would be the requirement that a 30 or 60-day notice of intention to strike be given an employer by the employee group.

This waiting period could be used to submit the dispute to the mediation and conciliation service.

The report was presented by Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ojai.

The report said the committee found a very real problem in the lack of communication between employers and employees in agriculture in the areas of union recognition, hours, wages, and working conditions. This lack of communication has been extremely costly in that it has resulted in strikes which have harmed the parties involved, as well as the consuming public.

A fourth recommendation of the committee was that the secret ballot be mandatory in any representation election. And it said that, after a bargaining agent is selected, the period of at least one year should elapse before a succeeding representation election could be held.

The committee said the mediation and conciliation service could be patterned after the proposal for such a service by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Lagomarsino said the report was based primarily upon the voluminous testimony presented to the committee at the comprehensive and in depth hearings held at Delano and Sacramento during 1966. Two other incumbent senators, Howard Way, R-Exeter, and Jack Schrade, R-San Diego, signed the report along with Lagomarsino.

The report also was signed by former Sens. Hugh P. Donnelly, D-Turlock; Aaron Quick, D-Chula Vista; Joseph A. Rattigan, D-Santa Rosa (with reservations); Harold Sedgwick, R-Yuba City, William Symons, Jr., R-Laws; Robert D. Williams, D-Hanford; Vernon L. Sturgeon, R-Paso Robles.

Putting Thread By Window Will Prevent Its Breaking

By EUNICE FARMER

I've tried to get my scrapbook of columns in order just as I have suggested you do in the past. Somehow or other, I have misplaced a few of these columns and would very much like to have one complete set. If any of you have a complete set from the past seven years and would be willing to part with a few of them, please drop me a line.

MRS. W.H. says: Since so many women have complained about the quality of thread today, thought I'd pass this bit of information on to you for what it's worth (even though it sounds a little silly).

This, incidentally, is a quote from a book I read, it's not my idea. "Since thread is a fiber, it needs moisture to prevent breaking. Place your thread by an open window when it rains or there is fog." (I have also put my thread near steam of my steam iron.) It really does work, and the thread doesn't break nearly so often.

If you are a new reader of Sew Simple, perhaps you would like a copy of my leaflet "Twenty Most Frequently Asked Questions." Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal.

Mrs. Walter F. Dillemuth, La Jolla, Calif., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for the following suggestion.

This isn't exactly a sewing tip, but it's been helpful to me and to others who have to sew in a carpeted area. An amazingly quick and easy method of cleaning up those threads and bits of fabric is an ordinary hairbrush. Just brush the rug and there will be no need to drag out the vacuum. Even helps find those dropped pins that have a way of working into the pile and can be found only by bare-footed children! (Thanks to your suggestion, I've found it only takes minutes to run over any carpet you've dragged your work across and it's so simple.)

DEAR EUNICE,

I love your column and you seem to hit on exactly the same problems I always have and can't find an answer to! I made a rayon crepe dress for the holidays. Every place I pressed darts and seams with the steam iron the crepe seems to have pulled up. It has almost ruined the appearance of this lovely fabric. What can I do about it now?

MRS. R.H.

DEAR MRS. R.H.:

Unfortunately, you made your first mistake by using the steam iron on crepe. Because of the krinkly weave, it should always be pressed very lightly with a dry iron. If the dress isn't already too tight, you may have your dry cleaner steam press the whole dress, however, this will cause the fabric to shrink. Before going to this extreme, try repressing these spots with a dry iron.

My best advice about pressing is this: because of the unusual combinations in today's fabrics, it's always a good idea to press a sample of the fabric with the steam iron and then with a dry iron to decide the best results. (Believe me gals, it's worth the little extra time it takes.)

DEAR EUNICE,

Some of the new resort cottons that are shown in the fashionable ready-to-wear shops are made of cotton that has a painted design. It seems that when this is pressed, the iron would stick to it. Any special pressing techniques about this? Also, the hems of these cottons don't have the conventional type hem-tape, but they are finished with lace instead. Should lace be used on all summer clothes?

MRS. H.E.

DEAR MRS. H.E.:

The cottons you are referring to are hand-screened and are completely washable. Actually, they do not recommend dry cleaning. They launder beautifully and are very popular because of the gay, unusual colors and prints.

As to the lace instead of hem tape, this is a detail used by a designer of a very expensive line of cotton dresses. I think it is very attractive and gives a very feminine look to your summer clothes. We have recommended this detail to our students, and they seem to love it. This is not going to replace hem tape, merely adds a bit of whimsy to your clothes.

Ballet Master Class Is Set

Richard Gibson, one of the Bay Area's top ballet masters, will come to Mill Valley on Jan. 21 to conduct a master class in ballet technique for students of the Pacific Dance Guild. They will gather at the Old Mill School auditorium at 10 a.m. to participate in the master class.

Gibson has just returned from New York City, where he was guest teacher for the Robert Joffrey Ballet Company, replacing Hector Zaraspe, who was in Europe giving private lessons to Rudolf Nureyev. Gibson was also guest teacher for George Balanchine at the school of American Ballet.

Well known for his choreography, he has created ballets that have attracted national attention. Formerly a member of the San Francisco Ballet, the Zachary Solov Company and the Robert Joffrey Ballet, Gibson is now director of the Peninsula Ballet Theater Company at the Dick Ford Dance Center in San Mateo.

Gibson will bring with him students from the Ballet Theater to demonstrate technique.

Mill Valley's Park School Panel Program On Thursday

Mill Valley . . . "Our Environment, What Are We Doing?" will be the topic under discussion by a panel from Marin County at a program being presented by the Park School Parent-Teacher Assn. on Thursday at 8 p.m. at the School in Mill Valley.

John Fisher-Smith, Mill Valley architect, will open the program with slides put together by SCOPE, American Institute of Architects. The panel members are Paul Zucker, planning director for Marin County; Gordon Chan, instructor in biology, College of Marin; Norman Black, Mill Valley Chamber of Commerce representative; and Mrs. Jeoffrey Morshead, director of beautification for Mill Valley. Moderator will be Thomas Skornia.

Larkspur Bethel Plans Initiation

Bethel 246 International Order of Job's Daughters of Larkspur will hold an inspection and initiation on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Masonic Temple with Ann Zimmerman, honored queen, presiding.

Initiates will be Judy Bauman, Deborah Cushman, Suzanne Davidson, Kathleen Gundry, Janet Mackenzie, Nancy Smallman, Karen Stoltze, Lynn Strausbaugh and Connie Wiener.

Special music will be provided by Phyllis Ford and Terry Withers with Phyllis Cancellier and Anna Nieman in charge of refreshments and entertainment.

Home Consumption Food Prices Lower

Price increases for food eaten at home are lower than the national average here in the San Francisco-Oakland area, but the increase of price for food eaten away from home is higher than for the rest of the nation, reports Mrs. Frances M. Head.

Mrs. Head, home advisor for Marin County and the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of California, writes in the monthly homemaker's newsletter that prices for food eaten away from home have increased 28.9 per cent in the Bay Area while the national average increase has been 24 per cent since 1957-59.

Prices for food eaten at home and away from home are 15.8 per cent higher across the nation than they were in 1957-59 and 5.4 per cent higher than last year at the same time, she reports.

Since 1957-59 prices of food eaten at home have increased 11 per cent, and since last year are up about 5 per cent.

But, Mrs. Head noted, there have been equal or more rapid cost rises since 1957-59 in other important items that make up the consumer price index.

She cited medical care services—up 34.7 per cent; transportation services and repairs—up 25.3 per cent; footwear—up 20.4 per cent; and health and recreation—up 19.3 per cent.

From material compiled by Marie Feree, area home economist, Consumer Marketing, the food dollar is reported to cover the following costs: farmer, 31 cents; miscellaneous expenses such as rents, advertising, containers, electric, business taxes, 30 cents; labor, 28 cents; rail and trucking, 7 cents; income tax, 2 cents and corporate profits 2 cents.

Mrs. Head points out that, with one third of all housewives working, that more of their dollars now go toward pre-peeled, pre-cooked and other convenience foods.

Sullivan-McDonald Betrothal Announced At Dinner Party

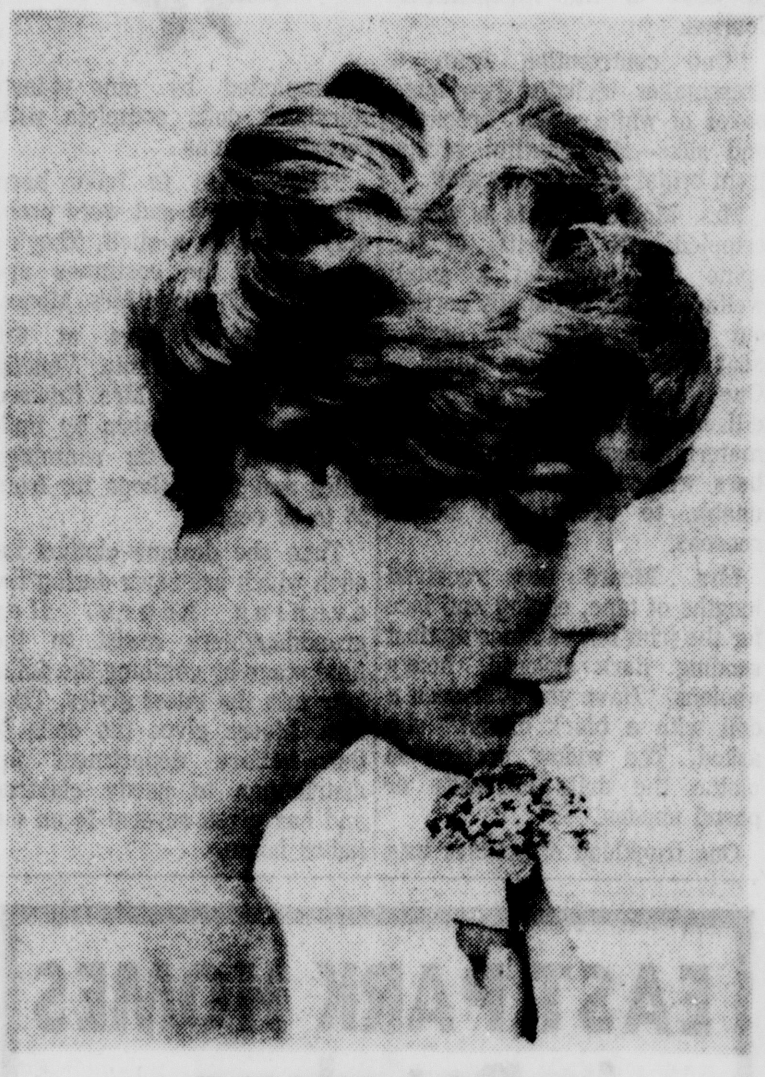
MARILYN McDONALD

A dinner party at San Francisco's Olympic Club was the setting for the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lennox MacDonald of the betrothal of their daughter, Marilyn, to Barry James Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Sullivan of San Rafael.

The couple will be married at the Santa Barbara home of the bride's parents on Jan. 28.

The future bride is a graduate of the University of Southern California, where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and Phi Beta Kappa. She studied anthropology at Oxford University in England.

Her fiance is also a graduate of the University of Southern California and is associated with the University of California Press in Berkeley. He is the grandson of Mrs. Erwin Nicol of Alameda.



FAWN LOOK

Just as women's hair was growing to lengths, per 1966 fashion dictum, there's a strong return to the short coiffure. Adrian, national hairstyles director for Charles of the Ritz, creates this look called "The Fawn"—a razor cut of wispy ringlets moving forward toward the face.

MRS. WILLY BRANDT, wife of West Germany's new vice chancellor and foreign minister will have added social duties. She is shown in her Berlin home.

MRS. BRANDT

Woman On The Go In Berlin Is Wife Of Vice Chancellor

BERLIN, Germany (GF)—Her family's decision to continue living in Berlin will make Rut Brandt, attractive wife of Willy Brandt, Bonn's new vice chancellor and foreign minister, a woman on the go: It will often be necessary for her to travel to the capital on the Rhine to maintain protocol at political and social functions. Yet Mrs. Brandt, 46, doesn't mind it too much at all. For she joins her popular husband and Berlin's until recently ruling mayor in being pleased about his appointment to two key federal posts at once.

Friendliness, charm and elegance are Mrs. Brandt's most frequently cited marks. Norwegian born, she is the second youngest of four daughters who were raised by their mother alone after the early death of their father. She was thus introduced to rugged life while very young and the upsets didn't stop there. During World War II, she worked with the underground movement in Norway, once made a dramatic flight across the border to Sweden, and her first husband was killed in the war.

IN 1947, she came to Berlin as an employee of the Norwegian Military Mission and met Willy Brandt, who had also been in Norway during the war and had afterwards returned to Berlin as a foreign correspondent for Scandinavian newspapers.

Although accustomed to hardships, Mrs. Brandt recalls that she was deeply shaken by the ruins and misery when she arrived in the divided city and that it took nearly a year before she could laugh without feeling a deep sense of guilt. She quickly learned German by taking walks and getting acquainted with Berliners on her way and by picking up every bit of the language she could when out shopping.

She also got to know those unique traits that make Berliners Berliners—their crisp, witty dialect, practical behavior, their readiness to help and their legendary love for animals.

In 1949, she married Willy Brandt and decided to remain in Germany. She soon became a popular and well-liked figure outside the city and Germany during foreign trips, in which she talked up the problems of Berlin and Berliners. She admits that, back in those days, she was shy about being in the public spotlight. Today, receptions and state visits no longer bother her, but she enjoys most leading a private life.

CURRENTLY, the Brandts' three sons — 17-year-old Peter, Lars, 15, and Mathias, 5 — demand most of her attention and energies. The children have been raised very liberally and this has required much understanding and many insights from Mrs. Brandt, who has also charged herself with holding the reins and maintaining peace in the family. Not only father, but sons are interested in politics and there have often been sharp divergences of opinion, which have required Mother to be mediator.

When Mrs. Brandt does get a few minutes alone at the family's rented villa in Berlin's Grunewald district, she turns to one of her favorite pursuits: the fine arts.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Jan. 14, the 14th day of 1967 with 351 to follow.

The moon is between the new and first quarter stages; the morning stars are Mars and Jupiter; the evening stars are Saturn, Jupiter and Venus.

Philippine statesman Carlos Romulo was born on this day in 1899.

On this day in history:

In 1914, Henry Ford began making automobiles by the assembly line method.

In 1943, President Franklin Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill began a 10-day meeting in Morocco to plan Allied offensives aimed at the "unconditional surrender" of the Axis powers.

In 1959, the firing squads of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro executed 220 persons in two weeks.

In 1964, more than 140 persons died before a driving snowstorm finally ended in the east.

A thought for the day—British Prime Minister Winston Churchill said: "The only guide to a man is his conscience—the only shield to his memory is the rectitude and sincerity of his actions."

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

What Conversation To Make When Partner Ruins A Hand?

Many players flounder when the play of a hand comes to an end.

What is the right thing to say to partner?

Where will you find advise on this nice point of etiquette?

Imagine yourself the dummy in today's hand, watching your partner go down at four spades.

West takes the king and ace of hearts, and East signals for a continuation by playing the eight of hearts first and then the three.

HE'S STUDYING

West continues with the jack of hearts, and your partner studies the dummy very carefully.

The careful study does not deceive you, for South is wondering whether to ruff with dummy's queen or with dummy's ten of trumps.

South is calculating that the ten of spades has an even chance to shut East out.

The queen of spades will work perhaps 52 per cent of the time, since the jack will drop singleton or doubleton about that often.

EITHER WILL FAIL

You keep a straight face, knowing that either plan will fail. Finally, your partner ruffs with dummy's ten of spades.

East overruffs with the jack, and your partner eventually loses a diamond trick.

Down one.

What do you say to your partner? The correct thing is: "Please cut the cards for the next deal." Then close your teeth tightly together and look at your fingernails.

It is considered poor form to punch your partner in the nose, even though he did throw a cold hand away.

South should not ruff the jack of hearts at all.

Instead, he should throw a diamond from the dummy.

Then he can win any continuation, draw trumps and ruff his third diamond in dummy.

But keep it to yourself; maybe your partner will be equally restrained when you're the villain of the piece.

As dealer, you hold:

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one heart. You would like the hand better if you had two little clubs and K-J-9-8 of diamonds, but you cannot have everything your little heart desires. The hand is worth an opening bid as it stands.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Tour Is Attracting Interest In Marin

By MOLLY MARIN

The scheduled KQED tour of Oriental art centers is attracting much interest on the part of Marin docents for the Avery Brundage Collection at the De Young Museum. Clarence Shangraw, assistant curator for the Brundage display, will conduct the tour. Mrs. Richard Hahn of Belvedere will be a group leader. Forty will make the tour May 13-June 23 with the itinerary to include Japan, Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong. Earlier hopes of including art museums behind the Bamboo Curtain on China's mainland appear very dim at this point according to Mrs. Hahn and Elsie La Voy, tour coordinator.

GUESTS of the Walter J. Taits of San Rafael at tonight's Marin Cotillion Winter Fantasy Ball at the Meadow Club will be Messrs. and Mesdames Willard Hall, Chris Ketjen, Robert Edgar, John Lewis, Jean Ticoulat, Lloyd Fournier, John Haley, John Carbone, David Witt, Wesley Gunmenson, Miss Lovey Wolf and Clifford Hall. The Joseph Lampertis have invited Messrs. and Mesdames Chris Madera, Jerry Hendricks, George Burton and stanley Knolles.

THE WILLIAM Brantmans entertained at a black tie dinner party for 12 friends from the city at their Tiburon home last night.

WHEN THE Tiburon Peninsula Chamber of Commerce had an opportunity to nominate two localites for KABL Citizen of The Year award, whom did they choose? Two women. Mrs. Alfred Azevedo will represent Tiburon and Mrs. E. Gould Ingram, Belvedere.

CAROL SUE TANENBAUM of Brooklyn, N.Y., who will become the bride of Harley M. Leete III of Belvedere in New York on Jan. 22, visited Mr. and Mrs. Harley Leete Jr. during the winter vacation. The Leete family will attend the wedding in the East. Gurdon S. Leete, younger brother of the future bridegroom, will be best man.

Ronee Ottesen Will Marry In Oakland Mormon Temple

RONEE OTTESEN

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald G. Ottesen of Larkspur are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Ronee, to Merrill H. Scott.

The bride-elect was graduated from Redwood High School and is a sophomore at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. She is the sister of David and Cory Ottesen of Larkspur.

The future bridegroom, son of Glenn H. Scott of Escondido and Mrs. Erma Scott of Salt Lake City, Utah, attends Brigham Young University. He also has served a mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He is the brother of Michael and John Scott of San Mateo and Daniel Scott and Mesdames James Lindsay and Richard Mitchel of Salt Lake City.

The wedding will take place on Feb. 14 at the Mormon Temple in Oakland.

Diana Bertch To Be Installed Honored Queen This Evening

Dollmaker Is Tickled Over Results From Story In I-J

"I receive boxes of materials and scraps almost every day and am tickled to death about it," reports Mrs. Dolores Moore, the shut-in whose story of her personal contribution of dolls to welfare was printed in the Dec. 20 issue of the Independent-Journal.

"One contribution from a dressmaker included two huge boxes of white satins, brocades and silks—all beautiful scraps from bridal gowns," she said.

Mrs. Moore, who is a widow crippled with arthritis of the spine and lives on a small welfare check, is happily sorting out bundles of sewing scraps sent to her by Marin families. One organizatoin, a senior citizens group, offered to donate materials, explaining that members wished to sew but were unable to because of health reasons.

Mrs. Moore has received lengths of tape, edging and lace for the trim but cautions against sending dark colored, heavy woolens. "Have you ever seen a doll with a black dress?" she asked. The widow prefers to clothe the dolls in white or pastel shades.

One trunkload of articles was accompanied by nine 4-inch storybook dolls complete with period costumes.

"They seem to have been quite expensive and were probably stored on a shelf. They're dusty and the costumes are threadbare," added Mrs. Moore.

Mrs. Moore lives at 610 Gallerita Way, Santa Venetia with her daughter, Mrs. Edward Grieswell, who assists by finding used dolls at rummage sales and thrift shops for from 35 to 60 cents.

Then she designs clothes for each which are sewn during the evening hours. Her granddaughters assist in the final stage by combing the dolls' hair into the latest styles. Then Mrs. Moore gives the dolls to the welfare department for distribution to needy children and has given several to an old ladies home.

SEW SIMPLE

Putting Thread By Window Will Prevent Its Breaking

By EUNICE FARMER

I've tried to get my scrapbook of columns in order just as I have suggested you do in the past. Somehow or other, I have misplaced a few of these columns and would very much like to have one complete set. If any of you have a complete set from the past seven years and would be willing to part with a few of them, please drop me a line.

MRS. W.H. says: Since so many women have complained about the quality of thread today, thought I'd pass this bit of information on to you for what it's worth (even though it sounds a little silly).

This, incidentally, is a quote from a book I read, it's not my idea. "Since thread is a fiber, it needs moisture to prevent breaking. Place your thread by an open window when it rains or there is fog." (I have also put my thread near steam of my steam iron.) It really does work, and the thread doesn't break nearly so often.

If you are a new reader of Sew Simple, perhaps you would like a copy of my leaflet "Twenty Most Frequently Asked Questions." Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal.

Mrs. Walter F. Dillemuth, La Jolla, Calif., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for the following suggestion.

This isn't exactly a sewing tip, but it's been helpful to me and to others who have to sew in a carpeted area. An amazingly quick and easy method of cleaning up those threads and bits of fabric is an ordinary hairbrush. Just brush the rug and there will be no need to drag out the vacuum. Even helps find those dropped pins that have a way of working into the pile and can be found only by barefooted children! (Thanks to your suggestion, I've found it only takes minutes to run over any carpet you've dragged your work across and it's so simple.)

DEAR EUNICE,

I love your column and you seem to hit on exactly the same problems I always have and can't find an answer to! I made a rayon crepe dress for the holidays. Every place I pressed darts and seams with the steam iron the crepe seems to have pulled up. It has almost ruined the appearance of this lovely fabric. What can I do about it now?

MRS. R.H.

DEAR MRS. R.H.:

Unfortunately, you made your first mistake by using the steam iron on crepe. Because of the krinkly weave, it should always be pressed very lightly with a dry iron. If the dress isn't already too tight, you may have your dry cleaner steam press the whole dress, however, this will cause the fabric to shrink. Before going to this extreme, try repressing these spots with a dry iron.

My best advice about pressing is this: because of the unusual combinations in today's fabrics, it's always a good idea to press a sample of the fabric with the steam iron and then with a dry iron to decide the best results. (Believe me gals, it's worth the little extra time it takes.)

DEAR EUNICE,

Some of the new resort cottons that are shown in the fashionable ready-to-wear shops are made of cotton that has a painted design. It seems that when this is pressed, the iron would stick to it. Any special pressing techniques about this? Also, the hems of these cottons don't have the conventional type hem-tape, but they are finished with lace instead. Should lace be used on all summer clothes?

MRS. H.E.

DEAR MRS. H.E.:

The cottons you are referring to are hand-screened and are completely washable. Actually, they do not recommend dry cleaning. They launder beautifully and are very popular because of the gay, unusual colors and prints.

As to the lace instead of hem tape, this is a detail used by a designer of a very expensive line of cotton dresses. I think it is very attractive and gives a very feminine look to your summer clothes. We have recommended this detail to our students, and they seem to love it. This is not going to replace hem tape, merely adds a bit of whimsy to your clothes.

Ballet Master Class Is Set

Richard Gibson, one of the Bay Area's top ballet masters, will come to Mill Valley on Jan. 21 to conduct a master class in ballet technique for students of the Pacific Dance Guild. They will gather at the Old Mill School auditorium at 10 a.m. to participate in the master class.

Gibson has just returned from New York City, where he was guest teacher for the Robert Joffrey Ballet Company, replacing Hector Zaraspe, who was in Europe giving private lessons to Rudolf Nureyev. Gibson was also guest teacher for George Balanchine at the school of American Ballet.

Well known for his choreography, he has created ballets that have attracted national attention. Formerly a member of the San Francisco Ballet, the Zachary Solov Company and the Robert Joffrey Ballet, Gibson is now director of the Peninsula Ballet Theater Company at the Dick Ford Dance Center in San Mateo.

Gibson will bring with him students from the Ballet Theater to demonstrate technique.

Mill Valley's Park School Panel Program On Thursday

Mill Valley . . . "Our Environment, What Are We Doing?" will be the topic under discussion by a panel from Marin County at a program being presented by the Park School Parent-Teacher Assn. on Thursday at 8 p.m. at the School in Mill Valley.

John Fisher-Smith, Mill Valley architect, will open the program with slides put together by SCOPE, American Institute of Architects. The panel members are Paul Zucker, planning director for Marin County; Gordon Chan, instructor in biology, College of Marin; Norman Black, Mill Valley Chamber of Commerce representative; and Mrs. Jeoffrey Morshead, director of beautification for Mill Valley. Moderator will be Thomas Skornia.

Larkspur Bethel Plans Initiation

Bethel 246 International Order of Job's Daughters of Larkspur will hold an inspection and initiation on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Masonic Temple with Ann Zimmerman, honored queen, presiding.

Initiates will be Judy Bauman, Deborah Cushman, Suzanne Davidson, Kathleen Gundry, Janet Mackenzie, Nancy Smallman, Karen Stoltze, Lynn Strausbaugh and Connie Wiener.

Special music will be provided by Phyllis Ford and Terry Withers with Phyllis Cancellier and Anna Nieman in charge of refreshments and entertainment.

Home Consumption Food Prices Lower

Price increases for food eaten at home are lower than the national average here in the San Francisco-Oakland area, but the increase of price for food eaten away from home is higher than for the rest of the nation, reports Mrs. Frances M. Head.

Mrs. Head, home advisor for Marin County and the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of California, writes in the monthly homemaker's newsletter that prices for food eaten away from home have increased 28.9 per cent in the Bay Area while the national average increase has been 24 per cent since 1957-59.

Prices for food eaten at home and away from home are 15.8 per cent higher across the nation than they were in 1957-59 and 5.4 per cent higher than last year at the same time, she reports.

Since 1957-59 prices of food eaten at home have increased 11 per cent, and since last year are up about 5 per cent.

But, Mrs. Head noted, there have been equal or more rapid cost rises since 1957-59 in other important items that make up the consumer price index.

She cited medical care services—up 34.7 per cent; transportation services and repairs—up 25.3 per cent; footwear—up 20.4 per cent; and health and recreation—up 19.3 per cent.

From material compiled by Marie Feree, area home economist, Consumer Marketing, the food dollar is reported to cover the following costs: farmer, 31 cents; miscellaneous expenses such as rents, advertising, containers, electric, business taxes, 30 cents; labor, 28 cents; rail and trucking, 7 cents; income tax, 2 cents and corporate profits 2 cents.

Mrs. Head points out that, with one third of all housewives working, that more of their dollars now go toward pre-peeled, pre-cooked and other convenience foods.

Sullivan-McDonald Betrothal Announced At Dinner Party

MARILYN McDONALD.

A dinner party at San Francisco's Olympic Club was the setting for the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lennox MacDonald of the betrothal of their daughter, Marilyn, to Barry James Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Sullivan of San Rafael.

The couple will be married at the Santa Barbara home of the bride's parents on Jan. 28.

The future bride is a graduate of the University of Southern California, where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and Phi Beta Kappa. She studied anthropology at Oxford University in England.

Her fiance is also a graduate of the University of Southern California and is associated with the University of California Press in Berkeley. He is the grandson of Mrs. Erwin Nicol of Alameda.

MRS. WILLY BRANDT, wife of West Germany's new vice chancellor and foreign minister will have added social duties. She is shown in her Berlin home.

MRS. BRANDT

Woman On The Go In Berlin Is Wife Of Vice Chancellor

BERLIN, Germany (GF)—Her family's decision to continue living in Berlin will make Rut Brandt, attractive wife of Willy Brandt, Bonn's new vice chancellor and foreign minister, a woman on the go: It will often be necessary for her to travel to the capital on the Rhine to maintain protocol at political and social functions. Yet Mrs. Brandt, 46, doesn't mind it too much at all. For she joins her popular husband and Berlin's until recently ruling mayor in being pleased about his appointment to two key federal posts at once.

Friendliness, charm and elegance are Mrs. Brandt's most frequently cited marks. Norwegian born, she is the second youngest of four daughters who were raised by their mother alone after the early death of their father. She was thus introduced to rugged life while very young and the upsets didn't stop there. During World War II, she worked with the underground movement in Norway, once made a dramatic flight across the border to Sweden, and her first husband was killed in the war.

IN 1947, she came to Berlin as an employee of the Norwegian Military Mission and met Willy Brandt, who had also been in Norway during the war and had afterwards returned to Berlin as a foreign correspondent for Scandinavian newspapers.

Although accustomed to hardships, Mrs. Brandt recalls that she was deeply shaken by the ruins and misery when she arrived in the divided city and that it took nearly a year before she could laugh without feeling a deep sense of guilt. She quickly learned German by taking walks and getting acquainted with Berliners on her way and by picking up every bit of the language she could when out shopping.

She also got to know those unique traits that make Berliners Berliners—their crisp, witty dialect, practical behavior, their readiness to help and their legendary love for animals.

In 1949, she married Willy Brandt and decided to remain in Germany. She soon became a popular and well-liked figure outside the city and Germany during foreign trips, in which she talked up the problems of Berlin and Berliners. She admits that, back in those days, she was shy about being in the public spotlight. Today, receptions and state visits no longer bother her, but she enjoys most leading a private life.

CURRENTLY, the Brandts' three sons — 17-year-old Peter, Lars, 15, and Mathias, 5 — demand most of her attention and energies. The children have been raised very liberally and this has required much understanding and many insights from Mrs. Brandt, who has also charged herself with holding the reins and maintaining peace in the family. Not only father, but sons are interested in politics and there have often been sharp divergences of opinion, which have required Mother to be mediator.

When Mrs. Brandt does get a few minutes alone at the family's rented villa in Berlin's Grunewald district, she turns to one of her favorite pursuits: the fine arts.

Sausalitans Hurt As Car Strikes Bridge

Four Sausalito residents were injured — one seriously — when their car hit a concrete abutment on the southern approach to the Golden Gate Bridge last night, California Highway Patrol reported.

The car driver was sales engineer Garrett D. Hodgson, 37, of 64 Alexander Avenue, who suffered a cut forehead and left leg.

Passengers were Hodgson's wife, Mary, 38, who suffered face cuts and possible concussion; Alfred D. Belsey, 54, of 205 Second Street, who was treated at Marin General Hospital for minor cuts to the forehead; and his wife, Helen K. Belsey, 51.

Mrs. Belsey was hospitalized at Marin general with a neck concussion and fractures and cuts to the right arm. Her condition today was reported fair.

The Hodgson couple was released after treatment at Harbor Emergency Hospital in San Francisco. The highway patrol said Hodgson was apparently blinded by the headlights of an oncoming car.

Would-Be Span Leaper Rescued

A depressed San Francisco man was taken off the Golden Gate Bridge yesterday by California Highway Patrol officers, who feared he might decide to jump.

Robert Charles Matheisl, 31, foreman for a San Francisco construction company, was seen shortly after noon walking on the east side of the bridge.

Highway Patrolman John F. Allison said Matheisl was scuffing his feet along the bridge walk, his head bowed and eyes downcast. Allison said Matheisl appeared very depressed when, taken to the toll plaza office he said everything had "gone wrong" and that he went out on the bridge to "think about jumping." Matheisl was taken to San Francisco General Hospital for observation.

Tryouts Are Set

Homestead Players will hold tryouts for two plays by Eugene Ionesco Tuesday and Friday at 8 p.m. in Brown's Hall, Mill Valley. The two one-act plays, "The Bald Soprano" and "The Lesson," are scheduled for late March. Director will be Bill Hughes of Sausalito.

College Of Marin Announces Spring Night Course List

The College of Marin has announced a schedule of 115 credit and 98 non-credit evening classes for the spring semester.

The schedule includes 20 new credit courses at Novato High college in Kentfield, and 10 new credti courses at Novato High School. Ten new non-credit courses are offered, but the total of 98 non-credit courses is down from last spring's offering of 108.

The evening classes start Feb. 6. Brochures on the courses are available at the college.

New non-credit courses at the college include blueprint reading on Monday nights; beginning aviation ground school Monday or Wednesday nights; travel agency and tourist industry training and health and heart care (taught by doctors) on Tuesday nights, intermediate shorthand and income tax preparation on Wednesday; history and appreciation of wine, and reform and revolution in Egypt, on Thursday.

A non-credit course in organization, management and leadership is offered Tuesday nights at Terra Linda High School, and a course on apprentice barbering on Thursday nights at Novato High School.

New credit evening courses offered at the Kentfield campus include business law, communications, semiconductor circuit analysis, history of the Far East and personal and social adjustment on Monday nights; economics, United States history, history of philosophy, traffic control and reading improvement, Tuesdays; data processing applications, Wednesdays; plane geometry and criminal law, Thursdays.

Also at Kentfield, beginning photography will be offered Monday and Wednesday nights, intermediate shorthand Monday and Thursday nights, fire fighting tactics and strategy Thursday or Friday nights, protection equipment and systems, Tuesday or Wednesday nights, elementary German and intermediate Spanish, Tuesday and Thursday nights.

New evening credit courses at Novato High School include introductory philosophy on Monday nights, accounting on Monday and Wednesday nights, contemporary novel and marriage and family, Tuesday nights; economics, elementary physiography, western civilization and elementary algebra, Wednesdays and cultural anthropology and business mathematics, Thursdays.

Students may register by mail through Friday, or in person from 7 to 8:30 p.m. on Feb. 2 at the Kentfield campus for credit courses.

Students can register for non-credit courses during the next two weeks, or on the first night of class.

Council Due Land Report For Street

The San Rafael City Council Monday night will hear a report on efforts to acquire rights-of-way for connecting Francisco Boulevard and Irwin Streets.

The two streets were left disconnected by construction of improvements to the interchange at the south end of the Highway 101 viaduct.

City Manager Dan E. Andersen will report on preliminary negotiations with Shamrock Materials Inc. and the Rice Estate, through whose properties the right-of-way would pass.

Other items on the 8 p.m. agenda at city hall include a long-standing appeal from a planning commission veto on further sewer connections in Peacock Gap Unit Six and opening bids on two hydraulic cushion flap gates for the Francisco Boulevard pumping station.

The council will take up uniform rezoning of three parcels at 171-177 Woodland Avenues, approval of a final map for Las Colindas Unit Ten subdivision, a report on erosion control in Seaview Heights Unit Two and the leasing of a pistol range by the San Rafael Sanitation District to the city and county.

Oxygen Bids Set

Bids for purchase of oxygen and nitrous oxide were called today by the base procurement office at Hamilton Air Force Base to be opened at 3 p.m. Jan. 30.

Teachers Ask Place On Screening Board

Mill Valley Teachers Assn. last night asked the school district board to let them place a representative on the committee to screen candidates for the job of district superintendent.

"There seemed to be favorable reaction" to the suggestion by teacher representative James Martin, according to Supt. G. R. McConnell, who will leave the district June 30.

McConnell said the board will consider this and a list of qualifications a new superintendent must have when the board meets at 8 p.m. Monday.

Also postponed to Monday night was selection of the entire screening committee. McConnell said the board was reluctant to decide on members of the screening committee last night.

Purpose of last night's meeting was to discuss standards to be met by McConnell's successor with Supt. Virgil S. Hollis of Marin County Schools, Richard Koon of the University of California and Erwin Johnson of Stanford University.

Koon and Johnson were chosen to help set these standards by the deans of the schools of education at their universities, but have not yet been appointed to the screening committee itself, McConnell said.

Upshot of the two and a half hour meeting was appointment of board chairman William L. Clark and trustee M. James Norton to a subcommittee to draw a list of criteria and present it for board approval Monday night, according to McConnell.

McConnell said a large part of the discussion centered on the relative importance of a superintendent who spends most of his time on the instructional program, compared to one who spends his time overseeing the general activities of the district.

Leased Land Agreement For Library

Sausalito City Mgr. George W. Patterson yesterday disclosed that agreement was reached Thursday evening on terms to permit the city to reacquire leased land which is part of the site for the proposed new library.

The agreement means the city can meet the deadline Monday to apply for federal funds to pay one-third of the cost of the site. The rest of the site is still in city control.

Patterson said he attempted to notify the Independent-Journal before the special city council meeting at which the agreement was approved. The meeting was called at the last moment, he said, after negotiations were completed between the city and lessees of the site.

Under the terms of the agreement, the city could exercise an option for $20,000 to reacquire 8,342 square feet leased by the city to Madden and Lewis northeast of Vina Del Mar plaza until the year 2002. The site is sub-leased to Mac-Marin, operator of the Spinnaker Restaurant.

The option to buy the leasehold interest would not be exercised, Patterson explained, if the city's application for state and federal funds totaling $148,906 were not approved. Action on the application is expected within two months, Head Librarian Kay Berteau estimated.

Addition of the land cost brought the total cost of the library to $446,716, she said.

Also agreed upon at the special council meeting, Patterson said, was a landscape easement on 4,000 square feet of the leased sandspit at no cost to the city.

Councilmen voted 4-0 on the agreement, Patterson reported. Councilmen Jan Paul Dyk was absent.

A $250,000 bond election will be held March 7 to finance the remainder of the library cost.

Auto Collision Cause Reported

A three-car collision Thursday, in which one driver incurred minor injuries, was caused by a mechanical failure on one car, the California Highway Patrol reported yesterday.

The patrol reported that cars driven by Wayne Duncan Telford, 17, of 31 Gregg Place, Novato, and Joseph James Anselmo, 39, of 120 Merim Street, San Rafael, slowed for traffic at 4 p.m., but a fluid line burst on the brake of a car driven by Ernest Jay Belding, 49, of Auburn, and his car struck the rear of Anselmo's pushing it into Telford's car. Belding told the patrol he would see his own doctor.

Nurses Invited To TB Workshop

Marin's 1,643 registered nurses have been invited to the fourth annual workshop sponsored by the Marin Tuberculosis and Health Assn. from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Jan. 24 at the Peacock Gap Country Club.

Mrs. Madeline Lowe, instructor in psychiatric nursing at the College of Marin, will be a panel moderator.

Mrs. Laura Jean Looper, director of vocational nursing at the college, is chairman of the workshop planning committee.

Arraignment On Marijuana Count

Gary Vernon Scozzafava, 19, of 1864-B Virginia Street, Novato, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on a charge of marijuana possession.

Scozzafava, accused by San Rafael police of having the marijuana when picked up yesterday on a traffic warrant, was released without bail pending entry of a plea at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Judge Sets Date On Assault Plea

A 24-year-old Oakland man. Ronald Peter Koutz, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on a charge of assaulting Lawrence Damonte Nelson with a deadly weapon, a club, in San Rafael Dec. 15.

Judge Hadden W. Roth scheduled plea entry for 1:30 p.m. next Fridey and released him without bail.

Youth Contest Winners Listed

Winners in the youth leadership contest sponsored by San Rafael Elks Lodge 1108 were announced today by Frank Ench, exalter ruler.

They are Michael J. Giacomini of Olema, a senior at Marin Catholic High School and Gretchen Walford of 418 Oakdale Avenue, Corte Madera, a senior at Redwood High School.

Prizewinners each received savings bonds from the lodge and their entries have been forwarded for state, and possibly national, contests.

The leadership contest, sponsored annually by the Elks for high school students, judges the students not on scholarship, but on their accomplishments in leadership, citizenship, initiative and community activities.

Six Marinites In Marine Reserves

Six Marin men have been inducted into the Marine Corps Reserve at the San Rafael training center, and will begin six months' active duty within three months.

They are Robert E. Barcewski of 716 Prince Royal Drive; Robert M. Simpton of 445 Vista Grande, and Kit P. Thomas of 49 Serra Way, all San Rafael; Walter P. Kosta of 8 Laurel Avenue, San Anselmo; Vance C. Montgomery of 180 Toyon Drive, Fairfax, and Peter I Teller of 150 Shady Lane, Ross.

First Meeting For New Scout Troop

First meeting for Marin's newest Boy Scout Troop, No. 65 will be held Jan. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the San Anselmo American Legion Log Cabin, when the troop's first hike will be planned.

The executive committee includes Ronald R. Blanque, Fred E. McQueen, Ralph Lewis, Konstantin G. Zaharoff and Ramond A. Blanquie, chairman. Boys wishing to join the troop may call Blanquie.

County Inmate Back In Jail

A 40-year-old work-furlough fugitive from county jail since April 8, 1965, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday afternoon on felony complaint of the failure to return.

He is Owen K. Perry, of Martiinez. Perry, arrested on a drunk charge in Contra Costa County, was returned to Marin County yesterday by sheriff's officers. He was serving a year in jail here for forgery when he departed, officers said.

Judge Hadden W. Roth scheduled plea entry for 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Literary Courses

A nine-week course in poem and play writing will be offered by Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Department. The class will meet from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the Community and Youth Center. Date of the first meeting has not been set. Teacher will be Norman Moser of Mill Valley.

Tour Is Attracting Interest In Marin

By MOLLY MARIN

The scheduled KQED tour of Oriental art centers is attracting much interest on the part of Marin docents for the Avery Brundage Collection at the De Young Museum. Clarence Shangraw, assistant curator for the Brundage display, will conduct the tour. Mrs. Richard Hahn of Belvedere will be a group leader. Forty will make the tour May 13-June 23 with the itinerary to include Japan, Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong. Earlier hopes of including art museums behind the Bamboo Curtain on China's mainland appear very dim at this point according to Mrs. Hahn and Elsie La Voy, tour coordinator.

GUESTS of the Walter J. Taits of San Rafael at tonight's Marin Cotillion Winter Fantasy Ball at the Meadow Club will be Messrs. and Mesdames Willard Hall, Chris Ketjen, Robert Edgar, John Lewis, Jean Ticoulat, Lloyd Fournier, John Haley, John Carbone, David Witt, Wesley Gunmenson, Miss Lovey Wolf and Clifford Hall. The Joseph Lampertis have invited Messrs. and Mesdames Chris Madera, Jerry Hendricks, George Burton and stanley Knolles.

THE WILLIAM Brantmans entertained at a black tie dinner party for 12 friends from the city at their Tiburon home last night.

WHEN THE Tiburon Peninsula Chamber of Commerce had an opportunity to nominate two localites for KABL Citizen of The Year award, whom did they choose? Two women. Mrs. Alfred Azevedo will represent Tiburon and Mrs. E. Gould Ingram, Belvedere.

CAROL SUE TANENBAUM of Brooklyn, N.Y., who will become the bride of Harley M. Leete III of Belvedere in New York on Jan. 22, visited Mr. and Mrs. Harley Leete Jr. during the winter vacation. The Leete family will attend the wedding in the East. Gurdon S. Leete, younger brother of the future bridegroom, will be best man.

Ronee Ottesen Will Marry In Oakland Mormon Temple

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald G. Ottesen of Larkspur are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Ronee, to Merrill H. Scott.

The bride-elect was graduated from Redwood High School and is a sophomore at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. She is the sister of David and Cory Ottesen of Larkspur.

The future bridegroom, son of Glenn H. Scott of Escondido and Mrs. Erma Scott of Salt Lake City, Utah, attends Brigham Young University. He also has served a mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. He is the brother of Michael and John Scott of San Mateo and Daniel Scott and Mesdames James Lindsay and Richard Mitchel of Salt Lake City.

The wedding will take place on Feb. 14 at the Mormon Temple in Oakland.

Dollmaker Is Tickled Over Results From Story In I-J

"I receive boxes of materials and scraps almost every day and am tickled to death about it," reports Mrs. Dolores Moore, the shut-in whose story of her personal contribution of dolls to welfare was printed in the Dec. 20 issue of the Independent-Journal.

"One contribution from a dressmaker included two huge boxes of white satins, brocades and silks—all beautiful scraps from bridal gowns," she said.

Mrs. Moore, who is a widow crippled with arthritis of the spine and lives on a small welfare check, is happily sorting out bundles of sewing scraps sent to her by Marin families. One organizatoin, a senior citizens group, offered to donate materials, explaining that members wished to sew but were unable to because of health reasons.

Mrs. Moore has received lengths of tape, edging and lace for the trim but cautions against sending dark colored, heavy woolens. "Have you ever seen a doll with a black dress?" she asked. The widow prefers to clothe the dolls in white or pastel shades.

One trunkload of articles was accompanied by nine 4-inch storybook dolls complete with period costumes.

"They seem to have been quite expensive and were probably stored on a shelf. They're dusty and the costumes are threadbare," added Mrs. Moore.

Mrs. Moore lives at 610 Gallerita Way, Santa Venetia with her daughter, Mrs. Edward Grieswell, who assists by finding used dolls at rummage sales and thrift shops for from 35 to 60 cents.

Then she designs clothes for each which are sewn during the evening hours. Her granddaughters assist in the final stage by combing the dolls' hair into the latest styles. Then Mrs. Moore gives the dolls to the welfare department for distribution to needy children and has given several to an old ladies home.

Firemen To Have Annual Dinner

Belvedere volunteer firemen have set Feb. 4 as the date for the annual dinner at which their wives are honored guests. The party will be held in the firemen's quarters in Belvedere. Elmer Fraass is chairman, Kenneth Frost, assistant, Ray Coleman, music chairman.

Green Bay Solid Favorite In Super Classic

By MIKE RATHET

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Green Bay Packers and Kansas City Chiefs meet tomorrow in the long-awaited, much-ballyhooed Super Bowl, a game that likely will establish—to almost everyone except the coaches involved—whether the National or American football league is superior.

While fan interest for this first meeting between the 47-year-old NFL and seven-year-old AFL centers around the superiority question, neither Green Bay Coach Vince Lombardi nor Kansas City Coach Hank Stram was viewing it exactly that way.

"It's a big football game," said Lombardi, "but winning or losing won't mean the end of the world as far as the Packers are concerned — or Kansas City either."

"Superiority of one league over the other will be hard to determine in one game," Stram said. "But it will give people a better picture than they've had.

"With the public it probably will 'prove' that."

What the game ultimately will prove remains a question, but there's little doubt that the viewing public will be the largest in the history of any sporting event despite the fact there probably will be empty seats in 93,000-seat Los Angeles Coliseum when the game gets underway at 1:05, PST.

But, with both NBC and CBS televising and broadcasting the game nationally, the largest audience in sports history is virtually guaranteed.

Also guaranteed is the largest payoff in the history of pro team sports with $15,000 going to each member of the winning team and $7,500 to each loser.

The oddsmakers have made the Packers almost a two-touchdown favorite to grab the pot of gold, along with the enormous prestige of winning this first battle for supremacy between the longtime rival leagues who suddenly grasped hands as one big, happy family last June.

Harmony, as a matter of fact, has been the key word at the Super Bowl site and the various factions have meticulously compromised on all variations of the playing rules.

Since the footballs used in the two leagues vary slightly — the AFL ball is supposed to be easier to pass; the NFL ball easier to kick—the Chiefs will use the American League ball when they are on offense and the Packers will use the National League ball when they are.

There will be three officials from each league, sudden death will be in effect if the two teams are tied at the end of regulation time and the leagues have agreed to use the NFL one-point conversion rule instead of the AFL's two-point conversion option.

The battle itself, however, will not be fought at the conference table but by the players involved and in only two instances is there the possibility that the usual starting line-ups will be altered.

Lombardi has hinted that running back Paul Hornung, his onetime Golden Boy, may see action at the halfback spot while there still remains some question about the status of Fred Arbanas, Kansas City's all-league tight end who suffered a slight shoulder separation in the AFL title game.

Elijah Pitts is expected to start in the Green Bay backfield along with fullback Jim Taylor, flanker Boyd Dowler and quarterback Bart Starr, the unerring aerialist who completed 62 per cent of his passes as the Packers rolled to a 12-2 regular season record.

Starr also has top receivers, besides Dowler, in split end Carroll Dale and tight end Marv Fleming, but the big weapon for the Packers usually is their rigid defense.

The Green Bay front four of Willie Davis, Ron Kostelnik, Henry Jordan and Lionel Aldridge is a veteran unit, linebackers Dave Robinson, Ray Nitschke and Lee Roy Caffey all are quick and strong and Herb Adderley and Willie Wood are exceptional defensive backs.

Tackling that defense will be a Kansas City offense that pulled the Chiefs to an 11-2-1 record and revolves around Len Dawson's passes to Arbanas, Otis Taylor and Chris Burford and the running of rookie Mike Garrett and fullback Curt McClinton.

If Arbanas is unable to start or has to be pulled out during the game, Reg Carolan or Aaron Brown, a rooike who has worked mostly at a defensive tackle spot, will move in at tight end.

While the Packers have experience in their offensive line and defensive unit, the Chiefs have a heavy edge in the weight department.

On the offensive line are such heavyweights as 292-pound tackle Jim Tyrer and 267-pound guard Curt Merz while Buck Buchanan, 6-foot-7, 287-pound tackle, is the No. 1 behemoth on the defensive front four.

As for the linebackers and defensive backs, Bobby Bell was an all-league choice at his outside linebacking post while Johnny Robinson grabbed a spot at safety.

The Packers went through a short workout at the Coliseum today after moving into Los Angeles from their Santa Barbara training quarters. The Chiefs remained at their Long Beach site and did not work out.

Drake Grad Tells Of Pressures Of Tomorrow's Super Bowl Game

REG CAROLAN

COUNTDOWN—"My stomach is in a knot. I don't know how much longer I can take it. We started getting keyed up three weeks ago, before the AFL championship, and it's been building up ever since. Honestly, I'm so excited I feel like I'm going to burst."

Reg Carolan, all 6-foot-6, 238 pounds of him, was at the other end of the line last night, trying to relax in his Santa Monica hotel room, when I buzzed him on the prospects for tomorrow's Super Duper Bowl game in Los Angeles.

ONE OF the most gifted all-around athletes ever to come out of Marin County, Carolan is reserve tight end for the AFL's Kansas City Chiefs and figures to see considerable action against the Green Bay Packers.

"No, I don't think I'll start, but I'm certain I'll see some action," he said over the long-distance horn. Injured first string Fred Arbanas, Carolan added, has been practicing the last two days and is expected to start with an assist from a Novocain injection in his aching shoulder.

"FRED IS a tough and great competitor," Carolan praised, "and I just hope he doesn't hurt himself further Sunday. But I'm ready whenever they need me."

Reg, an articulate and gregarious redhead, was ready two weeks ago when Arbanas was injured in the first quarter of the AFL title game with Buffalo. The king-sized Marin Countian played three-quarters as the Chiefs romped, 31-7.

DURING THE regular season, however, he was used sparingly, catching only 7 passes for 154 yards and 3 TDs.

Asked about the odds favoring the Packs, Carolan admitted: "The press down here doesn't give us much of a chance and we're about a two TD underdog, but I prefer it that way. The players are 'high' and we have confidence in our ability, but we also realize we're up against an excellent football team and an image as well. I know many of the Packers personally and they're just human beings like the rest of us, but they have that 'unbeatables' image.

"WE'RE A lot bigger than the Packers—about 16 pounds per man in the line—but execution is important. The team that clicks will win. We have everything to gain as underdogs and they have a lot to lose. And I'm not only referring to the money. Heck, Uncle Sam will get his share of that."

Reg said he has played before such crowds as 83,000 in the 1962 College All-Star Game and 70,000 against the Jets in New York, but the television audience of an estimated 60 million viewers, the monetary prizes ($15,000 per winner, $7,500 per loser) and the all-around immensity of the first-ever world professional football championship really packs a wallop.

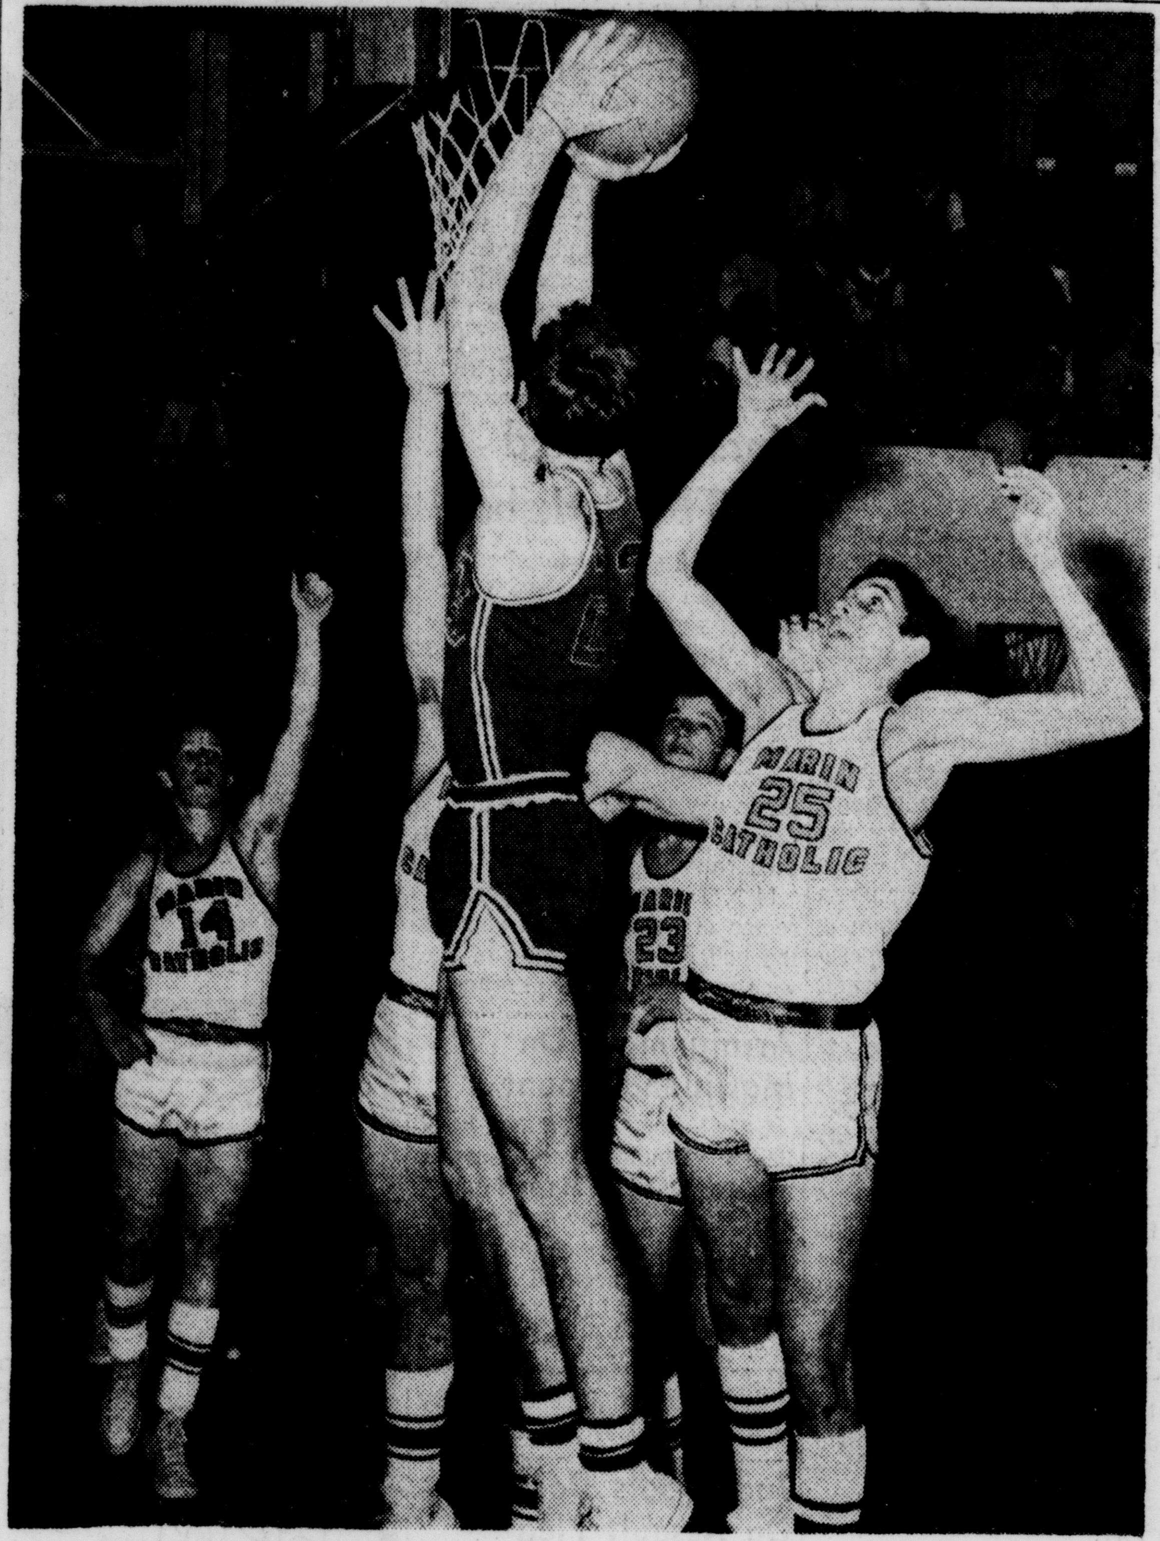
THE DRAKE High School and University of Idaho graduate continued enthusiastically: "My wife, Judy, is coming in from Kansas City. My mom and dad (Ethel and Howell Carolan) are flying down from Lake Tahoe and two of my old schoolboy buddies, Dr. Gary Boero and Bill Purcell, are coming from Marin County.

"I also have received a good luck telegram from my high school coach, Bob Troppmann. He really taught me a lot about football."

CAROLAN SAID he and his wife would return to Kansas City next week to collect their belongings, then head home to Marin. He'll be apartment-hunting here in a couple of weeks and hopes to resume his springtime profession of substitute teaching at College of Marin and the Tam District high schools.

Win or lose tomorrow, Carolan will qualify for a special teaching credential in finances.

Watch for him on your screens. He wears No. 80.



TOO HIGH, TOO FAR—Tamalpais center Pat Schafer is practically surrounded by four Marin Catholic defenders but the 6-3 Indian star has too much height and jump as he dumps in two points to contribute to a 55-38 Tam win at Marin Catholic. Surrounding Schafer are Harry Matsinger (14), Ches Bornia (25) and Rick Garms (23).

BRUINS BEAT BEARS

Stanford, UCLA Triumph; Showdown On TV Tonight

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

If there's to be a race among the Pacific-8 Conference basketball entries, it will develop tonight when the league's two unbeaten teams —UCLA and Stanford — collide in the Bruins' Pauley Pavilion. (The game will be televised to Northern California by KTVU, Channnel 2, at 8 o'clock.)

UCLA, which beat California, 96-78, last night for its third straight league victory, is 11-0 for the season, ranked No. 1 nationally and expected to romp through the Pacific-8.

Stanford, which beat Southern California, 67-58, last night for its third straight league victory, is 8-4 and unranked nationally, but appears to be the only Pacific-8 team good enough to challenge UCLA.

A UCLA triumph may well end any threat to the Bruins' title aspirations in only the second week of conference competition.

In what looks like a seven-team battle for second place, Oregon State edged Washington State, 63-61, and Washington slipped by Oregon, 78-74.

Lew Alcindor, the 7-foot-1 sophomore center who makes UCLA a prohibitive title favorite, led the Bruins' win with 26 points and strong rebounding.

In the Bruins' supporting cast were Lynn Shackelford with 21 points, Lucius Allen with 18 and Mike Warren with 14.

Russ Critchfield played an outstanding game for the Bears, netting 25 points, and Charley Perkins added 22, but UCLA overcame a strong Cal effort with a rush in the last 12 minutes.

UCLA led only 63-58, but Alcindor assumed control of the rebounding, and Warren and Shackelford started scoring to turn a close game into a rout.

Stanford stayed apace of the lead with its best defensive effort of the season and some strong outside shooting.

Center Rick Baker dominated both backboards for the Indians, the tenacious defense kept the pressure on the Trojans, and well-balanced scoring compiled the edge.

Don Griffin totaled 14 points for Stanford, and Art Harris and Mal McElwain each added 13. USC's Steve Jennings was the game's high-point man with 16.

Catholics Thrashed By Indians

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Marin Catholic basketball fans now know why Marin Athletic League basketball coaches have picked Tamalpais to win the championship.

The Indians left no doubt of their superiority over the Wildcats—last night at least—by coasting to a 55-38 triumph in the Marin Catholic gym before 650 fans.

It was 14-2 at the end of the first quarter, the Wildcats mustering only one bucket, missing three free throws and a half dozen shots from the floor. By halftime it was 24-14, then 42-20 at the three-quarter mark.

The Indians were getting great things from center Pat Schafer and forward Floyd Jackson, both in point production and rebounding.

QUICK DEFENSE

Tam's quick-moving defense, coupled with some missed "sure" shots by the Wildcats, left the Indians in front throughout the game. With four cagers usually hitting double figures for Marin Catholic, it went to the other extreme this time, none doing 10 or better. Paul McCarthy and Harry Matsinger led the team with eight points each.

Schafer had a terrific third quarter when Tam really pulled away, making three shots from the floor and four of five free throws. He worked his way in front of Marin Catholic defenders to get most of his points from under the basket.

Novato Is Overrun By Pirates

By ROB HARVEY

In a display of might and finesse, Drake High's cage team overpowered Novato's Hornets last night to notch its third Marin County Athletic League victory in as many tries.

The Hornets, playing before a home crowd of some 975 interested spectators, never had a chance in the decisive 66-47 defeat at the hands of the experienced, defending MCAL champs.

With Jerry Sprout, the Pirates' tough, 6-foot-6 center bolstering the league's No. 1 defense by blocking no less than half a dozen shots, Drake's ball-hawking cagers established a 20-5 bulge at the end of the first quarter and sailed to a 45-15 halftime lead.

LOOKS EASY

They made it look easy, even though head mentor Carl "Red" Brown substituted freely after 4:52 remained in the second period.

Meanwhile, when they were not throwing the ball away or kicking it around, Novato, now winless in three MCAL outings, fought back behind Harold Fain, who paced his team with 12 markers, all from the field.

San Rafael Surprises The Giants

By GARY TISCHLER

San Rafael High's small but pesky Bulldogs harrassed Redwood into a nervous wreck in the first half, then refused to collapse under pressure and pulled out a 54-49 victory to hand the Giants their first Marin County Athletic League loss at San Rafael last night.

The Bulldogs threw a zone at the Giants in the first half, cut them off nearly at mid-court and forced Redwood's usually calm guard Andre Horn into his worst two quarters of basketball to sweep to a nine-point halftime lead at 25-16.

Horn threw the ball away five times, and missed six shots in the first half. And as Horn went, so did the Giants. Redwood, after leading 11-7 at the first period mark, fell apart as the Giants managed only five points in the second quarter while San Rafael was getting 18.

BULLDOGS RALLY

Horn, like a basketball defender of lost causes, revived in the second half and pulled the Giants from the depths of an 11-point deficit to a 45-44 lead with 4:10 left on a 25-footer from the top of the key. The Giants led for the last time on a slithering, twisting drive by Jack Fitzhenry, 48-47, with 1:51 left but the Bulldogs, like avowed teatotalers at a New Year's Party, stayed calm and swept back into the lead on a bursting drive by Mike Donahoo, two free throws by Rich Schau, a daring jumper by Roger Widmer and a pair of free throws by Donahoo after the issue was settled.

Win For Redwood

Although the Redwood High varsity and class B teams suffered their first Marin Athletic League losses against San Rafael last night, the frosh and junior varsity teams kept their records unblemished with victories.

The jayvees nicked the San Rafael juniors 36-35, and the frosh ripped their San Rafael counterparts, 45-26 as Jerry Piro scored 18 pooints.

Terra Linda Wins Upset

Terra Linda High's cage team played its best game of the season last night en route to a 66-64 non-league triumph over visiting, highly touted Salesian of Richmond. Fred Smith topped all scorers with a fine 26-point performance for the winners.

The Trojans, employing a pesky press and zone defense, broke a 35-35 halftime deadlock behind Smith's marksmanship, the outstanding all-around play of center Bruce Kilby, and the clutch performance of Tom McCart, who came off the bench to bag two quickies when Terra Linda fell 6 points behind in the third stanza.

Sausalitans Hurt As Car Strikes Bridge

Four Sausalito residents were injured — one seriously — when their car hit a concrete abutment on the southern approach to the Golden Gate Bridge last night, California Highway Patrol reported.

The car driver was sales engineer Garrett D. Hodgson, 37, of 64 Alexander Avenue, who suffered a cut forehead and left leg.

Passengers were Hodgson's wife, Mary, 38, who suffered face cuts and possible concussion; Alfred D. Belsey, 54, of 205 Second Street, who was treated at Marin General Hospital for minor cuts to the forehead; and his wife, Helen K. Belsey, 51.

Mrs. Belsey was hospitalized at Marin general with a neck concussion and fractures and cuts to the right arm. Her condition today was reported fair.

The Hodgson couple was released after treatment at Harbor Emergency Hospital in San Francisco. The highway patrol said Hodgson was apparently blinded by the headlights of an oncoming car.

Would-Be Span Leaper Rescued

A depressed San Francisco man was taken off the Golden Gate Bridge yesterday by California Highway Patrol officers, who feared he might decide to jump.

Robert Charles Matheisl, 31, foreman for a San Francisco construction company, was seen shortly after noon walking on the east side of the bridge.

Highway Patrolman John F. Allison said Matheisl was scuffing his feet along the bridge walk, his head bowed and eyes downcast. Allison said Matheisl appeared very depressed when, taken to the toll plaza office he said everything had "gone wrong" and that he went out on the bridge to "think about jumping." Matheisl was taken to San Francisco General Hospital for observation.

Tryouts Are Set

Homestead Players will hold tryouts for two plays by Eugene Ionesco Tuesday and Friday at 8 p.m. in Brown's Hall, Mill Valley. The two one-act plays, "The Bald Soprano" and "The Lesson," are scheduled for late March. Director will be Bill Hughes of Sausalito.

College Of Marin Announces Spring Night Course List

The College of Marin has announced a schedule of 115 credit and 98 non-credit evening classes for the spring semester.

The schedule includes 20 new credit courses at Novato High college in Kentfield, and 10 new credti courses at Novato High School. Ten new non-credit courses are offered, but the total of 98 non-credit courses is down from last spring's offering of 108.

The evening classes start Feb. 6. Brochures on the courses are available at the college.

New non-credit courses at the college include blueprint reading on Monday nights; beginning aviation ground school Monday or Wednesday nights; travel agency and tourist industry training and health and heart care (taught by doctors) on Tuesday nights, intermediate shorthand and income tax preparation on Wednesday; history and appreciation of wine, and reform and revolution in Egypt, on Thursday.

A non-credit course in organization, management and leadership is offered Tuesday nights at Terra Linda High School, and a course on apprentice barbering on Thursday nights at Novato High School.

New credit evening courses offered at the Kentfield campus include business law, communications, semiconductor circuit analysis, history of the Far East and personal and social adjustment on Monday nights; economics, United States history, history of philosophy, traffic control and reading improvement, Tuesdays; data processing applications, Wednesdays; plane geometry and criminal law, Thursdays.

Also at Kentfield, beginning photography will be offered Monday and Wednesday nights, intermediate shorthand Monday and Thursday nights, fire fighting tactics and strategy Thursday or Friday nights, protection equipment and systems, Tuesday or Wednesday nights, elementary German and intermediate Spanish, Tuesday and Thursday nights.

New evening credit courses at Novato High School include introductory philosophy on Monday nights, accounting on Monday and Wednesday nights, contemporary novel and marriage and family, Tuesday nights; economics, elementary physiography, western civilization and elementary algebra, Wednesdays and cultural anthropology and business mathematics, Thursdays.

Students may register by mail through Friday, or in person from 7 to 8:30 p.m. on Feb. 2 at the Kentfield campus for credit courses.

Students can register for non-credit courses during the next two weeks, or on the first night of class.

Council Due Land Report For Street

The San Rafael City Council Monday night will hear a report on efforts to acquire rights-of-way for connecting Francisco Boulevard and Irwin Streets.

The two streets were left disconnected by construction of improvements to the interchange at the south end of the Highway 101 viaduct.

City Manager Dan E. Andersen will report on preliminary negotiations with Shamrock Materials Inc. and the Rice Estate, through whose properties the right-of-way would pass.

Other items on the 8 p.m. agenda at city hall include a long-standing appeal from a planning commission veto on further sewer connections in Peacock Gap Unit Six and opening bids on two hydraulic cushion flap gates for the Francisco Boulevard pumping station.

The council will take up uniform rezoning of three parcels at 171-177 Woodland Avenues, approval of a final map for Las Colindas Unit Ten subdivision, a report on erosion control in Seaview Heights Unit Two and the leasing of a pistol range by the San Rafael Sanitation District to the city and county.

Teachers Ask Place On Screening Board

Mill Valley Teachers Assn. last night asked the school district board to let them place a representative on the committee to screen candidates for the job of district superintendent.

"There seemed to be favorable reaction" to the suggestion by teacher representative James Martin, according to Supt. G. R. McConnell, who will leave the district June 30.

McConnell said the board will consider this and a list of qualifications a new superintendent must have when the board meets at 8 p.m. Monday.

Also postponed to Monday night was selection of the entire screening committee. McConnell said the board was reluctant to decide on members of the screening committee last night.

Purpose of last night's meeting was to discuss standards to be met by McConnell's successor with Supt. Virgil S. Hollis of Marin County Schools, Richard Koon of the University of California and Erwin Johnson of Stanford University.

Koon and Johnson were chosen to help set these standards by the deans of the schools of education at their universities, but have not yet been appointed to the screening committee itself, McConnell said.

Upshot of the two and a half hour meeting was appointment of board chairman William L. Clark and trustee M. James Norton to a subcommittee to draw a list of criteria and present it for board approval Monday night, according to McConnell.

McConnell said a large part of the discussion centered on the relative importance of a superintendent who spends most of his time on the instructional program, compared to one who spends his time overseeing the general activities of the district.

Leased Land Agreement For Library

Sausalito City Mgr. George W. Patterson yesterday disclosed that agreement was reached Thursday evening on terms to permit the city to reacquire leased land which is part of the site for the proposed new library.

The agreement means the city can meet the deadline Monday to apply for federal funds to pay one-third of the cost of the site. The rest of the site is still in city control.

Patterson said he attempted to notify the Independent-Journal before the special city council meeting at which the agreement was approved. The meeting was called at the last moment, he said, after negotiations were completed between the city and lessees of the site.

Under the terms of the agreement, the city could exercise an option for $20,000 to reacquire 8,342 square feet leased by the city to Madden and Lewis northeast of Vina Del Mar plaza until the year 2002. The site is sub-leased to Mac-Marin, operator of the Spinnaker Restaurant.

The option to buy the leasehold interest would not be exercised, Patterson explained, if the city's application for state and federal funds totaling $148,906 were not approved. Action on the application is expected within two months, Head Librarian Kay Berteau estimated.

Addition of the land cost brought the total cost of the library to $446,716, she said.

Also agreed upon at the special council meeting, Patterson said, was a landscape easement on 4,000 square feet of the leased sandspit at no cost to the city.

Councilmen voted 4-0 on the agreement, Patterson reported. Councilmen Jan Paul Dyk was absent.

A $250,000 bond election will be held March 7 to finance the remainder of the library cost.

Auto Collision Cause Reported

A three-car collision Thursday, in which one driver incurred minor injuries, was caused by a mechanical failure on one car, the California Highway Patrol reported yesterday.

The patrol reported that cars driven by Wayne Duncan Telford, 17, of 31 Gregg Place, Novato, and Joseph James Anselmo, 39, of 120 Merim Street, San Rafael, slowed for traffic at 4 p.m., but a fluid line burst on the brake of a car driven by Ernest Jay Belding, 49, of Auburn, and his car struck the rear of Anselmo's pushing it into Telford's car. Belding told the patrol he would see his own doctor.

Youth Contest Winners Listed

Winners in the youth leadership contest sponsored by San Rafael Elks Lodge 1108 were announced today by Frank Ench, exalter ruler.

They are Michael J. Giacomini of Olema, a senior at Marin Catholic High School and Gretchen Walford of 418 Oakdale Avenue, Corte Madera, a senior at Redwood High School.

Prizewinners each received savings bonds from the lodge and their entries have been forwarded for state, and possibly national, contests.

The leadership contest, sponsored annually by the Elks for high school students, judges the students not on scholarship, but on their accomplishments in leadership, citizenship, initiative and community activities.

Six Marinites In Marine Reserves

Six Marin men have been inducted into the Marine Corps Reserve at the San Rafael training center, and will begin six months' active duty within three months.

They are Robert E. Barcewski of 716 Prince Royal Drive; Robert M. Simpton of 445 Vista Grande, and Kit P. Thomas of 49 Serra Way, all San Rafael; Walter P. Kosta of 8 Laurel Avenue, San Anselmo; Vance C. Montgomery of 180 Toyon Drive, Fairfax, and Peter I Teller of 150 Shady Lane, Ross.

First Meeting For New Scout Troop

First meeting for Marin's newest Boy Scout Troop, No. 65 will be held Jan. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the San Anselmo American Legion Log Cabin, when the troop's first hike will be planned.

The executive committee includes Ronald R. Blanque, Fred E. McQueen, Ralph Lewis, Konstantin G. Zaharoff and Ramond A. Blanquie, chairman. Boys wishing to join the troop may call Blanquie.

County Inmate Back In Jail

A 40-year-old work-furlough fugitive from county jail since April 8, 1965, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday afternoon on felony complaint of the failure to return.

He is Owen K. Perry, of Martiinez. Perry, arrested on a drunk charge in Contra Costa County, was returned to Marin County yesterday by sheriff's officers. He was serving a year in jail here for forgery when he departed, officers said.

Judge Hadden W. Roth scheduled plea entry for 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Literary Courses

A nine-week course in poem and play writing will be offered by Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Department. The class will meet from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the Community and Youth Center. Date of the first meeting has not been set. Teacher will be Norman Moser of Mill Valley.

How Packers And Chiefs Match Up

By MIKE RATHET

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Here's the way the National League champion Green Bay Packers and American League champion Kansas City Chiegfs match up for Sunday's Super Bowl football game:

OFFENSE

Split End

Packers — No. 84, Carroll Dale — a 6-2, 200-pound, 7-year veteran from VPI. Probably is Green Bay's best deep receiver, a cutie in the Del Shofner mold. Caught 37 passes for 876 yards and 7 TDs.

Chiefs — No. 88, Chris Burford — A 6-3 210-pound, 7-year veteran from Stanford. A stylish receiver but dos not have exceptional speed. Caught 58 passes for 758 yards and 8 TDs.

Left Tackle

Packers — No. 76, Bob Skoronski — a 6-3, 250-pound, 9-year veteran from Indiana. Strong and a good blocker.

Chiefs — No. 77, Jim Tyrer — A 6-6, 292-pound, 6-year veteran from Ohio State. An exceptional blocker and an all-AFL selection.

Left Guard

Packers — No. 63, Fuzzy Thurston — A 6-1, 245-pound, 9-year veteran from Valparaiso. A solid pass protector equally proficient at pulling to lead running play.

Chiefs — No. 17, Ed Budde, — A 6-5, 260-pound, 4-year veteran from Michigan State. Outstanding on rushing plays and an all-AFL selection.

Center

Packers — No. 50, Bill Curry — A 6-2, 235-pound, 2-year veteran from Georgia Tech. Good blocker, but only in his first year as a starter.

Chiefs — No. 66, Wayne Frazier — A 6-3, 245-pound, 3-year veteran from Auburn. Also in his first full year, but has learned his trade.

Right Guard

Packers — No. 64, Jerry Kramer — A 6-3, 245-pound, 9-year veteran from Idaho. Exceptional on Green Bay's patented power sweep and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 64, Curt Merz — A 6-4, 267-pound, 7-year veteran from Iowa. Is as strong as they come, a good pass protector and an all-AFL selection.

Right Tackle

Packers — No. 75, Forrest Gregg — A 6-4, 250-pound, 10-year veteran from Southern Methodis. Potent blocker on power sweep, good pass protector and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 73, Dave Hill — A 6-5, 254-pound, 4-year veteran from Auburn. Improving rapidly. Better on pass plays than rushing play.

Tight End

Packers — No. 81, Marv Fleming — A 6-4, 235-pound, 4-year veteran from Utah. Still developing as a receiver but caught 31 passes for 361 yards and 2 TDs.

Chiefs — No. 84, Fred Arbanas — A 6-3, 240-pound 5-year veteran from Michigan State. A fine blocker who has overcome the handicap of loss of sight in one eye. Caught 22 passes for 305 yards and 4 TDs and was an all-AFL selection.

Quarterback

Packers — No. 15, Bart Starr — A 6-1, 200-pound, 11-year veteran from Alabama. Probably had his best year with 156 completions, a .622 completion percentage, 2,257 yards gained, 14 TDs and just 3 interceptions. An all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 16, Len Dawson — A 6-0 190-pound, 10-year veteran from Purdue. Also had his best year with 159 completions, a .560 percentage, 2,527 yards, 26 TDs and 10 interceptions. An all-AFL selection.

Running Back

Packers — No. 22, Elijah Pitts — A 6-1, 205-pound, 6-year veteran from Philander Smith. Replaced Paul Horning — and played like him. Gained 393 yards on ground for a 3.4 average and 7 TDs; caught 26 passes for 460 yards.

Chiefs — No. 21, Mike Garret — A rookie from Southern Califor-190-pound rookie from Southern California. Size has been no handicap because of his tremendous balance. Gained 801 yards rushing for 5.4 average and 6 TDs; caught 12 passes for 175 yards.

Fullback

Packers — No. 31, Jim Taylor — A 6-0, 215-pound, 9-year veteran from LSU. Good short yardage runner who used consistently as a receiver this year. Gained 705 yards rushing for 3.5 average and 4 TDs; caught 41 passes for 331 yards.

Chiefs — No. 32, Curt McClinton — A 6-3, 227-pound 5-year veteran from Kansas. A capable runner also used as key blocking back. Gained 540 yards rushing for 3.8 average and 4 TDs.

Packers —No. 86, Boyd Dowler — A 6-5, 225-pound, 8-year veteran from Colorado. Not overly fast, but has sure hands and is tough on sideline patterns. Caught 29 passes for 392 yards but didn't score.

Chiefs — No. 89, Otis Taylor — A 6-2, 211-pound, 2-year veteran from Prairie View. Has been described as a Lance Alworth with better size. Caught 58 passes for 1,297 yards and 8 TDs and was an all-AFL selection.

DEFENSE

Packers —No. 87, Willie Davis — A 6-3, 245-pound, 9-year veteran from Grambling. Probably the quickest end in the league, smart, reacts well and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 75, Jerry Mays — A 6-4, 252-pound, 6-year veteran from Southern Methodist. A quick, exceptional pass rusher and an all-AFL selection.

Left Tackle

Packers — No. 77, Ron Kostelnik — A 6-4, 260-pound, 6-year veteran from Cincinnati. A strongboy who bowls people over.

Chiefs — No. 58, Andy Rice — A 6-3, 266-pound rookie from Texas Southern. Good, but still learning the trade.

Right Tackle

Packers — No. 74, Henry Jordan — A 6-3, 250-pound, 10-year veteran from Virginia. Strength is his biggest asset. Forms a solid duo with Kostelnik.

Chiefs — No. 86, Buck Buchanan — A 6-7, 287-pound, 4-year veteran from Grambling. Strong pass rusher with good mobility for his size and an all-AFL selection.

Right End

Packers — No. 82, Lionel Aldridge — A 6-4, 245-pound, 4-year veteran from Utah State. Not as quick as Davis, but strong.

Chiefs — No. 85, Chuck Hurston — A 6-6, 230-pound, 2-year veteran from Auburn. Fast, uses speed well. Still learning.

Left Linebacker

Packers — No. 89, Dave Robinson — A 6-3, 245-pound, 4-year veteran from Penn State. Very quick and strong and has long arms that make him an outstanding pass protector.

Chiefs — No. 78, Bobby Bell — A 6-4, 228-pound, 4-year veteran from Minnesota. Outstanding speed, good strength, can stop both pass and rush and was an all-AFL selection.

Middle Linebacker

Packers — No. 66, Ray Nitschke — A 6-3, 240-pound, 9-year veteran from Illinois. Strong, hard tackler who is also quick enough to go back on pass and was an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 69, Sherrill Headrick — A 6-2, 240-pound 8-year veteran from Texas Christian. Tough is the word. Could be

Right Linebacker

Packers — No. 66, Lee Roy Caffey — A 6-3, 250-pound, 4-year veteran from Texas A&M. Rangy, good tackler and pass protector and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 55, E. J. Holub — A 6-4, 236-pound, 6-year veteran from Texas Tech. Not exceptionally fast or strong, but has great desire.

Left Cornerback

Packers — No. 26, Herb Adderley — A 6-0, 210-pound, 6-year veteran from Michigan State. Quick, the gambler on defense and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 24, Fred Williamson — A 6-3, 209-pound, 7-year veteran from Northwestern. Cantankerous, quck and a big gambler.

Left Safety

Packers — No. 40, Tom Brown — A 6-1, 190-pound 3-year veteran from Maryland. Good reactions but only in his second full year and still developing.

Chiefs — No. 20, Bobby Hunt — A 6-1, 193-pound, 5-year veteran from Auburn. Good reactions and mobility and an all-AFL selection.

Right Safety

Packers — No. 24, Willie Wood — A 5-10, 190-pound, 7-year veteran from Southern California. The free safety, roams very well, covers a lot of ground. A defensive leader and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 42, Johnny Robinson — a 6-1, 205-pound, 7-year veteran from Louisiana State. Strong, clever at diagnosing plays and an all-AFL selection.

Right Cornerback

Packers — No. 21, Bob Jeter — a 6-1, 205-pound, 4-year veteran from Iowa. Quick, a gambler who will step inside quite a bit in interception bids.

Chiefs — No. 22, Willie Mitchell — a 6-1, 185-pound, 3-year veteran from Tennessee A&I. Has speed and quickness, but still is learning.

Kickers

Packers — No. 34, Don Chandler handles punts, kickoffs and place-kicking for Green Bay. Had off year with only 12 of 28 field goals made.

Chiefs — No. 44, Jerrell Wilson, handles punts; No. 17, Fletcher Smith handles kickoffs and No. 15, Mike Mercer handles field goals. Mercer made 20 of 26 attempts.

Litchfield Eyes Eighth Straight

Litchfield's of San Rafael, sitting pretty with a 7-0 record and a two-game lead, takes on its nearest competitor while shooting for its eighth straight win in the San Francisco Triple A Winter Baseball League tomorrow.

Litchfield's meets Ellis Brooks Chevrolet at 11:30 a.m. at Golden Gate Park's Graham Diamond. Litchfield's won their first meeting, 7-4.

The high-riding league leaders will bring a solid .356 batting average into the fray with Ron Gasper at .607 leading the way.

Mrs. Kett Almost Scores Real One

The gals were playing their hole-in-one contest on the 15th green Thursday at the Marin Country Club links in Novato and Mrs. L. T. Kett won, almost with a real one.

As the women gasped, Mrs. Kett's ball rolled within two inches of the cup—one and three-quarters inches to be exact. In low gross competition, Mrs. Thomas Kegwin won a playoff with Mrs. Charles Godak after each shot an 88.

Winners were:

Class A — Mesdames Charles Godak, 88-14—74; John McVey, 91-15—76; Gordon Davenport, 92-15—77.

Class B — Mmes. John Grey, 93-17—76; Don Roberts, 93-17—76; George Tripps, 97-18—79.

Class C—Mmes. C. R. Johnson 96-21—75; V. C. Redman, 97-20—

Warriors And Barry Throttled

DETROIT (AP)—Rick Barry looks tired but the National Basketball Assn.'s leading scorer must keep playing this weekend for the fatigued San Francisco Warriors.

Barry got only 15 points last night at San Jose as the Warriors lost 119-117 to the New York Knicks. Barry, who had pushed through 41 points the previous night, got only one field goal in the first quarter and one field goal in the second half.

For Barry and center Nate Thurmond, it was the fourth game in as many nights because they played last Tuesday in the NBA All-Star Game in San Francisco.

And the two workhorses who ran one-two in the voting for the all-star most valuable player will make it six contests in six nights with games tonight at Detroit and tomorrow in St. Louis.

The Knicks and Warriors traded the lead frequently before New York went ahead for good at 113-112 with 2:24 to go. The Warriors got to within 117-115 in the last minute before Howard Komives iced it for New York with a 20-foot jumper.

Dick Barnett scored 30 points for the Knicks and topped scorers and Jeff Mullins paced the Warriors with 28.

Dick Van Arsdale guarded Barry and held him to his lowest point total of the season.

TRACK AND FIELD

Prep In Spotlight At Oakland Sunday

OAKLAND (AP) — Another high school star threatens the best in the world's track and field class, this time in the long jump.

Gerry Lindgren and Jim Ryun already have enhanced the teenaged ranks and now watch Jerry Proctor, a senior at Pasadena, Muir High School.

In practice, Proctor has been measured past the 27-foot mark and Ralph Boston, former Olympic champion and world record holder, knows it.

Boston will concentrate on the long jump and has withdrawn from the hurdles for tomorrow night's invitational indoor meet, inaugurating track at the new Oakland Coliseum.

Boston won the All-American title a week ago at San Francisco with a leap of 25-2½ and still holds the American record at 26-6¼ compared with the 27-0 world mark claimed by Russia's Igor Ter-Ovanesyan.

The Athens meet, second of the season on the West coast, includes John Rambo, the Long Beach high jumper who equalled the American record a week ago at 7 feet 3 inches. Neal Steinhauer of Oregon, new claimant to the indoor shot put record at 66-6¾, won't compete in this Sunday meet.

Seven high jumpers who have cleared seven feet and six pole vaulters who have topped 16 feet are on the entry list as the Oakland meet commands depth in each event.

The new Fastrac process has been used on the wooden track which could aid times and distances.

World indoor record holder Art Walker of Los Angeles established his triple jump mark on this synthetic track last year in Albuquerque.

He aims to better his 54-9½, a limit imposed partially because at the AAU meet in New Mexico, a longer leap could have put him on the running track.

Preliminaries in the pole vault open the program at 6:30 with running events starting a half hour later. The long jump starts at 6:40 with Boston, the 1960 Olympic champion facing the challenge of the prep Proctor.

Sprinter Charley Greene heads the field for the 60 with a challenge from Darel Newman, the former Fresno State star. The mile run could also produce a talent now coming into its own.

Joe Lynch, former Georgetown University runner, has been working out at Santa Monica in Southern California under the coaching of Hungarian Mikhail Igloi who thinks he can do a 3:56.

So far, the best for Lynch has been 4:06 but Igloi's judgment is based on the training of such a star as Jim Beatty, formerly the premier American miler.

Brookline Quint Wins San Rafael Recreation Game

Brookline Electric picked up where it left off in the first half of the season and the Christmas tournament by rapping Mill Valley Boys Club, 76-66, in an A Division game of the San Rafael Recreation Department Adult Basketball League Thursday night.

Ron O'Connell led a trio of double figure scorers for the winners with 20 points. Ken Anderson had 14 and Steve Bryant had 12.

Brad Busch topped Mill Valley with 23 points, followed by Steve Anderson with 21 and Jim Tupper with 12.

In another A Division game, Paradise Pharmacy downed San Rafael Teachers, 64-53, despite a 31-point out put by San Rafael High basketball coach Mike Diaz. The winners were topped by Jeff Chapman's 24 points and Jim Wiley's 16.

In a pair of B Division games, McGraw Hill routed Native Sons, 62-38, and Stop N Go Market nicked Marin's Marines, 63-54. Terry Thomas had 17 for McGraw Hill. Don Hanson with 18, Joe Hebel with 13 and Bob Brackett with 12 led Stop N Go while Jim Blomguisi was high for the Marines with 15 points.

Famed Globetrotters At Richmond Arena Monday

For the first time in their 41-year history, the Harlem Globetrotters have a new coach.

Inman Jackson, who is no newcomer to the Trotter ranks, will mastermind the famous magicians' comical capers and legitimate play when they play the New York Nationals at Richmond Auditorium next Monday and at the Cow Palace in San Francisco Jan. 20. He took over the head coaching reins when founder and owner-coach Abe Saperstein died of a heart attack last year.

Saperstein often credited "Big Jack" as the person responsible for the clever ball handling, which gained the Trotters fame in all of the 104 countries where they have performed. He joined the remarkable show team as a player when it was first organized by Saperstein in 1927.

When his playing days were over in the 40s, he stayed with the Trotters as an assistant coach to impart his trick ball handling knowledge to youngsters such as the hilarious Meadowlark Lemon, the current Clown Prince of the Court. One of his prize proteges is Fred Neal, current sensational dribbler with the Trotters who always stops the show with his ball-bouncing routine.

A Tie In San Diego Golf Open

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Bob Goalby and Randy Glover, shooting 10-under-par golf for 36 holes, topped a trimmed down field of 79 players going into the third and next-to-last round of the $66,000 San Diego Open today.

The 35-year-old Goalby, a native of Belleville, Iii., who now plays out Palm Springs, finished with a late rush in yesterday's second round to shoot a seven-under-par 64 on the Stardust Country Club. Par is 35-36—71.

With his opening round 68, this gave him a 36-hole total of 132 and put him into a tie with Glover who had rounds of 68-64.

Three strokes back at the halfway mark were 48-year-old Tommy Bolt, Sarasota, Fla., and newcomer Chris Blocker, Jal, N.M. Bolt had rounds of 67-68 and Blocker 68-67 for 135.

Still in contention for top prize of $13,200 with 136 totals were Art Wall, Honesdale, Pa., 71-65; Bobby Nichols, the 1964 national PGA champion from Louisville, Ky., 66-70; and Ronnie Reif, San Bernardino club pro 68-68.

Dick Lotz, Hayward and Dave Hill, Evergreen, Colo., marked the halfway point with scores of 137. Lotz had 72-65 and Hill 69-68.

Among casualties who failed to make the cut because they had scores of more than 148 were such prominent golf names as: George Knudson, Toronto, Canada, 73-72—145; E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, St. Louis, Mo., 70-75—145; Mike Souchak, Birmingham, Mich., 77-69—146; Johnny Pott, Golf Hills, Miss., 73-73—146; George Bayer, Incline Village, Nev., 73-73—146, and Phil Rogers, La Jolla, 70-74—144.

Defending champion Billy Casper, golf's biggest official money-winner in 1966 with $121,644, made the cut with a score of 71-70—141, nine strokes back of the leaders.

Seals Romp To Fifth Straight Win

SAN DIEGO (AP)—The California Seals look forward this weekend to cementing their hold on second place in the Western Hockey League. They'll play two games, the first tonight against the last-place San Diego Gulls.

The Seals swamped the Gulls 7-0 last night in Oakland for their fifth straight victory and moved into a second-place tie with Vancouver. They're still 15 points behind first-place Portland, however.

Back-up goalie Jean Guy Morissette scored his first shutout of the season by kicking out 33 Gull attempts.

Danny Belisle and George Swarbrick each had a two-goal night. Also scoring for the Seals were Bob Kabel, Doug Senior and Wayne Maxner.

It was the fourth time the Seals had beaten the Gulls in as many games.

Sizzling Tars Fell Redwoods

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

EUREKA — College of Marin raced off to a 15-0 lead against big, lumbering College of the Redwoods last night, then waltzed to an 81-58 Golden Valley Conference victory behind a devastating full-court press and another salvo of red-hot shooting by its trio of guards.

The Tars threw up a thieving full-court press that left Redwood without a point for the first five minutes of play. By the time the big boys from Eureka got on the board, it was already over.

The Tars led by 18 at halftime, 42-24.

Russ Smith paced the Tar victory with his second straight sizzling shooting performance. The former Redwood High School ace ripped in 10 of 17 shots and added two free throws for 22 points. He got big help from dependable Bill Pandiani with 17 points, Terry Overlid with 12 and Tom Stetson with 10. Everybody but Tar coach Cal Riemcke played for the Mariners.

The Tars held a 32-29 rebound edge over the taller opposition with 5-9 Pandiani getting nine and 5-8 Bob Phillips eight.

Six-four Mike Lovelace of Redwoods topped all scorers with 27 points, nearly half the home team total, but he was the only Redwoods player in double figures.

The victory brought the Tars to the .500 level for the season at 9-9 and gave them a 3-1 Golden Valley Conference mark. They meet Redwoods again tonight at 8:00 here.

Green Bay Solid Favorite In Super Classic

By MIKE RATHET

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Green Bay Packers and Kansas City Chiefs meet tomorrow in the long-awaited, much-ballyhooed Super Bowl, a game that likely will establish—to almost everyone except the coaches involved—whether the National or American football league is superior.

While fan interest for this first meeting between the 47-year-old NFL and seven-year-old AFL centers around the superiority question, neither Green Bay Coach Vince Lombardi nor Kansas City Coach Hank Stram was viewing it exactly that way.

"It's a big football game," said Lombardi, "but winning or losing won't mean the end of the world as far as the Packers are concerned — or Kansas City either."

"Superiority of one league over the other will be hard to determine in one game," Stram said. "But it will give people a better picture than they've had.

"With the public it probably will 'prove' that."

What the game ultimately will prove remains a question, but there's little doubt that the viewing public will be the largest in the history of any sporting event despite the fact there probably will be empty seats in 93,000-seat Los Angeles Coliseum when the game gets underway at 1:05, PST.

But, with both NBC and CBS televising and broadcasting the game nationally, the largest audience in sports history is virtually guaranteed.

Also guaranteed is the largest payoff in the history of pro team sports with $15,000 going to each member of the winning team and $7,500 to each loser.

The oddsmakers have made the Packers almost a two-touchdown favorite to grab the pot of gold, along with the enormous prestige of winning this first battle for supremacy between the longtime rival leagues who suddenly grasped hands as one big, happy family last June.

Harmony, as a matter of fact, has been the key word at the Super Bowl site and the various factions have meticulously compromised on all variations of the playing rules.

Since the footballs used in the two leagues vary slightly — the AFL ball is supposed to be easier to pass; the NFL ball easier to kick—the Chiefs will use the American League ball when they are on offense and the Packers will use the National League ball when they are.

There will be three officials from each league, sudden death will be in effect if the two teams are tied at the end of regulation time and the leagues have agreed to use the NFL one-point conversion rule instead of the AFL's two-point conversion option.

The battle itself, however, will not be fought at the conference table but by the players involved and in only two instances is there the possibility that the usual starting line-ups will be altered.

Lombardi has hinted that running back Paul Hornung, his onetime Golden Boy, may see action at the halfback spot while there still remains some question about the status of Fred Arbanas, Kansas City's all-league tight end who suffered a slight shoulder separation in the AFL title game.

Elijah Pitts is expected to start in the Green Bay backfield along with fullback Jim Taylor, flanker Boyd Dowler and quarterback Bart Starr, the unerring aerialist who completed 62 per cent of his passes as the Packers rolled to a 12-2 regular season record.

Starr also has top receivers, besides Dowler, in split end Carroll Dale and tight end Marv Fleming, but the big weapon for the Packers usually is their rigid defense.

The Green Bay front four of Willie Davis, Ron Kostelnik, Henry Jordan and Lionel Aldridge is a veteran unit, linebackers Dave Robinson, Ray Nitschke and Lee Roy Caffey all are quick and strong and Herb Adderley and Willie Wood are exceptional defensive backs.

Tackling that defense will be a Kansas City offense that pulled the Chiefs to an 11-2-1 record and revolves around Len Dawson's passes to Arbanas, Otis Taylor and Chris Burford and the running of rookie Mike Garrett and fullback Curt McClinton.

If Arbanas is unable to start or has to be pulled out during the game, Reg Carolan or Aaron Brown, a rooike who has worked mostly at a defensive tackle spot, will move in at tight end.

While the Packers have experience in their offensive line and defensive unit, the Chiefs have a heavy edge in the weight department.

On the offensive line are such heavyweights as 292-pound tackle Jim Tyrer and 267-pound guard Curt Merz while Buck Buchanan, 6-foot-7, 287-pound tackle, is the No. 1 behemoth on the defensive front four.

As for the linebackers and defensive backs, Bobby Bell was an all-league choice at his outside linebacking post while Johnny Robinson grabbed a spot at safety.

The Packers went through a short workout at the Coliseum today after moving into Los Angeles from their Santa Barbara training quarters. The Chiefs remained at their Long Beach site and did not work out.

Drake Grad Tells Of Pressures Of Tomorrow's Super Bowl Game

REG CAROLAN

COUNTDOWN—"My stomach is in a knot. I don't know how much longer I can take it. We started getting keyed up three weeks ago, before the AFL championship, and it's been building up ever since. Honestly, I'm so excited I feel like I'm going to burst."

Reg Carolan, all 6-foot-6, 238 pounds of him, was at the other end of the line last night, trying to relax in his Santa Monica hotel room, when I buzzed him on the prospects for tomorrow's Super Duper Bowl game in Los Angeles.

ONE OF the most gifted all-around athletes ever to come out of Marin County, Carolan is reserve tight end for the AFL's Kansas City Chiefs and figures to see considerable action against the Green Bay Packers.

"No, I don't think I'll start, but I'm certain I'll see some action," he said over the long-distance horn. Injured first string Fred Arbanas, Carolan added, has been practicing the last two days and is expected to start with an assist from a Novocain injection in his aching shoulder.

"FRED IS a tough and great competitor," Carolan praised, "and I just hope he doesn't hurt himself further Sunday. But I'm ready whenever they need me."

Reg, an articulate and gregarious redhead, was ready two weeks ago when Arbanas was injured in the first quarter of the AFL title game with Buffalo. The king-sized Marin Countian played three-quarters as the Chiefs romped, 31-7.

DURING THE regular season, however, he was used sparingly, catching only 7 passes for 154 yards and 3 TDs.

Asked about the odds favoring the Packs, Carolan admitted: "The press down here doesn't give us much of a chance and we're about a two TD underdog, but I prefer it that way. The players are 'high' and we have confidence in our ability, but we also realize we're up against an excellent football team and an image as well. I know many of the Packers personally and they're just human beings like the rest of us, but they have that 'unbeatables' image.

"WE'RE A lot bigger than the Packers—about 16 pounds per man in the line—but execution is important. The team that clicks will win. We have everything to gain as underdogs and they have a lot to lose. And I'm not only referring to the money. Heck, Uncle Sam will get his share of that."

Reg said he has played before such crowds as 83,000 in the 1962 College All-Star Game and 70,000 against the Jets in New York, but the television audience of an estimated 60 million viewers, the monetary prizes ($15,000 per winner, $7,500 per loser) and the all-around immensity of the first-ever world professional football championship really packs a wallop.

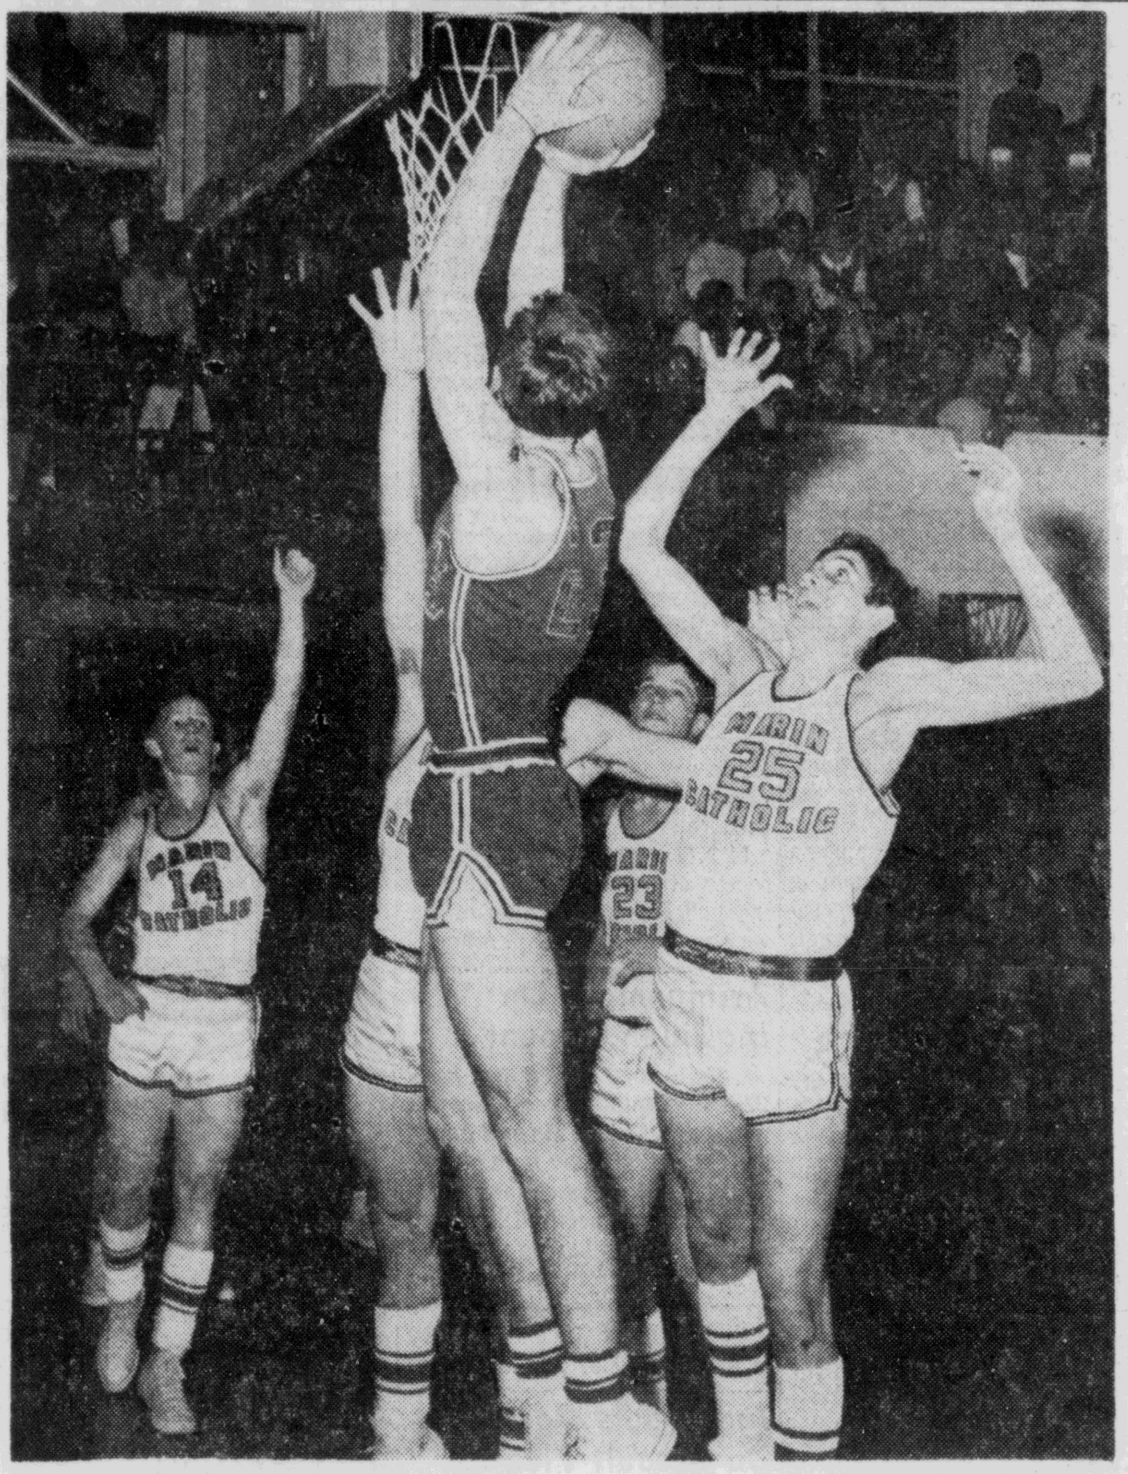
THE DRAKE High School and University of Idaho graduate continued enthusiastically: "My wife, Judy, is coming in from Kansas City. My mom and dad (Ethel and Howell Carolan) are flying down from Lake Tahoe and two of my old schoolboy buddies, Dr. Gary Boero and Bill Purcell, are coming from Marin County.

"I also have received a good luck telegram from my high school coach, Bob Troppmann. He really taught me a lot about football."

CAROLAN SAID he and his wife would return to Kansas City next week to collect their belongings, then head home to Marin. He'll be apartment-hunting here in a couple of weeks and hopes to resume his springtime profession of substitute teaching at College of Marin and the Tam District high schools.

Win or lose tomorrow, Carolan will qualify for a special teaching credential in finances.

Watch for him on your screens. He wears No. 80.



TOO HIGH, TOO FAR—Tamalpais center Pat Schafer is practically surrounded by four Marin Catholic defenders but the 6-3 Indian star has too much height and jump as he dumps in two points to contribute to a 55-38 Tam win at Marin Catholic. Surrounding Schafer are Harry Matsinger (14), Ches Bornia (25) and Rick Garms (23).

BRUINS BEAT BEARS

Stanford, UCLA Triumph; Showdown On TV Tonight

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

If there's to be a race among the Pacific-8 Conference basketball entries, it will develop tonight when the league's two unbeaten teams —UCLA and Stanford — collide in the Bruins' Pauley Pavilion. (The game will be televised to Northern California by KTVU, Channnel 2, at 8 o'clock.)

UCLA, which beat California, 96-78, last night for its third straight league victory, is 11-0 for the season, ranked No. 1 nationally and expected to romp through the Pacific-8.

Stanford, which beat Southern California, 67-58, last night for its third straight league victory, is 8-4 and unranked nationally, but appears to be the only Pacific-8 team good enough to challenge UCLA.

A UCLA triumph may well end any threat to the Bruins' title aspirations in only the second week of conference competition.

In what looks like a seven-team battle for second place, Oregon State edged Washington State, 63-61, and Washington slipped by Oregon, 78-74.

Lew Alcindor, the 7-foot-1 sophomore center who makes UCLA a prohibitive title favorite, led the Bruins' win with 26 points and strong rebounding.

In the Bruins' supporting cast were Lynn Shackelford with 21 points, Lucius Allen with 18 and Mike Warren with 14.

Russ Critchfield played an outstanding game for the Bears, netting 25 points, and Charley Perkins added 22, but UCLA overcame a strong Cal effort with a rush in the last 12 minutes.

UCLA led only 63-58, but Alcindor assumed control of the rebounding, and Warren and Shackelford started scoring to turn a close game into a rout.

Stanford stayed apace of the lead with its best defensive effort of the season and some strong outside shooting.

Center Rick Baker dominated both backboards for the Indians, the tenacious defense kept the pressure on the Trojans, and well-balanced scoring compiled the edge.

Don Griffin totaled 14 points for Stanford, and Art Harris and Mal McElwain each added 13. USC's Steve Jennings was the game's high-point man with 16.

Catholics Thrashed By Indians

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Marin Catholic basketball fans now know why Marin Athletic League basketball coaches have picked Tamalpais to win the championship.

The Indians left no doubt of their superiority over the Wildcats—last night at least—by coasting to a 55-38 triumph in the Marin Catholic gym before 650 fans.

It was 14-2 at the end of the first quarter, the Wildcats mustering only one bucket, missing three free throws and a half dozen shots from the floor. By halftime it was 24-14, then 42-20 at the three-quarter mark.

The Indians were getting great things from center Pat Schafer and forward Floyd Jackson, both in point production and rebounding.

QUICK DEFENSE

Tam's quick-moving defense, coupled with some missed "sure" shots by the Wildcats, left the Indians in front throughout the game. With four cagers usually hitting double figures for Marin Catholic, it went to the other extreme this time, none doing 10 or better. Paul McCarthy and Harry Matsinger led the team with eight points each.

Schafer had a terrific third quarter when Tam really pulled away, making three shots from the floor and four of five free throws. He worked his way in front of Marin Catholic defenders to get most of his points from under the basket.

Novato Is Overrun By Pirates

By ROB HARVEY

In a display of might and finesse, Drake High's cage team overpowered Novato's Hornets last night to notch its third Marin County Athletic League victory in as many tries.

The Hornets, playing before a home crowd of some 975 interested spectators, never had a chance in the decisive 66-47 defeat at the hands of the experienced, defending MCAL champs.

With Jerry Sprout, the Pirates' tough, 6-foot-6 center bolstering the league's No. 1 defense by blocking no less than half a dozen shots, Drake's ball-hawking cagers established a 20-5 bulge at the end of the first quarter and sailed to a 45-15 halftime lead.

LOOKS EASY

They made it look easy, even though head mentor Carl "Red" Brown substituted freely after 4:52 remained in the second period.

Meanwhile, when they were not throwing the ball away or kicking it around, Novato, now winless in three MCAL outings, fought back behind Harold Fain, who paced his team with 12 markers, all from the field.

Win For Redwood

Although the Redwood High varsity and class B teams suffered their first Marin Athletic League losses against San Rafael last night, the frosh and junior varsity teams kept their records unblemished with victories.

The jayvees nicked the San Rafael juniors 36-35, and the frosh ripped their San Rafael counterparts, 45-26 as Jerry Piro scored 18 pooints.

San Rafael Surprises The Giants

By GARY TISCHLER

San Rafael High's small but pesky Bulldogs harrassed Redwood into a nervous wreck in the first half, then refused to collapse under pressure and pulled out a 54-49 victory to hand the Giants their first Marin County Athletic League loss at San Rafael last night.

The Bulldogs threw a zone at the Giants in the first half, cut them off nearly at mid-court and forced Redwood's usually calm guard Andre Horn into his worst two quarters of basketball to sweep to a nine-point halftime lead at 25-16.

Horn threw the ball away five times, and missed six shots in the first half. And as Horn went, so did the Giants. Redwood, after leading 11-7 at the first period mark, fell apart as the Giants managed only five points in the second quarter while San Rafael was getting 18.

BULLDOGS RALLY

Horn, like a basketball defender of lost causes, revived in the second half and pulled the Giants from the depths of an 11-point deficit to a 45-44 lead with 4:10 left on a 25-footer from the top of the key. The Giants led for the last time on a slithering, twisting drive by Jack Fitzhenry, 48-47, with 1:51 left but the Bulldogs, like avowed teatotalers at a New Year's Party, stayed calm and swept back into the lead on a bursting drive by Mike Donahoo, two free throws by Rich Schau, a daring jumper by Roger Widmer and a pair of free throws by Donahoo after the issue was settled.

Terra Linda Wins Upset

Terra Linda High's cage team played its best game of the season last night en route to a 66-64 non-league triumph over visiting, highly touted Salesian of Richmond. Fred Smith topped all scorers with a fine 26-point performance for the winners.

The Trojans, employing a pesky press and zone defense, broke a 35-35 halftime deadlock behind Smith's marksmanship, the outstanding all-around play of center Bruce Kilby, and the clutch performance of Tom McCart, who came off the bench to bag two quickies when Terra Linda fell 6 points behind in the third stanza.

How Packers And Chiefs Match Up

By MIKE RATHET

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Here's the way the National League champion Green Bay Packers and American League champion Kansas City Chiegfs match up for Sunday's Super Bowl football game:

OFFENSE

Split End

Packers — No. 84, Carroll Dale — a 6-2, 200-pound, 7-year veteran from VPI. Probably is Green Bay's best deep receiver, a cutie in the Del Shofner mold. Caught 37 passes for 876 yards and 7 TDs.

Chiefs — No. 88, Chris Burford — A 6-3 210-pound, 7-year veteran from Stanford. A stylish receiver but dos not have exceptional speed. Caught 58 passes for 758 yards and 8 TDs.

Left Tackle

Packers — No. 76, Bob Skoronski — a 6-3, 250-pound, 9-year veteran from Indiana.'s Strong and a good blocker.

Chiefs — No. 77, Jim Tyrer — A 6-6, 292-pound, 6-year veteran from Ohio State. An exceptional blocker and an all-AFL selection.

Left Guard

Packers — No. 63, Fuzzy Thurston — A 6-1, 245-pound, 9-year veteran from Valparaiso. A solid pass protector equally proficient at pulling to lead running play.

Chiefs — No. 17, Ed Budde, — A 6-5, 260-pound, 4-year veteran from Michigan State. Outstanding on rushing plays and an all-AFL selection.

Center

Packers — No. 50, Bill Curry — A 6-2, 235-pound, 2-year veteran from Georgia Tech. Good blocker, but only in his first year as a starter.

Chiefs — No. 66, Wayne Frazier — A 6-3, 245-pound, 3-year veteran from Auburn. Also in his first full year, but has learned his trade.

Right Guard

Packers — No. 64, Jerry Kramer — A 6-3, 245-pound, 9-year veteran from Idaho. Exceptional on Green Bay's patented power sweep and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 64, Curt Merz — A 6-4, 267-pound, 7-year veteran from Iowa. Is as strong as they come, a good pass protector and an all-AFL selection.

Right Tackle

Packers — No. 75, Forrest Gregg — A 6-4, 250-pound, 10-year veteran from Southern Methodis. Potent blocker on power sweep, good pass protector and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 73, Dave Hill — A 6-5, 254-pound, 4-year veteran from Auburn. Improving rapidly. Better on pass plays than rushing play.

Tight End

Packers — No. 81, Marv Fleming — A 6-4, 235-pound, 4-year veteran from Utah. Still developing as a receiver but caught 31 passes for 361 yards and 2 TDs.

Chiefs — No. 84, Fred Arbanas — A 6-3, 240-pound 5-year veteran from Michigan State. A fine blocker who has overcome the handicap of loss of sight in one eye. Caught 22 passes for 305 yards and 4 TDs and was an all-AFL selection.

Quarterback

Packers — No. 15, Bart Starr — A 6-1, 200-pound, 11-year veteran from Alabama. Probably had his best year with 156 completions, a .622 completion percentage, 2,257 yards gained, 14 TDs and just 3 interceptions. An all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 16, Len Dawson — A 6-0 190-pound, 10-year veteran from Purdue. Also had his best year with 159 completions, a .560 percentage, 2,527 yards, 26 TDs and 10 interceptions. An all-AFL selection.

Running Back

Packers — No. 22, Elijah Pitts — A 6-1, 205-pound, 6-year veteran from Philander Smith. Replaced Paul Horning — and played like him. Gained 393 yards on ground for a 3.4 average and 7 TDs; caught 26 passes for 460 yards.

Chiefs — No. 21, Mike Garret — A rookie from Southern Califor-190-pound rookie from Southern California. Size has been no handicap because of his tremendous balance. Gained 801 yards rushing for 5.4 average and 6 TDs; caught 12 passes for 175 yards.

Fullback

Packers — No. 31, Jim Taylor — A 6-0, 215-pound, 9-year veteran from LSU. Good short yardage runner who used consistently as a receiver this year. Gained 705 yards rushing for 3.5 average and 4 TDs; caught 41 passes for 331 yards.

Chiefs — No. 32, Curt McClinton — A 6-3, 227-pound 5-year veteran from Kansas. A capable runner also used as key blocking back. Gained 540 yards rushing for 3.8 average and 4 TDs.

Packers —No. 86, Boyd Dowler — A 6-5, 225-pound, 8-year veteran from Colorado. Not overly fast, but has sure hands and is tough on sideline patterns. Caught 29 passes for 392 yards but didn't score.

Chiefs — No. 89, Otis Taylor — A 6-2, 211-pound, 2-year veteran from Prairie View. Has been described as a Lance Alworth with better size. Caught 58 passes for 1,297 yards and 8 TDs and was an all-AFL selection.

Packers —No. 87, Willie Davis — A 6-3, 245-pound, 9-year veteran from Grambling. Probably the quickest end in the league, smart, reacts well and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 75, Jerry Mays — A 6-4, 252-pound, 6-year veteran from Southern Methodist. A quick, exceptional pass rusher and an all-AFL selection.

Left Tackle

Packers — No. 77, Ron Kostelnik — A 6-4, 260-pound, 6-year veteran from Cincinnati. A strongboy who bowls people over.

Chiefs — No. 58, Andy Rice — A 6-3, 266-pound rookie from Texas Southern. Good, but still learning the trade.

Right Tackle

Packers — No. 74, Henry Jordan — A 6-3, 250-pound, 10-year veteran from Virginia. Strength is his biggest asset. Forms a solid duo with Kostelnik.

Chiefs — No. 86, Buck Buchanan — A 6-7, 287-pound, 4-year veteran from Grambling. Strong pass rusher with good mobility for his size and an all-AFL selection.

Right End

Packers — No. 82, Lionel Aldridge — A 6-4, 245-pound, 4-year veteran from Utah State. Not as quick as Davis, but strong.

Chiefs — No. 85, Chuck Hurston — A 6-6, 230-pound, 2-year veteran from Auburn. Fast, uses speed well. Still learning.

Left Linebacker

Packers — No. 89, Dave Robinson — A 6-3, 245-pound, 4-year veteran from Penn State. Very quick and strong and has long arms that make him an outstanding pass protector.

Chiefs — No. 78, Bobby Bell — A 6-4, 228-pound, 4-year veteran from Minnesota. Outstanding speed, good strength, can stop both pass and rush and was an all-AFL selection.

Middle Linebacker

Packers — No. 66, Ray Nitschke — A 6-3, 240-pound, 9-year veteran from Illinois. Strong, hard tackler who is also quick enough to go back on pass and was an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 69, Sherrill Headrick — A 6-2, 240-pound 8-year veteran from Texas Christian. Tough is the word. Could be

Right Linebacker

Packers — No. 66, Lee Roy Caffey — A 6-3, 250-pound, 4-year veteran from Texas A&M. Rangy, good tackler and pass protector and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 55, E. J. Holub — A 6-4, 236-pound, 6-year veteran from Texas Tech. Not exceptionally fast or strong, but has great desire.

Left Cornerback

Packers — No. 26, Herb Adderley — A 6-0, 210-pound, 6-year veteran from Michigan State. Quick, the gambler on defense and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 24, Fred Williamson — A 6-3, 209-pound, 7-year veteran from Northwestern. Cantankerous, quck and a big gambler.

Left Safety

Packers — No. 40, Tom Brown — A 6-1, 190-pound 3-year veteran from Maryland. Good reactions but only in his second full year and still developing.

Chiefs — No. 20, Bobby Hunt — A 6-1, 193-pound, 5-year veteran from Auburn. Good reactions and mobility and an all-AFL selection.

Right Safety

Packers — No. 24, Willie Wood — A 5-10, 190-pound, 7-year veteran from Southern California. The free safety, roams very well, covers a lot of ground. A defensive leader and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 42, Johnny Robinson — a 6-1, 205-pound, 7-year veteran from Louisiana State. Strong, clever at diagnosing plays and an all-AFL selection.

Right Cornerback

Packers — No. 21, Bob Jeter — a 6-1, 205-pound, 4-year veteran from Iowa. Quick, a gambler who will step inside quite a bit in interception bids.

Chiefs — No. 22, Willie Mitchell — a 6-1, 185-pound, 3-year veteran from Tennessee A&I. Has speed and quickness, but still is learning.

Kickers

Packers — No. 34, Don Chandler handles punts, kickoffs and place-kicking for Green Bay. Had off year with only 12 of 28 field goals made.

Chiefs — No. 44, Jerrell Wilson, handles punts; No. 17, Fletcher Smith handles kickoffs and No. 15, Mike Mercer handles field goals. Mercer made 20 of 26 attempts.

Litchfield Eyes Eighth Straight

Litchfield's of San Rafael, sitting pretty with a 7-0 record and a two-game lead, takes on its nearest competitor while shooting for its eighth straight win in the San Francisco Triple A Winter Baseball League tomorrow.

Litchfield's meets Ellis Brooks Chevrolet at 11:30 a.m. at Golden Gate Park's Graham Diamond. Litchfield's won their first meeting, 7-4.

The high-riding league leaders will bring a solid .356 batting average into the fray with Ron Gasper at .607 leading the way.

Mrs. Kett Almost Scores Real One

The gals were playing their hole-in-one contest on the 15th green Thursday at the Marin Country Club links in Novato and Mrs. L. T. Kett won, almost with a real one.

As the women gasped, Mrs. Kett's ball rolled within two inches of the cup—one and three-quarters inches to be exact. In low gross competition, Mrs. Thomas Kegwin won a playoff with Mrs. Charles Godak after each shot an 88.

Winners were:

Class A — Mesdames Charles Godak, 88-14—74; John McVey, 91-15—76; Gordon Davenport, 92-15—77.

Class B — Mmes. John Grey, 93-17—76; Don Roberts, 93-17—76; George Tripps, 97-18—79.

Class C—Mmes. C. R. Johnson 96-21—75; V. C. Redman, 97-20—

Warriors And Barry Throttled

DETROIT (AP)—Rick Barry looks tired but the National Basketball Assn.'s leading scorer must keep playing this weekend for the fatigued San Francisco Warriors.

Barry got only 15 points last night at San Jose as the Warriors lost 119-117 to the New York Knicks. Barry, who had pushed through 41 points the previous night, got only one field goal in the first quarter and one field goal in the second half.

For Barry and center Nate Thurmond, it was the fourth game in as many nights because they played last Tuesday in the NBA All-Star Game in San Francisco.

And the two workhorses who ran one-two in the voting for the all-star most valuable player will make it six contests in six nights with games tonight at Detroit and tomorrow in St. Louis.

The Knicks and Warriors traded the lead frequently before New York went ahead for good at 113-112 with 2:24 to go. The Warriors got to within 117-115 in the last minute before Howard Komives iced it for New York with a 20-foot jumper.

Dick Barnett scored 30 points for the Knicks and topped scorers and Jeff Mullins paced the Warriors with 28.

Dick Van Arsdale guarded Barry and held him to his lowest point total of the season.

TRACK AND FIELD

Prep In Spotlight At Oakland Sunday

OAKLAND (AP) — Another high school star threatens the best in the world's track and field class, this time in the long jump.

Gerry Lindgren and Jim Ryun already have enhanced the teen-aged ranks and now watch Jerry Proctor, a senior at Pasadena, Muir High School.

In practice, Proctor has been measured past the 27-foot mark and Ralph Boston, former Olympic champion and world record holder, knows it.

Boston will concentrate on the long jump and has withdrawn from the hurdles for tomorrow night's invitational indoor meet, inaugurating track at the new Oakland Coliseum.

Boston won the All-American title a week ago at San Francisco with a leap of 25-2½ and still holds the American record at 26-6¼ compared with the 27-0 world mark claimed by Russia's Igor Ter-Ovanesyan.

The Athens meet, second of the season on the West coast, includes John Rambo, the Long Beach high jumper who equalled the American record a week ago at 7 feet 3 inches. Neal Steinhauer of Oregon, new claimant to the indoor shot put record at 66-6¾, won't compete in this Sunday meet.

Seven high jumpers who have cleared seven feet and six pole vaulters who have topped 16 feet are on the entry list as the Oakland meet commands depth in each event.

The new Fastrac process has been used on the wooden track which could aid times and distances.

World indoor record holder Art Walker of Los Angeles established his triple jump mark on this synthetic track last year in Albuquerque.

He aims to better his 54-9½, a limit imposed partially because at the AAU meet in New Mexico, a longer leap could have put him on the running track.

Preliminaries in the pole vault open the program at 6:30 with running events starting a half hour later. The long jump starts at 6:40 with Boston, the 1960 Olympic champion facing the challenge of the prep Proctor.

Sprinter Charley Greene heads the field for the 60 with a challenge from Darel Newman, the former Fresno State star. The mile run could also produce a talent now coming into its own.

Joe Lynch, former Georgetown University runner, has been working out at Santa Monica in Southern California under the coaching of Hungarian Mikhail Igloi who thinks he can do a 3:56.

So far, the best for Lynch has been 4:06 but Igloi's judgment is based on the training of such a star as Jim Beatty, formerly the premier American miler.

Brookline Quint Wins San Rafael Recreation Game

Brookline Electric picked up where it left off in the first half of the season and the Christmas tournament by rapping Mill Valley Boys Club, 76-66, in an A Division game of the San Rafael Recreation Department Adult Basketball League Thursday night.

Ron O'Connell led a trio of double figure scorers for the winners with 20 points. Ken Anderson had 14 and Steve Bryant had 12.

Brad Busch topped Mill Valley with 23 points, followed by Steve Anderson with 21 and Jim Tupper with 12.

In another A Division game, Paradise Pharmacy downed San Rafael Teachers, 64-53, despite a 31-point out put by San Rafael High basketball coach Mike Diaz. The winners were topped by Jeff Chapman's 24 points and Jim Wiley's 16.

In a pair of B Division games, McGraw Hill routed Native Sons, 62-38, and Stop N Go Market nicked Marin's Marines, 63-54. Terry Thomas had 17 for McGraw Hill. Don Hanson with 18, Joe Hebel with 13 and Bob Brackett with 12 led Stop N Go while Jim Blomguisi was high for the Marines with 15 points.

Famed Globetrotters At Richmond Arena Monday

For the first time in their 41-year history, the Harlem Globetrotters have a new coach.

Inman Jackson, who is no newcomer to the Trotter ranks, will mastermind the famous magicians' comical capers and legitimate play when they play the New York Nationals at Richmond Auditorium next Monday and at the Cow Palace in San Francisco Jan. 20.He took over the head coaching reins when founder and owner-coach Abe Saperstein died of a heart attack last year.

Saperstein often credited "Big Jack" as the person responsible for the clever ball handling which gained the Trotters fame in all of the 104 countries where they have performed. He joined the remarkable show team as a player when it was first organized by Saperstein in 1927.

When his playing days were over in the 40s, he stayed with the Trotters as an assistant coach to impart his trick ball handling knowledge to youngsters such as the hilarious Meadowlark Lemon, the current Clown Prince of the Court. One of his prize proteges is Fred Neal, current sensational dribbler with the Trotters who always stops the show with his ball-bouncing routine.

A Tie In San Diego Golf Open

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Bob Goalby and Randy Glover, shooting 10-under-par golf for 36 holes, topped a trimmed down field of 79 players going into the third and next-to-last round of the $66,000 San Diego Open today.

The 35-year-old Goalby, a native of Belleville, Iii., who now plays out Palm Springs, finished with a late rush in yesterday's second round to shoot a seven-under-par 64 on the Stardust Country Club. Par is 35-36—71.

With his opening round 68, this gave him a 36-hole total of 132 and put him into a tie with Glover who had rounds of 68-64.

Three strokes back at the halfway mark were 48-year-old Tommy Bolt, Sarasota, Fla., and newcomer Chris Blocker, Jal, N.M. Bolt had rounds of 67-68 and Blocker 68-67 for 135.

Still in contention for top prize of $13,200 with 136 totals were Art Wall, Honesdale, Pa., 71-65; Bobby Nichols, the 1964 national PGA champion from Louisville, Ky., 66-70; and Ronnie Reif, San Bernardino club pro 68-68.

Dick Lotz, Hayward and Dave Hill, Evergreen, Colo., marked the halfway point with scores of 137. Lotz had 72-65 and Hill 69-68.

Among casualties who failed to make the cut because they had scores of more than 148 were such prominent golf names as: George Knudson, Toronto, Canada, 73-72—145; E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, St. Louis, Mo., 70-75—145; Mike Souchak, Birmingham, Mich., 77-69—146; Johnny Pott, Golf Hills, Miss., 73-73—146; George Bayer, Incline Village, Nev., 73-73—146, and Phil Rogers, La Jolla, 70-74—144.

Defending champion Billy Casper, golf's biggest official money-winner in 1966 with $121,644, made the cut with a score of 71-70—141, nine strokes back of the leaders.

Seals Romp To Fifth Straight Win

SAN DIEGO (AP)—The California Seals look forward this weekend to cementing their hold on second place in the Western Hockey League. They'll play two games, the first tonight against the last-place San Diego Gulls.

The Seals swamped the Gulls 7-0 last night in Oakland for their fifth straight victory and moved into a second-place tie with Vancouver. They're still 15 points behind first-place Portland, however.

Back-up goalie Jean Guy Morissette scored his first shutout of the season by kicking out 33 Gull attempts.

Danny Belisle and George Swarbrick each had a two-goal night. Also scoring for the Seals were Bob Kabel, Doug Senior and Wayne Maxner.

It was the fourth time the Seals had beaten the Gulls in as many games.

Sizzling Tars Fell Redwoods

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

EUREKA — College of Marin raced off to a 15-0 lead against big, lumbering College of the Redwoods last night, then waltzed to an 81-58 Golden Valley Conference victory behind a devastating full-court press and another salvo of red-hot shooting by its trio of guards.

The Tars threw up a thieving full-court press that left Redwood without a point for the first five minutes of play. By the time the big boys from Eureka got on the board, it was already over.

The Tars led by 18 at halftime, 42-24.

Russ Smith paced the Tar victory with his second straight sizzling shooting performance. The former Redwood High School ace ripped in 10 of 17 shots and added two free throws for 22 points. He got big help from dependable Bill Pandiani with 17 points, Terry Overlid with 12 and Tom Stetson with 10. Everybody but Tar coach Cal Riemcke played for the Mariners.

The Tars held a 32-29 rebound edge over the taller opposition with 5-9 Pandiani getting nine and 5-8 Bob Phillips eight.

Six-four Mike Lovelace of Redwoods topped all scorers with 27 points, nearly half the home team total, but he was the only Redwoods player in double figures.

The victory brought the Tars to the .500 level for the season at 9-9 and gave them a 3-1 Golden Valley Conference mark. They meet Redwoods again tonight at 8:00 here.

CLOSE-OUT • OVERSTOCK
Now is really the time to buy. We're overstocked due to closing our San Rafael store. Christmas merchandise orders were jammed into one store or warehoused. Now—all are out and on sale. We must drastically reduce our stock during month of January. If you prefer RCA (and who doesn't) now is the time to buy from Rainbow TV

KTV RCA VICTOR
$679.95

RCA Victor, the company that pioneered Color Television, now brings you Color so real you'll think you are there. And RCA Victor Color TV is housed in decorator cabinetry that will do wonders for your decor.

The rectangular 25" RCA Hi-Lite Tube features new Perma-Chrome for locked-in color fidelity. Powerful 25,000-volt chassis brings in hard-to-get channels like magic. Many other deluxe features including RCA Automatic Color Purifier to "cancel" external magnetism and one-set VHF fine tuning that automatically "remembers" to give the best picture.

Come in for a demonstration soon—discover how beautiful Color TV can be!

25"* COLOR TV
$679.95

RCA Victor, the company that pioneered Color Television, now brings you Color so real you'll think you are there. And RCA Victor Color TV is housed in decorator cabinetry that will do wonders for your decor.

The rectangular 25" RCA Hi-Lite Tube features new Perma-Chrome for locked-in color fidelity. Powerful 25,000-volt chassis brings in hard-to-get channels like magic. Many other deluxe features including RCA Automatic Color Purifier to "cancel" external magnetism and one-set VHF fine tuning that automatically "remembers" to give the best picture.

Come in for a demonstration soon—discover how beautiful Color TV can be!

The Movie Houses Borrow From TV

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Much has been written about how the movie companies supply movies to television. Less publicized is the fact that television is also providing features for theaters.

This is nothing new.

The film companies tried to cash in on the immense success of stars and programs in the new medium. Only one was a success. "Dragnet" was expanded to feature length and it grossed five million dollars, a whopping figure in 1954.

OTHER EFFORTS failed.

Warner Bros. starred Milton Berle, then Mr. Television, in "Always Leave Them Laughing," but he didn't. Features were made of "Our Miss Brooks," "The Lone Ranger," "The Goldbergs," etc., all with scant success.

Lucille Ball and Dezi Arnaz scored in "The Long, Long Trailer" at the peak of their television fame, though they did not play their "I Love Lucy" roles. Another film with the pair, "Forever Darling," was a failure.

NOW THE studios are taking another flier at mining film subjects from television.

The most successful venture has been MGM's conversion of segments of "The Man From UNCLE" into big-screen attractions. The popularity of stars Robert Vaughn and David McCallum has helped push the features to greater income than some of the studio's regular movies.

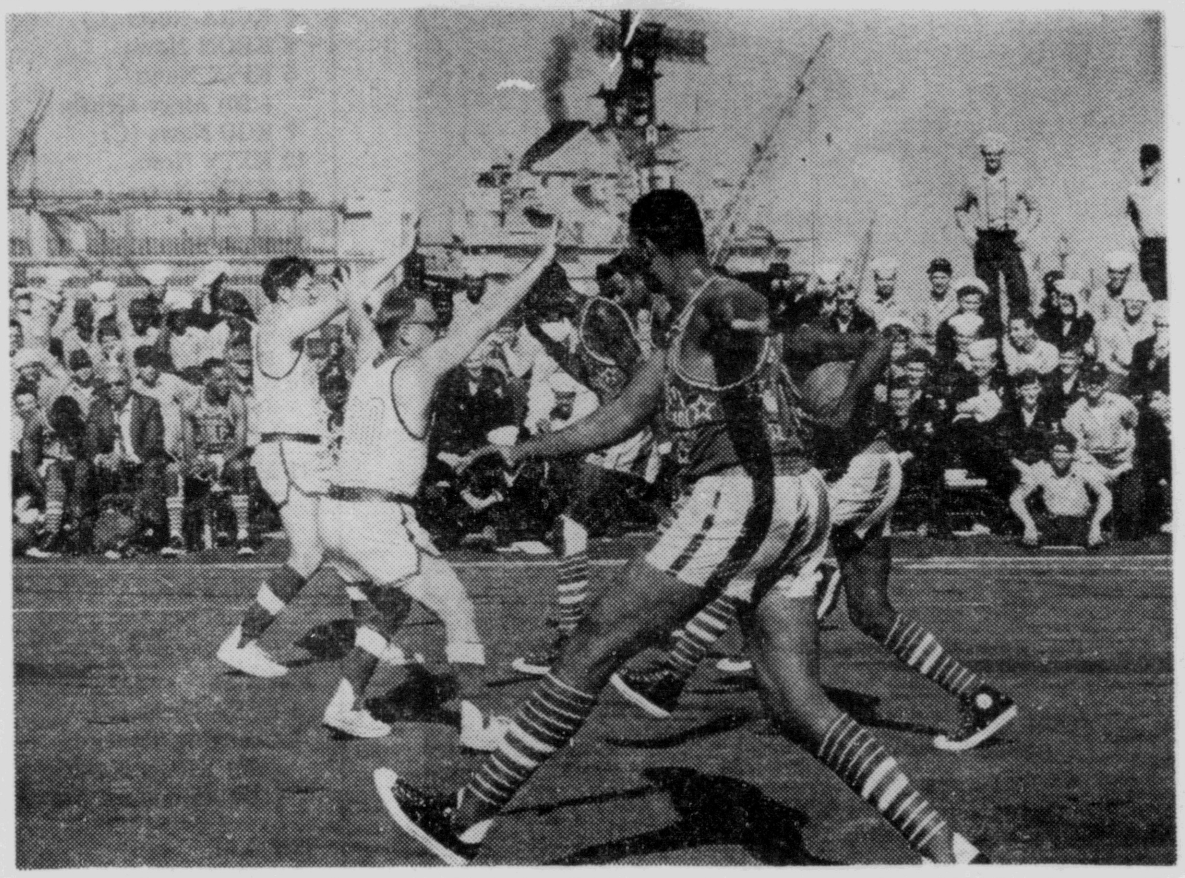
20th Century-Fox followed suit with a release of the first three segments of the defunct television series, "Blue Light," which starred Robert Goulet. They were released under the title, "I Deal in Danger."

Fox also attempted a feature-length version of the freak hit, "Batman," but it failed to create bat-millions at the box-office.

NOR DID Universal score impressively with its feature, "Munsters Go Home," filmed after the series had been canceled.

Columbia aimed its cartoon feature, "The Man Called Flintstone," at the kiddie market with middling results.

With rare exceptions, these movies seldom score a bonanza at the nation's theaters. But they help fill the bottom half of double features. Theater men find feature products so scarce nowadays, they'll consider anything—even if it has played on television.



THE HARLEM GLOBETROTTERS engage the New York Nationals aboard the aircraft carrier USS Enterprise, to the delight of 5,000 servicemen, when the "CBS Sports Spectacular" returns for its eighth season beginning Sunday at 11 a.m. on Channels 5 and 10.

An American Artist In Europe

Bruce Lauritzen's Short Stay Stretched Into Six Years

By DON KEOWN

Artist Bruce Lauritzen went to Europe, intending to stay only six months.

It was to be six years, however, before Lauritzen was to return to America and Marin County four months ago.

His European stay, Lauritzen, now a Larkspur resident, says, was invaluable. "I would advise every young American artist to make such a trip," he says. "He shouldn't go there to make a lucrative living, but rather to learn. We all learn by exposing ourselves to different environments.

"THEN, TOO, in Europe, he will encounter the very finest in art schools and instructors, as well as the opportunity to mingle in art circles."

Lauritzen, born in San Francisco in 1934, demonstrated an early talent for art. At 10 he was admitted to adult drawing and painting classes at the College of Marin. He earned a scholarship to the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, where he received his Bachelor of Arts Degree in 1954.

He then went to work as an art director and designer for television in San Francisco.

HE STUDIED life drawing and painting at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco. In 1958, he became an instructor of design at the Academy of Arts in San Francisco.

In the meantime he was doing extensive work in portraiture, stage design, photography, experimental painting and writing.

He went to Europe at the start of 1961 for what he thought would be a relatively short tour for sketching, painting and photography.

HIS FIRST year was spent in London where he was employed as creative director for an advertising agency.

"London was becoming a very active art center then, and is even more so now," he says. "It is one of the world's great art centers. New York is THE world art center, Los Angeles the art buying center and Paris the leader for international work. But London is a close second to Paris for cultural activities. It caters to a young group."

From London, Lauritzen went to Milan, Italy, to manage the art department of an advertising agency there.

MILAN WAS to remain his headquarters for nearly five years, although he traveled extensively in Western Europe and North Africa, always sketching and painting.

Eventually, he resigned his position with the advertising agency to work full time as an editorial illustrator, fashion designer and painter on a free lance basis.

His first one-man show was held in Milan at the Pater Gallery in February of 1965. His second took place in Rome at the Qantas Australian Center in December of the same year.

MILAN BOASTS the advantage of proximity to both Rome and Florence, Lauritzen points out.

But the city itself is an important art center, "more serious, in some respects, than either Rome or Florence."

What is there about Europe that lures the young American artists?

"It is an intangible thing," Lauritzen replies. "There just seems to be more color in Europe. And everyone is so art conscious.

"THERE ARE more aesthetics in your surroundings. You become aware that there is art existing all around you. It opens your eyes. You tend to study things and people more, and to try to understand them. And the architecture . . ."

The elevator man, the ditch digger, the taxi-cab driver can all carry on intelligent, even learned, conversations about art, Lauritzen notes.

"In art knowledge, we are far behind them," he says.

LAURITZEN SAYS that he made a special effort to "travel" in Italian art circles. "I learned to speak Italian pretty fluently, and developed Italian friends. And I believe I learned to understand their mentality. For people are not the same everywhere."

In Italy, Lauritzen also acquired a wife. He was married in St. Moritz, Switzerland, to Anita June Sutherlin, an American girl he had known in this country and who was also traveling in Europe.

His wife, the artist says, "has been a great help and inspiration to me."

BUT SUPPORTING himself as he was with his art work and various jobs, Lauritzen did not find life in Europe always easy.

"While I was in Milan, the area was experiencing an economic recession," he relates. "Buying power for art had gone way down.

"I would say that, generally, there is a more limited market in Europe than in the United States for art. Americans just have more money. There is a strong middle class moving up between the very rich and the very poor that should ultimately provide a good buying class for art works. But now the many museums and galleries serve the masses as an outlet."

THE FINANCIAL difficulties of American artists in Europe were increased by the United States government decision to curtail spending abroad to halt the outward flow of dollars.

"They started with the arts," he says, "so that there was very little money available in grants and support for American artists painting or studying abroad."

It is therefore, a source of special satisfaction for Lauritzen that he managed to support himself and his wife in Milan, despite adverse conditions.

WHY, THEN, did he decide to return to the United States?

"In the first place, my family is here," he answers. His mother, Mrs. Nan Lauritzen, is a San Rafael resident.

"Then, too," he continues, "I felt a need to mingle with my own 'mentality', my own people, again.

"There was also the desire for a place where I felt I would have a better opportunity of working and deriving an income from my art. Here, I find I can live off my painting endeavors.

"FINALLY, THERE is this marvelous climate. You miss it, after you have been gone so long."

Pomeroy Galleries of San Francisco is showing his work.

Lauritzen says, however, that he hopes to return to Europe from time to time.

As for any long stays abroad in the future, that remains to be seen.

"FIRST I WANT to feel out the situation here," he says.

Of his work, he says: "My source of subject matter can be anything, anywhere, or simply a glimmer of a thought pattern reflecting a moment in time.

"Invariably, however, the interpretation or construction of forms comes from within to reflect my impression of the 'character or atmosphere' of the subject, rather than the involvement of its physical content.

"IN CERTAIN instances, the subject is virtually eliminated, giving way to a simpler and purer poetic statement—less confused by subjective content."

He adds that three elements go into his paintings—mind, matter and spirit—and says that "color, although essential, is secondary to the structure of my paintings."

And he concludes: "I don't pretend to think that I am revolutionizing the art world. I only wish to continue exploring myself and my surroundings, and to improve along the way."

COVER PHOTO

IN HIS Larkspur studio, artist Bruce Lauritzen works on a canvas. He returned four months ago from Europe where he spent six years traveling, sketching and painting. It was, he says, an experience that no young American artist should miss. (Independent-Journal photo by Dave Mayhew)

VISITORS TO THE Pater Gallery in Milan, Italy, view with interest the work of Bruce Lauritzen as exhibited at the American artist's first one-man show. Europeans, says Lauritzen, are highly knowledgeable on the subject of contemporary art. And Milan, where Laurritzen lived for five years, is a serious art center.

STRUCTURE, not color, is the primary interest of Bruce Lauritzen in his painting. That emphasis is apparent in these paintings, "Laughing Woman" at top, "Solitaire" center, and "Woman Washing" at bottom, all done in Europe.

NURSING STUDENT and March of Dimes scholarship holder Nancy Cox has already had considerable practical experience working in hospitals and with the handicapped. At left, as an observer and assistant in therapy at the Ross General Hospital's psychiatric department for three months, she visited with a patient. In background are Dr. William Dickersen, head of psychiatric services, and Carolyn Kinney, charge nurse. At right, as a nurses' aide at Marin General Hospital, she assists an ambulatory patient. (Independent-Journal photos)

Nancy Cox Prepares For Nursing Career

March Of Dimes Scholarships Help An Honor Student From Marin

Marinites generally are well aware of the good uses to which the more than $30,000 that will be raised in their county this month by the March of Dimes campaign will be put. They know that most of the money raised to fight birth defects will be spent for research and in direct help to babies and children handicapped by birth defects.

THEY ARE familiar with such examples as the recent grant from the Marin Chapter of the National Foundation to the Marindale School for the purchase of electric typewriters and attachments that will enable physically-handicapped youngsters to master typing skills.

They or members of their families may have been among the newlyweds and young parents who have received some of the thousands of educational folders and booklets made possible by the March of Dimes.

But there is yet another kind of expenditure that has been less publicized: The awarding of March of Dimes grant scholarships in medicine to both graduate and undergraduate students and to qualified nursing students.

A CASE IN point is Nancy Kathleen Cox, daughter of Mrs. Betty Cox of 965 Magnolia Avenue, Larkspur, and a former honor student at Dominican Upper School.

Nancy received two Health Careers Award scholarships from March of Dimes to enable her to pursue her goal of a career in nursing.

Now a junior at San Francisco State, Nancy decided midway through high school to make a career of nursing.

Her objective has not yet been achieved. But already she has had a wealth of experience in hospitals and work with the sick.

IT BEGAN with two years of volunteer work as a "candy striper" at St. Francis Hospital in San Francisco.

In her junior year at Dominican (now San Domenico), Nancy devoted one day a week to helping handicapped children at Marindale School. Despite her devotion to that work, she still graduated from Dominican with honors.

During her freshman and sophomore years at San Francisco State, Nancy worked part-time at the campus audio visual center making teaching aids and nursing charts. It was paid work closely associated with her artwork hobby.

LAST FALL, along with half a dozen other college students, Nancy served for three months

The Movie Houses Borrow From TV

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Much has been written about how the movie companies supply movies to television. Less publicized is the fact that television is also providing features for theaters.

This is nothing new.

The film companies tried to cash in on the immense success of stars and programs in the new medium. Only one was a success. "Dragnet" was expanded to feature length and it grossed five million dollars, a whopping figure in 1954.

OTHER EFFORTS failed.

Warner Bros. starred Milton Berle, then Mr. Television, in "Always Leave Them Laughing," but he didn't. Features were made of "Our Miss Brooks," "The Lone Ranger," "The Goldbergs," etc., all with scant success.

Lucille Ball and Dezi Arnaz scored in "The Long, Long Trailer" at the peak of their television fame, though they did not play their "I Love Lucy" roles. Another film with the pair, "Forever Darling," was a failure.

NOW THE studios are taking another flier at mining film subjects from television.

The most successful venture has been MGM's conversion of segments of "The Man From UNCLE" into big-screen attractions. The popularity of stars Robert Vaughn and David McCallum has helped push the features to greater income than some of the studio's regular movies.

20th Century-Fox followed suit with a release of the first three segments of the defunct television series, "Blue Light," which starred Robert Goulet. They were released under the title, "I Deal in Danger."

Fox also attempted a feature-length version of the freak hit, "Batman," but it failed to create bat-millions at the box-office.

NOR DID Universal score impressively with its feature, "Munsters Go Home," filmed after the series had been canceled.

Columbia aimed its cartoon feature, "The Man Called Flintstone," at the kiddie market with middling results.

With rare exceptions, these movies seldom score a bonanza at the nation's theaters. But they help fill the bottom half of double features. Theater men find feature products so scarce nowadays, they'll consider anything—even if it has played on television.

Recruit For War On Birth Defects

Nancy Gets Ready To Do Her Part

at Ross General Hospital, which acts as an extended campus for both San Francisco State College and the University of California.

There, for three days of each week, Nancy and her fellow students observed procedures in Ross General's model psychiatric department and participated in certain phases of the therapy.

Last summer, and even during her Christmas vacation last month, found Nancy back in hospital work, serving full-time at Marin General Hospital as a nurses' aide.

AS PART OF her present study course at San Francisco State, she is doing medical-surgical laboratory work at Presbyterian Medical Center, San Francisco, and maintaining a 3.5 or better grade average.

Behind it all, says Nancy, is the fact that "I have always liked people, and I have always been fascinated by medicine."

Nancy Cox's interest in the particular field of birth defects was heightened last year when Dr. Virginia Apgar, world-famed pediatrician and medical research director for the National Foundation March of Dimes, visited San Rafael to speak at the annual March of Dimes dinner.

THE YOUNG coed and aspiring nurse had an opportunity to meet and talk with Dr. Apgar, and calls it "an inspiring experience."

March of Dimes officials in Marin cite Nancy Cox as typical of the young people being encouraged and trained to participate directly in the fight against birth defects, a crippling disease that annually affects 250,000 newborn babies each year.

Several hundred volunteer workers in Marin are currently soliciting the financial support of Marinites for March of Dimes.

One result of a successful outcome of their efforts will be the recruitment of more dedicated young people like Nancy Cox to the cause of ridding America of one of its most terrible health menaces.

NANCY COX walks on the San Francisco State College campus with fellow students Larry Kruezyonski of South San Francisco and Jacquie Harvey, right, of Piedmont, enroute to a class. Nancy, an honor student at Dominican Upper School, is now in her junior year at San Francisco State College, and with the help of two March of Dimes scholarships, is well on her way to a career in nursing.

Novato's Community House Still Serves As Gathering Place

Renovation Readies Building For Its Part In A Civic Celebration

By THERON NEWELL

The three-day observance of the seventh anniversary of Novato's incorporation next Friday, Saturday and Sunday was the direct result of the renovation of the Community House.

Spurred by Mrs. Bea Carpenter, volunteer labor completely changed the interior of the old building to a mid-Victorian period decor.

The momentum of all of this work carried on until the group wanted to do something to show off the Community House and seized on the seventh birthday of the City of Novato as cause for a celebration.

THIS OLD structure is unique among community buildings in Marin County. For years it was the central gathering place of the residents of the area.

The Community House is the outgrowth of a program of the Presbyterian Church and the citizens of Novato.

Dr. Warren Wilson, head of the Board of National Missions, pushed a program to constuct community buildings to be used for church functions and also as a general meeting place in small communities.

THE PRESBYTERIAN Church was the only Protestant church in Novato at the time and it was up to its pastor to carry out this program. That man was Rev. Charles Christensen. At that time, the church was located directly east of the site proposed for the Community House. He worked on the idea, soliciting funds and talking up the project.

Alton Lerch, Novato historian and past president of the Marin County Historical Society, has recorded the events of that time from the files of the San Rafael Independent, Marin Journal and Novato Advance.

By July 15, 1922, $12,056 had been pledged and the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church contributed another $9,000 toward the building.

ON SEPT. 16 of that year, the Benicia Presbytery pledged an additional $750 toward the building.

Walter H. Parker was the architect chosen for the job. However, the original bid on the construction of the building was $30,000. This necessitated a revision of the plans so that the cost could be reduced to $19,000.

The contract was awarded to Charles F. Schuetz of San Francisco on Nov. 18, 1922. Then on Dec. 7, seven lots were obtained by the church, providing an area 140 by 175 feet for the building.

BY JAN. 6, 1923, the foundation was laid and the framing began. On the same date a $375 gift was received from a Mr. Brooks in Washington in memory of his mother who died in California.

By April the building was taking shape and the Red Cross proposed monthly baby clinics in the building. On May 5, the contract for painting it was awarded to A. Quandt and Sons of San Francisco.

With the building nearing completion, an organization was formed to run the Community House with Reverend Christensen as its first president. Other officers were William E. Cole, vice president; C. E. Carlile, secretary, and Mrs. J. A. Stutt, treasurer.

THE DIRECTORS were Robert Trumbull, later county supervisor and Golden Gate bridge director; his sister, Mrs. R. S. Brown; Miss Lulu Sutton, a teacher in Novato for 40 years; George D. Morrison, local banker and director of the North Marin County Water District; John P. Geary, and Mrs. George Owens.

The building was dedicated on April 11, 1923, but the official opening was not held until Aug. 28. In the meantime, A. J. Cain, owner of the Novato Utilities Co., started showing movies there on July 7.

Among the first films shown were "The Man from Hell's River," starring the original Rin Tin Tin; "Daddy" with Jackie Coogan; "The Young Diana" with Marion Davies.

ON AUG. 18, 1923, the notice of completion was recorded for the Community House. A crowd estimated at 700 attended the grand opening program on Aug. 28.

The building served as a center for community life with the first little theater group formed in 1923 with 80 members. The first benefit for the Community House was held May 31, 1924.

Other groups including the garden and book clubs and others were added to the original little theater company.

IN 1924 THE men of the community decided that the building needed better access, so 14 of them constructed De Long Avenue from Machin Avenue to

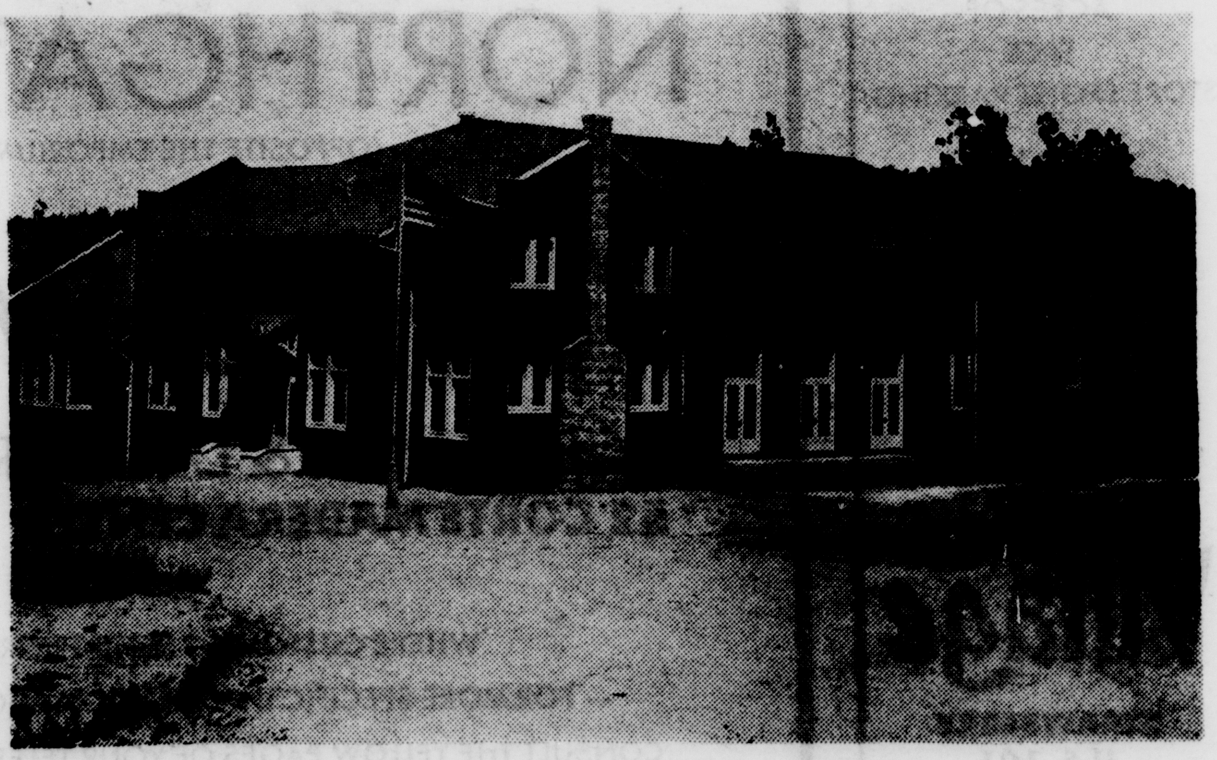
THE COMMUNITY HOUSE has served Novato well as a gathering place and as a scene for civic, cultural and social activities, since it was completed in 1923. Next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, newly renovated, it will be the focal point of a celebration in observance of the seventh anniversary of Novato's incorporation. (Independent-Journal photo)

IT WAS A labor of love for Bea Carpenter as she directed and worked on renovation of the Novato Community House. At the last minute she was still making and hanging the drapes in the council chambers.



THIS PHOTOGRAPH belonging to Alton Lerch shows how the Novato Community House looked in its early days, complete with parked Model T Ford. There were no sidewalks in front of the building in those days, and De Long Avenue had been newly constructed from Machin to Highway 101.

An American Artist In Europe

Bruce Lauritzen's Short Stay Stretched Into Six Years

By DON KEOWN

Artist Bruce Lauritzen went to Europe, intending to stay only six months.

It was to be six years, however, before Lauritzen was to return to America and Marin County four months ago.

His European stay, Lauritzen, now a Larkspur resident, says, was invaluable. "I would advise every young American artist to make such a trip," he says. "He shouldn't go there to make a lucrative living, but rather to learn. We all learn by exposing ourselves to different environments.

"THEN, TOO, in Europe, he will encounter the very finest in art schools and instructors, as well as the opportunity to mingle in art circles."

Lauritzen, born in San Francisco in 1934, demonstrated an early talent for art. At 10 he was admitted to adult drawing and painting classes at the College of Marin. He earned a scholarship to the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, where he received his Bachelor of Arts Degree in 1954.

He then went to work as an art director and designer for television in San Francisco.

HE STUDIED life drawing and painting at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco. In 1958, he became an instructor of design at the Academy of Arts in San Francisco.

In the meantime he was doing extensive work in portraiture, stage design, photography, experimental painting and writing.

He went to Europe at the start of 1961 for what he thought would be a relatively short tour for sketching, painting and photography.

HIS FIRST year was spent in London where he was employed as creative director for an advertising agency.

"London was becoming a very active art center then, and is even more so now," he says. "It is one of the world's great art centers. New York is THE world art center, Los Angeles the art buying center and Paris the leader for international work. But London is a close second to Paris for cultural activities. It caters to a young group."

From London, Lauritzen went to Milan, Italy, to manage the art department of an advertising agency there.

MILAN WAS to remain his headquarters for nearly five years, although he traveled extensively in Western Europe and North Africa, always sketching and painting.

Eventually, he resigned his position with the advertising agency to work full time as an editorial illustrator, fashion designer and painter on a free lance basis.

His first one-man show was held in Milan at the Pater Gallery in February of 1965. His second took place in Rome at the Qantas Australian Center in December of the same year.

MILAN BOASTS the advantage of proximity to both Rome and Florence, Lauritzen points out.

But the city itself is an important art center, "more serious, in some respects, than either Rome or Florence."

What is there about Europe that lures the young American artists?

"It is an intangible thing," Lauritzen replies. "There just seems to be more color in Europe. And everyone is so art conscious.

"THERE ARE more aesthetics in your surroundings. You become aware that there is art existing all around you. It opens your eyes. You tend to study things and people more, and to try to understand them. And the architecture . . ."

The elevator man, the ditch digger, the taxi-cab driver can all carry on intelligent, even learned, conversations about art, Lauritzen notes.

"In art knowledge, we are far behind them," he says.

LAURITZEN SAYS that he made a special effort to "travel" in Italian art circles. "I learned to speak Italian pretty fluently, and developed Italian friends. And I believe I learned to understand their mentality. For people are not the same everywhere."

In Italy, Lauritzen also acquired a wife. He was married in St. Moritz, Switzerland, to Anita June Sutherlin, an American girl he had known in this country and who was also traveling in Europe.

His wife, the artist says, "has been a great help and inspiration to me."

BUT SUPPORTING himself as he was with his art work and various jobs, Lauritzen did not find life in Europe always easy.

"While I was in Milan, the area was experiencing an economic recession," he relates. "Buying power for art had gone way down.

"I would say that, generally, there is a more limited market in Europe than in the United States for art. Americans just have more money. There is a strong middle class moving up between the very rich and the very poor that should ultimately provide a good buying class for art works. But now the many museums and galleries serve the masses as an outlet."

THE FINANCIAL difficulties of American artists in Europe were increased by the United States government decision to curtail spending abroad to halt the outward flow of dollars.

"They started with the arts," he says, "so that there was very little money available in grants and support for American artists painting or studying abroad."

It is therefore, a source of special satisfaction for Lauritzen that he managed to support himself and his wife in Milan, despite adverse conditions.

WHY, THEN, did he decide to return to the United States?

"In the first place, my family is here," he answers. His mother, Mrs. Nan Lauritzen, is a San Rafael resident.

"Then, too," he continues, "I felt a need to mingle with my own 'mentality', my own people, again.

"There was also the desire for a place where I felt I would have a better opportunity of working and deriving an income from my art. Here, I find I can live off my painting endeavors.

"FINALLY, THERE is this marvelous climate. You miss it, after you have been gone so long."

Pomeroy Galleries of San Francisco is showing his work.

Lauritzen says, however, that he hopes to return to Europe from time to time.

As for any long stays abroad in the future, that remains to be seen.

"FIRST I WANT to feel out the situation here," he says.

Of his work, he says: "My source of subject matter can be anything, anywhere, or simply a glimmer of a thought pattern reflecting a moment in time.

"Invariably, however, the interpretation or construction of forms comes from within to reflect my impression of the 'character or atmosphere' of the subject, rather than the involvement of its physical content.

"IN CERTAIN instances, the subject is virtually eliminated, giving way to a simpler and purer poetic statement—less confused by subjective content."

He adds that three elements go into his paintings—mind, matter and spirit—and says that "color, although essential, is secondary to the structure of my paintings."

And he concludes: "I don't pretend to think that I am revolutionizing the art world. I only wish to continue exploring myself and my surroundings, and to improve along the way."

IN HIS Larkspur studio, artist Bruce Lauritzen works on a canvas. He returned four months ago from Europe where he spent six years traveling, sketching and painting. It was, he says, an experience that no young American artist should miss. (Independent-Journal photo by Dave Mayhew)

VISITORS TO THE Pater Gallery in Milan, Italy, view with interest the work of Bruce Lauritzen as exhibited at the American artist's first one-man show. Europeans, says Lauritzen, are highly knowledgeable on the subject of contemporary art. And Milan, where Laurritzen lived for five years, is a serious art center.

WITH THE NOVATO Community House officially completed the first part of August, 1923, the dedication was held on Aug. 28 with more than 700 attending. Note the balcony with its projection booth in the rear. This was later torn out and an apartment for a caretaker constructed there.

Story Of The Community House

the state highway, now U. S. Highway 101.

Novato Community Inc. was formed in 1947 to take over the control of the building, with a provision that if the city were to incorporate the building would be turned over to the city.

That same year, the balcony was torn out and an apartment for a caretaker was constructed upstairs.

AFTER THE city was incorporated in 1960, Alfred Bowman initiated a taxpayer's suit to have the building turned over to the new city government. The city council joined Bowman and, in a court trial, Superior Court Judge Richard M. Sims Jr. awarded the building to the city which has controlled it since.

The Garden Club, Book Club and Bridge Club sections of the Community Club withdrew, leaving the Fling Section to assume the duties of the community club, which it has done.

With the City of Novato in charge of the Community House, it held its city council meetings there. Soon it acquired the Presbyterian Church properties which were adjacent and turned them into the present city hall complex.

WITH THE addition of the George Morrison house to the police station, the Community House stood out apart, unpainted and badly in need of repair.

Then the city council voted $10,000 for the renovation.

Edward W. Adams, parks and recreation director, supervised the roof repairs and repairs to the structure of the building. The volunteers followed the plans of Mrs. Carpenter and renovated the interior.

NOW THE community house, in the words of many old timers, looks better than it ever has before.

Visitors will be able to judge for themselves at next weekend's big celebration.

THROUGHOUT THE years, the Novato Community House has been the center of community activity in Novato. The first group to form after its completion was the little theater group. Down through the years it furnished entertainment to the community as shown in this 1930 picture of the group performance of a mock wedding. (Photos courtesy of Alton Lerch)

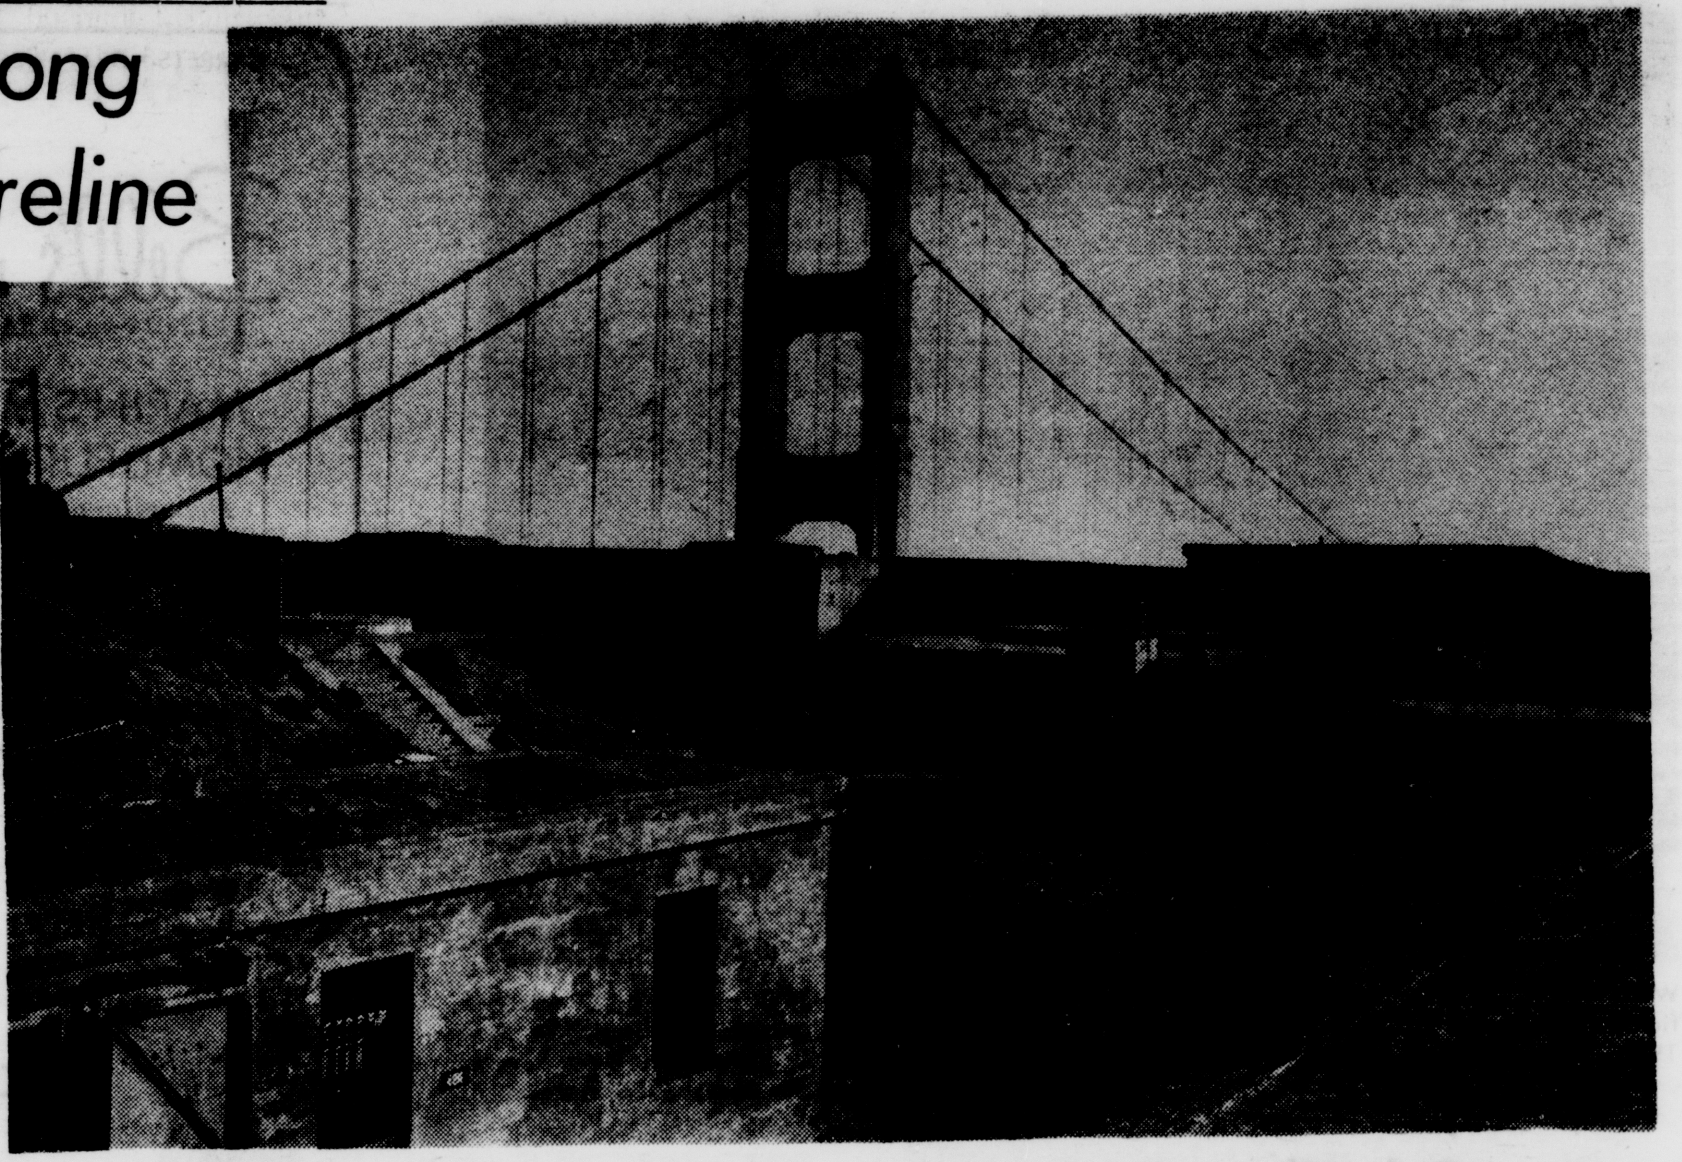
The Forts Along Marin's Shoreline

Their History Has Been A Colorful One

By GEORGE VANDEGRIFT



HISTORIC BATTERY SPENCER on Marin's shoreline is shown as it looks today, with the Golden Gate Bridge looming to the south. The original battery was completed in 1897, but additional breastworks were added after the turn of the century. (U.S. Army photos)

In 1850, by executive order of President Millard Fillmore, a 1,300-acre strip of land stretching from Cavallo Point to Tennessee Cove on the Marin County side of the Golden Gate was established as Lime Point Military Reservation.

Three Army posts occupy this tract today—Forts Baker, Barry and Cronkhite.

Here, trim, modern structures stand side by side with crumbling remnants of the past to tell the story of a century of change in defensive armament from smooth-bore cannon to supersonic guided missiles.

FROM POST Civil War days until after World War II more than 20 batteries have been quartered on Marin's Lime Point reservation.

Armed with cannon ranging in calibre from a puny three inches to a massive 16, they have constituted an iron link in a defensive chain reaching from Point Reyes to south of Half Moon Bay. Their mission: To protect the Golden Gate from attack by sea.

At the turn of the century when seacoast ordnance was still far from its peak potential, a writer in the Monthly Overland said San Francisco's Golden Gate was "the most scientifically and completely protected harbor on the Atlantic or Pacific seaboard."

AS AN EXAMPLE of the defenses of that day, a battery of 12-inch barbette mounted cannon was emplaced on Lime Point Ridge near where the northern tower of the Golden Gate Bridge stands today. These guns replaced larger but more primitive 15-inch Rodman cannon and 13-inch mortars.

At 496 feet above sea level they were said to be the highest located artillery pieces in the world except for a battery at Gibraltar.

In modern times air space, not sea approaches, is of primary concern, and so today Fort Baker, the oldest of Marin's three former coast artillery forts, is the headquarters of a command whose mission is the protection of the entire West Coast Guard attack from the air.

THE NAME OF this command is 6th Region, United States Army Air Defense Command. It is part of the nationwide Army Air Defense Command (ARADCOM), headquartered at Colorado Springs, Colo.

ARADCOM deploys Nike Hercules guided missiles at sites throughout the country as the Army component of the unified United States-Canadian North American Air Defense Command. Three such Nike sites are located in Marin County, at Fort Barry, Fort Cronkhite and San Rafael.

Just as today's supersonic missiles and sophisticated radars at Forts Baker and Cronkhite point up the striking change in weaponry during the past 100 years, so does the very physical location of 6th Region's headquarters illustrate the fascinating mingling of the old and the new in this quiet corner of Marin.

THE HEADQUARTERS is housed in a building centered in the U of a typical parade ground of bygone days, laid out in 1868 but little used by today's missilemen.

This nerve center of modern air defense is also but a stone's cast away from the remains of Batteries Duncan and Cavallo that date back to 1874. These batteries, just south of Sausalito, were armed with clumsy eight-inch muzzle-loaders and helped guard the inner harbor as adjuncts to Fort Point on the San Francisco side of the Golden Gate.

Although Lime Point Military Reservation was established in 1850, little was built there for almost two decades because of the failure of the federal government to acquire the land.

ON THE EVE of the Civil War, the only installation on the Marin tract was a light station erected in 1855 on the western cliffs where the Golden Gate meets the Pacific. Located about a quarter mile north of the present Bonita Lighthouse, it fired a warning cannon every half-hour

Nancy Cox Prepares For Nursing Career

March Of Dimes Scholarships Help An Honor Student From Marin

Marinites generally are well aware of the good uses to which the more than $30,000 that will be raised in their county this month by the March of Dimes campaign will be put. They know that most of the money raised to fight birth defects will be spent for research and in direct help to babies and children handicapped by birth defects.

THEY ARE familiar with such examples as the recent grant from the Marin Chapter of the National Foundation to the Marindale School for the purchase of electric typewriters and attachments that will enable physically-handicapped youngsters to master typing skills.

They or members of their families may have been among the newlyweds and young parents who have received some of the thousands of educational folders and booklets made possible by the March of Dimes.

But there is yet another kind of expenditure that has been less publicized: The awarding of March of Dimes grant scholarships in medicine to both graduate and undergraduate students and to qualified nursing students.

A CASE IN point is Nancy Kathleen Cox, daughter of Mrs. Betty Cox of 965 Magnolia Avenue, Larkspur, and a former honor student at Dominican Upper School.

Nancy received two Health Careers Award scholarships from March of Dimes to enable her to pursue her goal of a career in nursing.

Now a junior at San Francisco State, Nancy decided midway through high school to make a career of nursing.

Her objective has not yet been achieved. But already she has had a wealth of experience in hospitals and work with the sick.

IT BEGAN with two years of volunteer work as a "candy striper" at St. Francis Hospital in San Francisco.

In her junior year at Dominican (now San Domenico), Nancy devoted one day a week to helping handicapped children at Marindale School. Despite her devotion to that work, she still graduated from Dominican with honors.

During her freshman and sophomore years at San Francisco State, Nancy worked part-time at the campus audio visual center making teaching aids and nursing charts. It was paid work closely associated with her artwork hobby.

during foggy weather.

Soon after it was built, a retired Army artillery sergeant, apparently looking for a soft berth, eagerly undertook the task of tending the station. He soon quit, however. Fog, he complained, kept him sleepless for days on end, firing his cannon every 30 minutes. Besides, he added, he got lonesome.

During the war years 1861 to 1865, most defensive structures at the Golden Gate were of a makeshift and emergency nature.

AT THE START of the Civil War, Fort Point was near completion, batteries were emplaced on Alcatraz and at several other sites in the Bay Area, but construction of the buildings, roads, breastworks and bunkers for Lime Point batteries did not begin until 1868. It was not until then that the long hassle over ownership ended and procurement of the tract effected.

The much disputed land was part of the original Richardson Rancho Saucelito Grant of 1828 and the conflict over its ownership reached the United States Congress where charges and counter-charges of graft and corruption were hurled about with great abandon but little immediate effect.

Until 1904, Forts Barry and Baker were units of the Lime Point Reservation. Final division of the tract came in 1937 when Fort Cronkhite was established at its northwestern limits. Today the forts are sub-posts of the Presidio of San Francisco.

FORTS BAKER, Barry and Cronkhite, with their vestiges of the past and modern installations standing side by side, not only present an intriguing comparison between the old and the new, they also offer a sort of stratified military archeology of coast artillery fortifications by era.

When gun ranges were extremely limited, battery emplacements were sited well within the harbor entrance. Batteries Duncan and Cavallo, mentioned earlier, are examples. They represent the era between post Civil War days and the 1890s.

When wooden ships and smooth-bore cannon were succeeded by vessels of steel with more destructive armament, defensive coast artillery kept pace. This was during the intermediate era, about 1890 to World War I, when rifled guns increased in range to about 10 miles.

EMPLACEMENTS then stood at the very entrance of the Golden Gate.

The aforementioned 15-inch battery atop Lime Point Ridge represents this era. Traces of its brick emplacements still remain among the concrete breastworks of Battery Spencer. The latter, armed with two 12-inch barbette-mounted rifles, was finished in 1897 and remained until the early 1940s.

Battery Kirby is another example of intermediate armament. Begun in 1872 and improved in 1898, it employed two 12-inch disappearing rifles. Remnants of its breastworks and magazines can be seen at Kirby Beach, a small cove almost directly beneath the northern tower of the Golden Gate Bridge.

MANY OF THE artillery pieces emplaced in Marin prior to World War I were removed

ANOTHER VIEW OF Battery Duncan as it looks today shows how remnants of this eight-inch battery stand on a hillside just within the limits of Fort Baker and some two miles south of Sausalito. It is just one of many relics of past military eras to be found in Marin's shoreline forts.

at Ross General Hospital, which acts as an extended campus for both San Francisco State College and the University of California.

There, for three days of each week, Nancy and her fellow students observed procedures in Ross General's model psychiatric department and participated in certain phases of the therapy.

Last summer, and even during her Christmas vacation last month, found Nancy back in hospital work, serving full-time at Marin General Hospital as a nurses' aide.

AS PART OF her present study course at San Francisco State, she is doing medical-surgical laboratory work at Presbyterian Medical Center, San Francisco, and maintaining a 3.5 or better grade average.

Behind it all, says Nancy, is the fact that "I have always liked people, and I have always been fascinated by medicine."

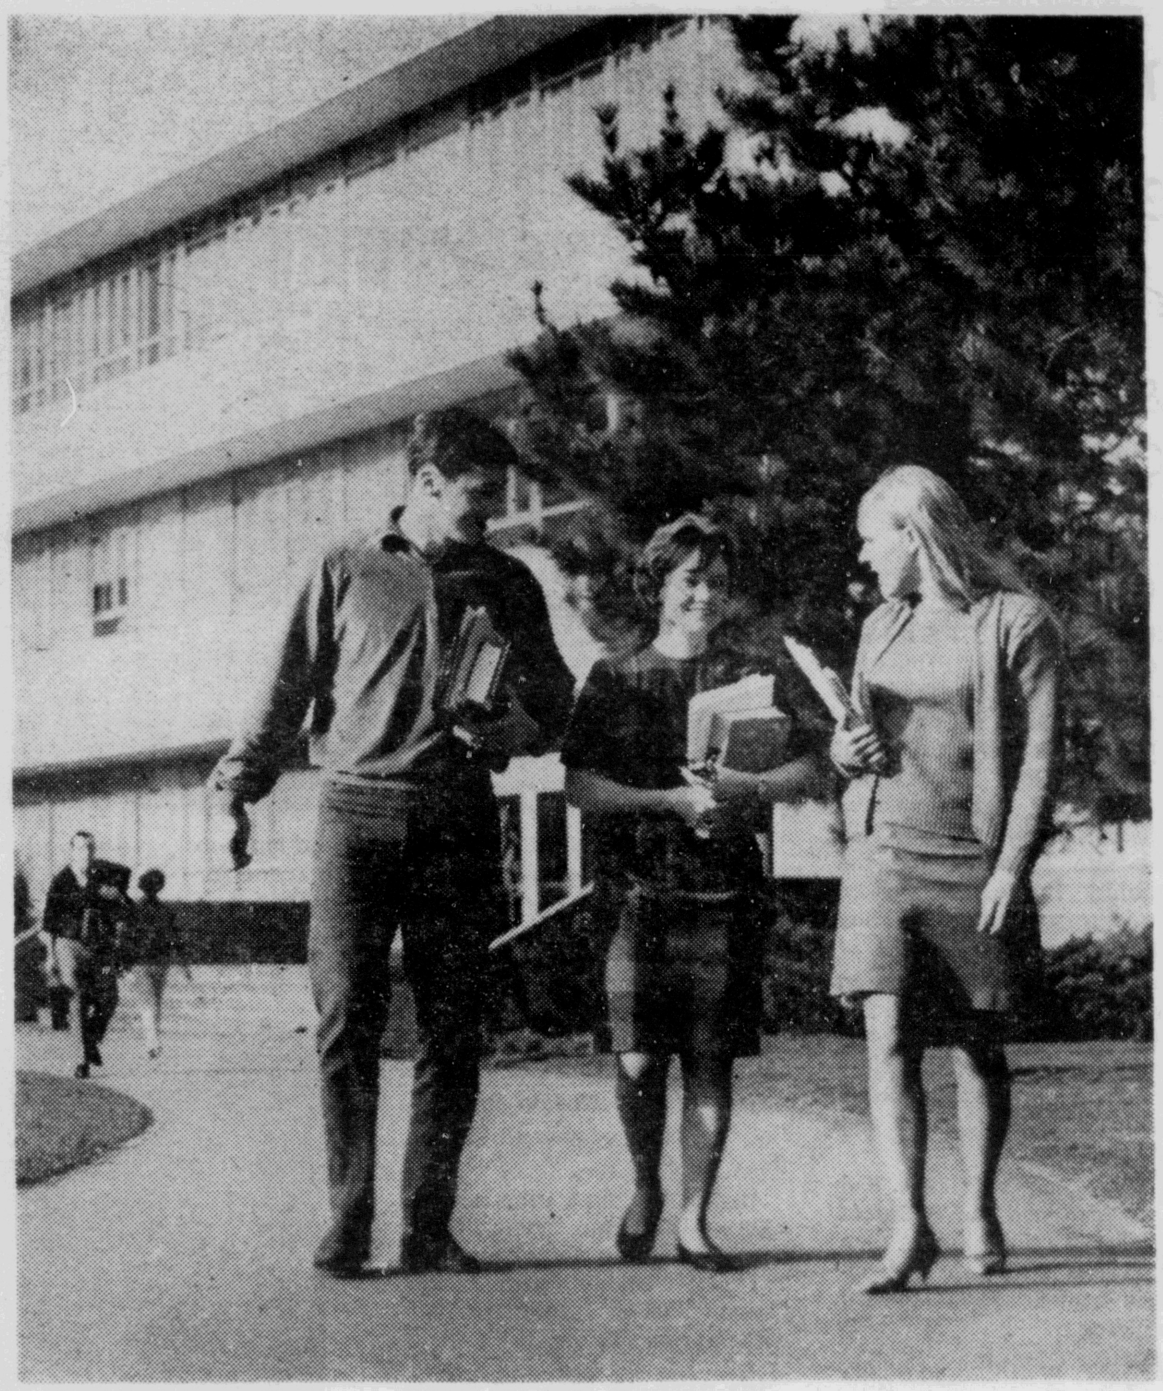
Nancy Cox's interest in the particular field of birth defects was heightened last year when Dr. Virginia Apgar, world-famed pediatrician and medical research director for the National Foundation March of Dimes, visited San Rafael to speak at the annual March of Dimes dinner.

THE YOUNG coed and aspiring nurse had an opportunity to meet and talk with Dr. Apgar, and calls it "an inspiring experience."

March of Dimes officials in Marin cite Nancy Cox as typical of the young people being encouraged and trained to participate directly in the fight against birth defects, a crippling disease that annually affects 250,000 newborn babies each year.

Several hundred volunteer workers in Marin are currently soliciting the financial support of Marinites for March of Dimes.

One result of a successful outcome of their efforts will be the recruitment of more dedicated young people like Nancy Cox to the cause of ridding America of one of its most terrible health menaces.



NANCY COX walks on the San Francisco State College campus with fellow students Larry Kruezyonski of South San Francisco and Jacquie Harvey, right, of Piedmont, enroute to a class. Nancy, an honor student at Dominican Upper School, is now in her junior year at San Francisco State College, and with the help of two March of Dimes scholarships, is well on her way to a career in nursing.

From Primitive Cannon To The Guided Missile

during that conflict and shipped overseas. These included five-inch guns from Battery Wagner, eight-inch guns from Battery Duncan, and 12-inch mortars from Battery Alexander.

These pieces were the "late" intermediate era and their breastworks and magazines still stand today, cheek by jowl with sleek, modern Nike missile sites.

Fort Cronkhite is a prime example of the final period of American shore fortifications, an era spanning the years between the two World Wars. Gun ranges had jumped to 20 to 25 miles. Cronkhite's Battery Townsley with its two huge 16-inch Navy rifles was situated far outside the Golden Gate from where it could launch 2,250-pound projectiles well out to sea.

BUILT ENTIRELY of steel and concrete, Battery Townsley was regarded in 1940 as impregnable to land, sea and air attack. It was the first "modern" coast artillery battery on the continent completely underground and one of the earliest to use radars and computers.

Today some of Battery Townsley's bunkers are used for storage purposes by nearby Nike missile sites.

Armament at the Marin fortifications during World War II also included anti-motor torpedo boat batteries, or AMTBs. There were 40-millimeter guns at Point Bonita and 90mm AMTBs at Gravelley Beach, closer to the bridge, and pedestal-mounted three-inchers at Kirby Beach.

ALSO AT THIS time, Army mine layers were berthed at Fort Baker and barrage balloon hangars operated at Fort Barry.

The close of World War II saw the end of the proud and tradition-steeped Coast Artillery Corps.

With the growth of air power, the importance of fixed coast defenses based on heavy guns waned. Mighty Battery Townsley's classic 16-inchers were fired for the last time in February, 1948, and a few months later the blowtorches and wreckers moved in to dismantle the last of the Golden Gate's harbor defense batteries.

TWO YEARS OF comparative quiet followed for Marin's forts and then with the Korean War a different type of armament appeared—90mm and 120mm anti-aircraft batteries.

Although improved they were of fast-fading World War II vintage and were short-lived. Their phasing out started in 1954 and a new era arrived, the era of the air defense guided missile.

Just as coast artillery armament had kept pace with the increased capabilities of sea-launched attacks, so did air defense keep abreast of the mounting potency of aircraft.

THE DEVELOPMENT of high-speed aircraft during the closing months of World War II resulted in the creation of a new system of Army air defense a decade later. This was Nike, an electronic system in which a supersonic missile is controlled ad guided from take-off to target by ground based equipment. It was named for the Greek goddess of victory.

The 1953 advent of the first of the Nike family, the Nike Ajax, meant far more than just a difference in "hardware." It marked a sweeping change in the very basic concept of air defense weapon deployment.

What occurred was that Army air defense weapons suddenly broke away from the concept of fixed or limited defense of the immediate area to an entirely new and "flexible" defense by missiles deployed near the defended area but capable of destroying targets at long range—before enemy aircraft reached a bomb-released line.

INITIALLY, Nike Ajax sites in Marin, and at other locations defending the Bay Area, were temporary, above-ground emplacements.

The first such site became operational at Fort Cronkhite on June 1, 1954. Soon after, another temporary Ajax battery was activated at Fort Barry.

By the summer of 1955, permanent sites with underground missile storage pits, elevators and other refinements were completed at both Marin forts.

FORT BARRY, which as late as 1943 still had two 12-inch disappearing cannon emplacement at Battery Mendell, scored a "first" in the history of local air defense. The first Nike Hercules battery to protect the Bay Area became operational there on Jan. 15, 1959. Hercules, the second generation Nike missile, possesses a greater destructive and performance capability than its predecessor, the Nike Ajax

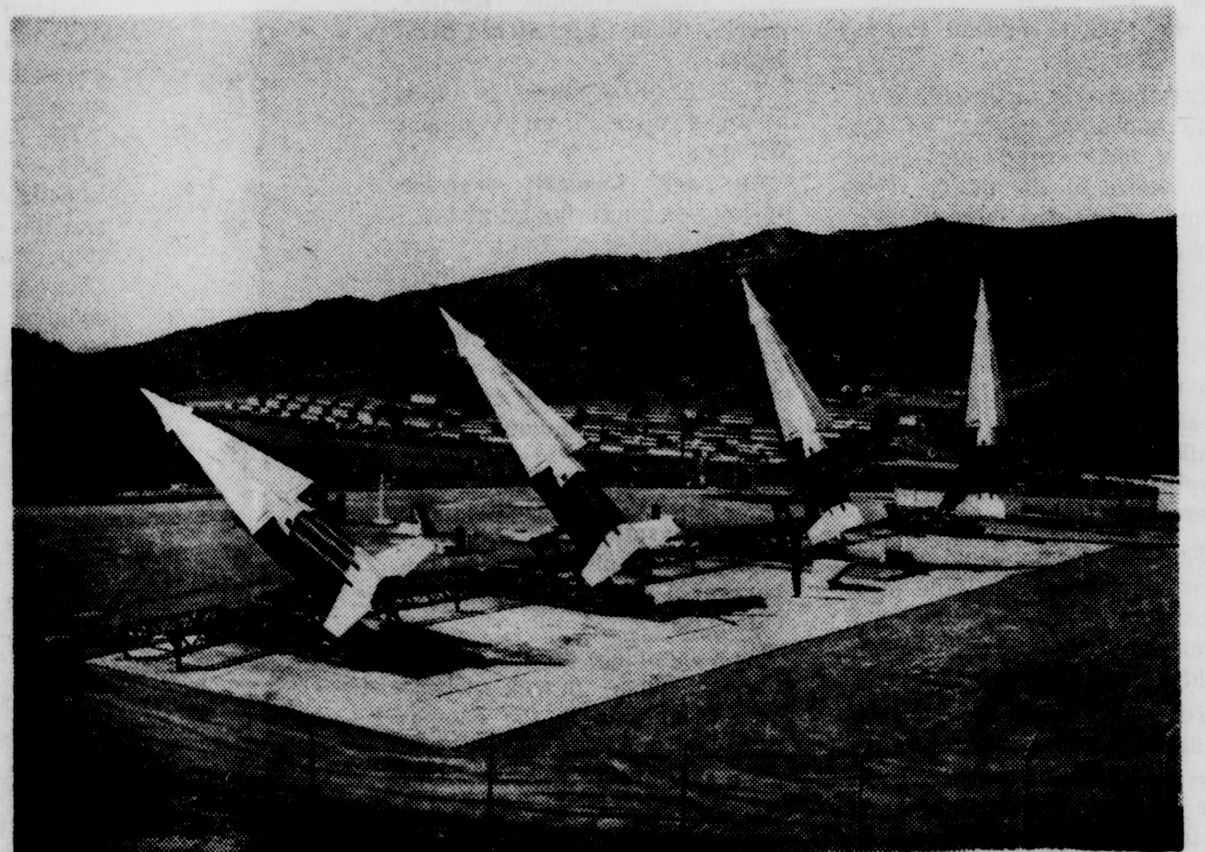
The next Marin County Hercules unit was San Rafael's, operational two months after the Barry site. Fort Cronkhite's Ajax went to Hercules on Sept. 29, 1959.

Today Marin County's old Lime Point Military Reservation is one of more than 30 complexes in the United States armed with Nike Hercules missiles.

THE NIKE Hercules will range more than 75 miles.

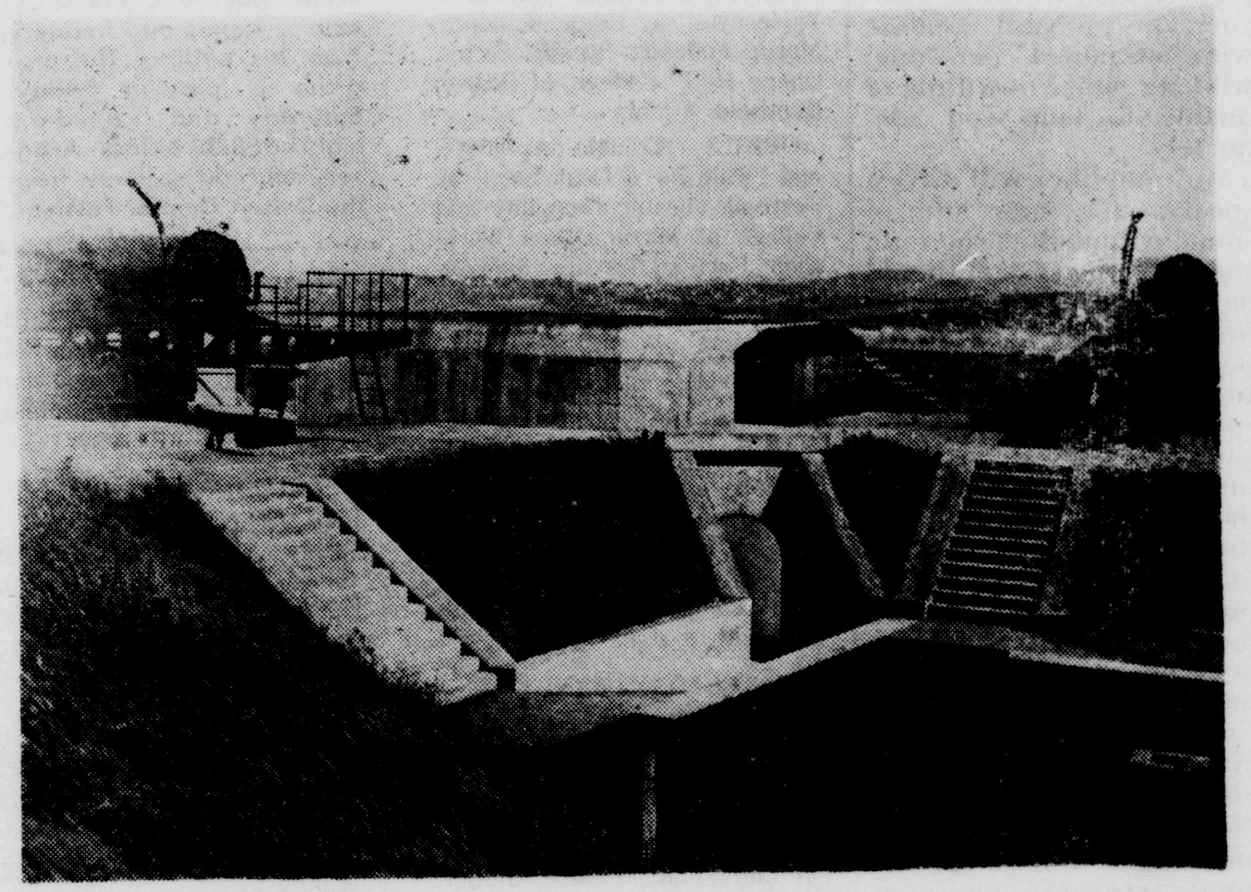
Hercules not only has a conventional warhead, but can utilize a nuclear warhead to wipe out entire flights of aircrafts. It can destroy any known aircraft and any aerodynamically supported missile. It can intercept any known type of aircraft at altitudes below 1,000 feet or up to and beyond 150,000 feet, more than 28 miles high.

Nike Hercules missiles are a far cry indeed from the primitive cannon that protected the Golden Gate some 100 years ago.

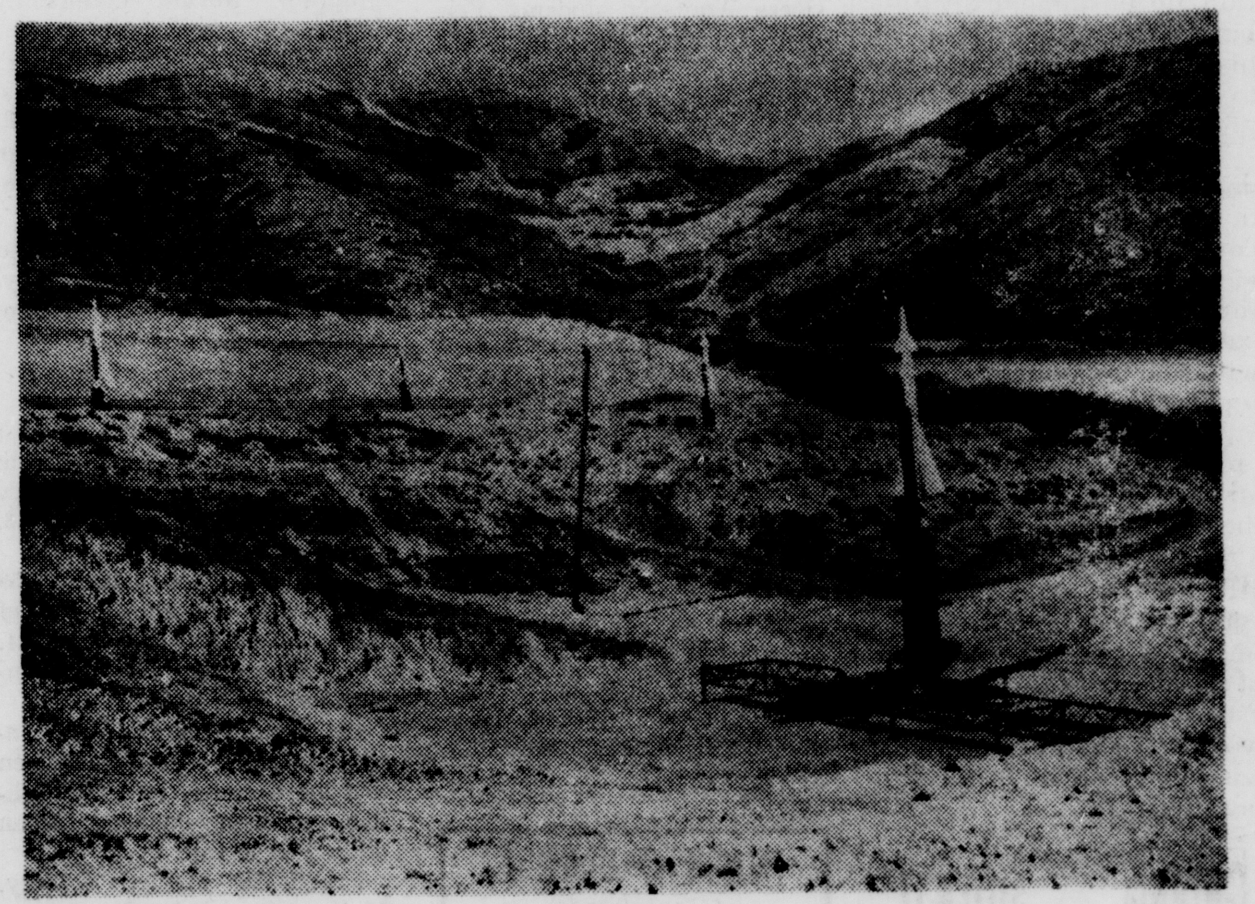


SLEEK U.S. ARMY Nike Hercules air defense missiles stand guard at Fort Barry, while nearby are the remains of three seacoast artillery installations built in 1905 — Batteries O'Rorke, Smith-Guthrie and Alexander.

THIS 50-TON ordnance piece was being dragged uphill in 1904 for emplacement by civilian contractors at Fort Barry's Battery Mendell. The gun barrel had been brought from San Francisco by a barge that landed at Point Bonita.



IN THE EARLY 1900s, near where the north tower of the Golden Gate Bridge stands today, the breastworks and 12-inch guns of Battery Spencer at Lime Point Bluff, Fort Baker, stood guard against enemy attack.



TEMPORARY SITES for the first members of the Nike family of Army air defense missiles, the Nike Ajax, became operational at Forts Barry and Cronkhite in 1954. By the summer of 1955, these had given way to permanent sites with underground missile pits, elevators and other refinements.

Novato's Community House Still Serves As Gathering Place

Renovation Readies Building For Its Part In A Civic Celebration

By THERON NEWELL

The three-day observance of the seventh anniversary of Novato's incorporation next Friday, Saturday and Sunday was the direct result of the renovation of the Community House.

Spurred by Mrs. Bea Carpenter, volunteer labor completely changed the interior of the old building to a mid-Victorian period decor.

The momentum of all of this work carried on until the group wanted to do something to show off the Community House and seized on the seventh birthday of the City of Novato as cause for a celebration.

THIS OLD structure is unique among community buildings in Marin County. For years it was the central gathering place of the residents of the area.

The Community House is the outgrowth of a program of the Presbyterian Church and the citizens of Novato.

Dr. Warren Wilson, head of the Board of National Missions, pushed a program to constuct community buildings to be used for church functions and also as a general meeting place in small communities.

THE PRESBYTERIAN Church was the only Protestant church in Novato at the time and it was up to its pastor to carry out this program. That man was Rev. Charles Christensen. At that time, the church was located directly east of the site proposed for the Community House. He worked on the idea, soliciting funds and talking up the project.

Alton Lerch, Novato historian and past president of the Marin County Historical Society, has recorded the events of that time from the files of the San Rafael Independent, Marin Journal and Novato Advance.

By July 15, 1922, $12,056 had been pledged and the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church contributed another $9,000 toward the building.

ON SEPT. 16 of that year, the Benicia Presbytery pledged an additional $750 toward the building.

Walter H. Parker was the architect chosen for the job. However, the original bid on the construction of the building was $30,000. This necessitated a revision of the plans so that the cost could be reduced to $19,000.

The contract was awarded to Charles F. Schuetz of San Francisco on Nov. 18, 1922. Then on Dec. 7, seven lots were obtained by the church, providing an area 140 by 175 feet for the building.

BY JAN. 6, 1923, the foundation was laid and the framing began. On the same date a $375 gift was received from a Mr. Brooks in Washington in memory of his mother who died in California.

By April the building was taking shape and the Red Cross proposed monthly baby clinics in the building. On May 5, the contract for painting it was awarded to A. Quandt and Sons of San Francisco.

With the building nearing completion, an organization was formed to run the Community House with Reverend Christensen as its first president. Other officers were William E. Cole, vice president; C. E. Carlile, secretary, and Mrs. J. A. Stutt, treasurer.

THE DIRECTORS were Robert Trumbull, later county supervisor and Golden Gate bridge director; his sister, Mrs. R. S. Brown; Miss Lulu Sutton, a teacher in Novato for 40 years; George D. Morrison, local banker and director of the North Marin County Water District; John P. Geary, and Mrs. George Owens.

The building was dedicated on April 11, 1923, but the official opening was not held until Aug. 28. In the meantime, A. J. Cain, owner of the Novato Utilities Co., started showing movies there on July 7.

Among the first films shown were "The Man from Hell's River," starring the original Rin Tin Tin; "Daddy" with Jackie Coogan; "The Young Diana" with Marion Davies.

ON AUG. 18, 1923, the notice of completion was recorded for the Community House. A crowd estimated at 700 attended the grand opening program on Aug. 28.

The building served as a center for community life with the first little theater group formed in 1923 with 80 members. The first benefit for the Community House was held May 31, 1924.

Other groups including the garden and book clubs and others were added to the original little theater company.

IN 1924 THE men of the community decided that the building needed better access, so 14 of them constructed De Long Avenue from Machin Avenue to

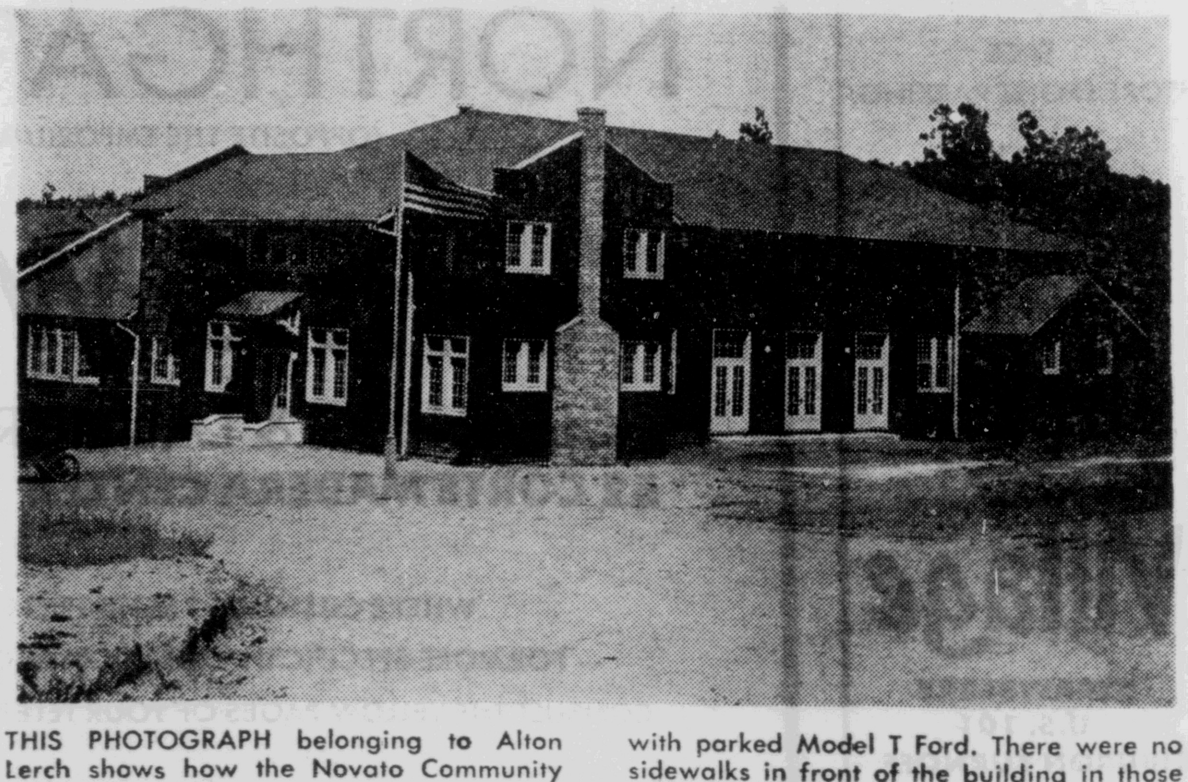
THE COMMUNITY HOUSE has served Novato well as a gathering place and as a scene for civic, cultural and social activities, since it was completed in 1923. Next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, newly renovated, it will be the focal point of a celebration in observance of the seventh anniversary of Novato's incorporation. (Independent-Journal photo)

IT WAS A labor of love for Bea Carpenter as she directed and worked on renovation of the Novato Community House. At the last minute she was still making and hanging the drapes in the council chambers.



THIS PHOTOGRAPH belonging to Alton Lerch shows how the Novato Community House looked in its early days, complete with parked Model T Ford. There were no sidewalks in front of the building in those days, and De Long Avenue had been newly constructed from Machin to Highway 101.

It bears repeating. Long after the sweetness of the discount purchase has wilted away, the bitterness of the poor service and wrong choice of components remains. Ponder these words! Remember, that the purchase of a home music system is a purchase intended to give many years of relaxation and enjoyment. Remember also that the average music lover is not a radio technician or engineer, and is not expected to speak in technical terms of Db's, tracking angles, compliance or flat response, when all he really wants is to hear music without distortion. This is where the job of a trained sound specialist is most important. In a discount store you are probably dealing with untrained personnel who are either unwilling or unable to help you adequately.

Any amplifier will drive a speaker into some form of sound output. But to perform correctly, the system should be well balanced, as would be one outlined by an experienced audio specialist. In a quality Hi-Fi store, the specialist will demonstrate various balanced possibilities. The listener will have the opportunity to compare these systems with laboratory standards. The goal is to provide the consumer with the best balanced component music system for his budget. Further, before delivery to the customer's home the system is assembled, bench tested with laboratory standard equipment and adjusted to meet the manufacturer's specifications; thus, assuring maximum performance of each unit. Should the need for service occur after installation, the customer can either have a technician come to his home, or bring the unit to the store that sold it for prompt service.

A discount house as a rule does not have service facilities, so you have to take the component to a factory service agency (generally an independently owned repair shop under contract with many manufacturers to repair their units for $3.00 or $4.00 regardless of the problem and usually crowded with repairs.) Often times the cost difference between a purchase from a quality Hi-Fi Stereo store and a discount store is used up in trying to obtain satisfactory performance. Can you honestly afford the gamble, or would you rather know that what you have chosen is the best for you?

GULL

Svelte vulture—

Like a careless pinwheel
Wheeling, feeling, sea-spent,
He floats down, cloud-sent—
To light, haughty-eyed, upon my orange peel.

God kissing carrion, from celestial doors,
Loosed by Diana from Olympian dells,
He preys on garbage, picks at rotting horseshoe shells—
Then squawks, flaps, slaps water, skims, and soars

To realms azure.

SAN RAFAEL HAMILTON BRUSH

MORNING

Dawn curtains my window.
Outside, the disembodied caw caw caw
of a crow
bludgeons the stillness.
Now in the cities
the slow traffic rumble quickens and soon faceless people
everywhere
will arise from rumpled sheets and put on clothing
and masks.
And most important will be the masks for without these they cannot face
the world
or themselves.
I, too, must arise and
adjust my mask.

While the old stand firmly sure . . .
Yet who can forget the bend-beauty
Of a swaying sapling?

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

On the Vanguard labels:

BOYCE: Eight Symphonies—Isolisti di Zagreb/Antonio Janigro conducting—Bach Guild Stereo BGS-70668:

Boyce has been called England's most talented composer in the period between Purcell and Elgar.

His music is forthright, energetic and quite original. In fact, few of these symphonies sound like music of the middle 1700s—they seem of a later period.

The stereodisc effectively replaces the previously fine mono set on Westminster directed by Karl Haas.

VAUGHAN WILLIAMS: A London Symyphony (No. 2) — Halle Orchestra/Sir John Barbirolli — Vanguard Everyman Stereo SRV-134SD:

This bargain sub-label of Vanguard has had one of the most consistently excellent series of releases in the concert music field.

This is probably the Vaughan Williams to own, and certainly this particular version is the one to own. This sound-picture of the captial in all its various moods is one of the most evocative things the English composer has written. It almost justifies the label sometimes attached to Vaughan Williams of an impressionist composer.

Fine Stereo.

PURCELL: The Fantasias for three to seven viols (complete) — The Concentus Musicus, Vienna/Nikolaus Harnoncourt — Bach Guild Stereo BGS-70676:

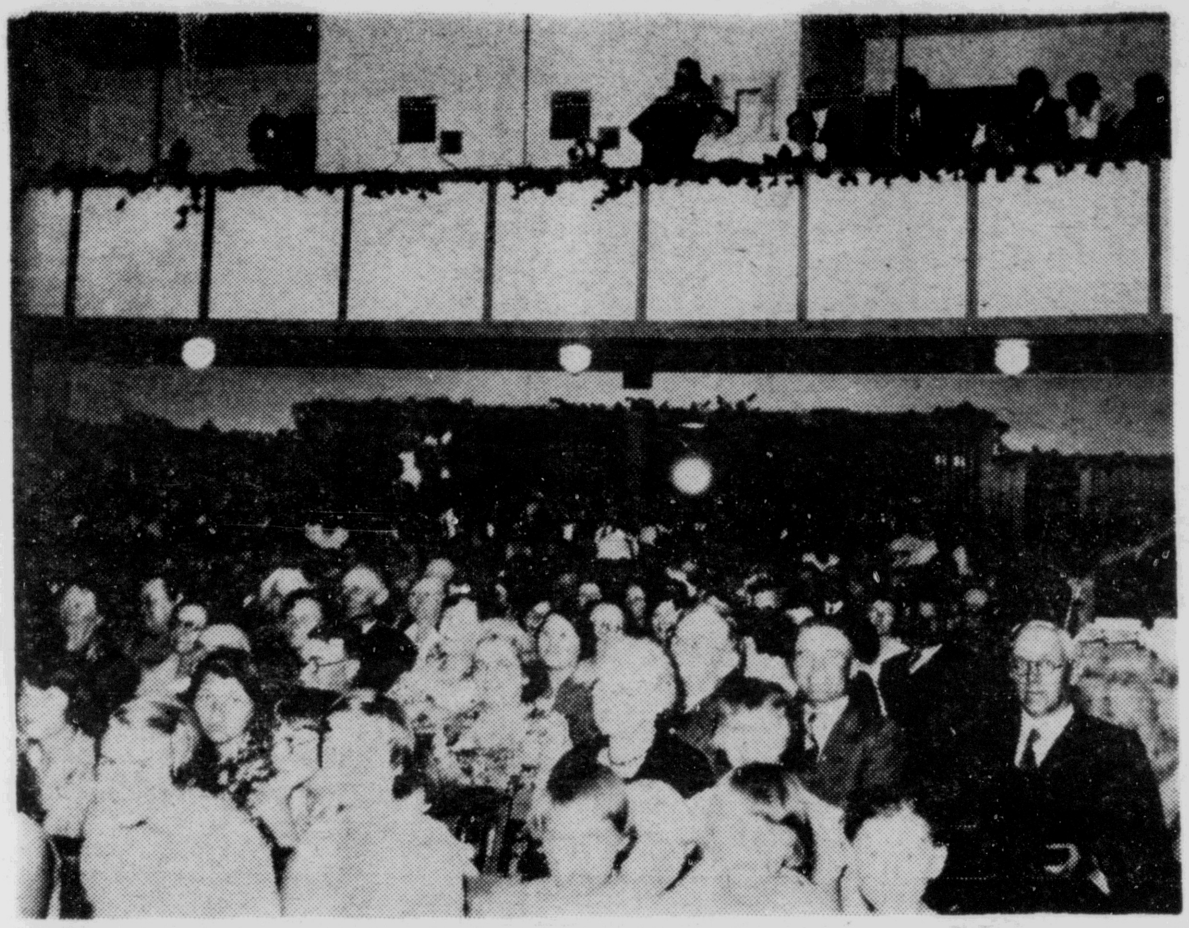
This English music is quite a world apart from Vaughan Williams.

An early scholarly exercise by Purcell, these fantasias have been compared to Bach's "Art of Fugue." This writer finds both works equally difficult to sit through, but early music buffs will appreciate the careful playing of the Viennese group on its viols and the good stereophonics.

HONEGGER: JUDITH — Netania Davrath/Blanche Christ-Lake City Symphonic Choir/Utah Abravanel — Vanguard Stereo VSD-71139:

First complete discing of this Biblical music drama, whose form is similar to the composer's earlier "King David." Netania Davrath is a perfect Judith, and Mrs. Milhaud provides a clear narration.

Abravanel merits thanks for the wonderful performances coming out of Salt Lake City lately.



WITH THE NOVATO Community House officially completed the first part of August, 1923, the dedication was held on Aug. 28 with more than 700 attending. Note the balcony with its projection booth in the rear. This was later torn out and an apartment for a caretaker constructed there.

Story Of The Community House

the state highway, now U. S. Highway 101.

Novato Community Inc. was formed in 1947 to take over the control of the building, with a provision that if the city were to incorporate the building would be turned over to the city.

That same year, the balcony was torn out and an apartment for a caretaker was constructed upstairs.

AFTER THE city was incorporated in 1960, Alfred Bowman initiated a taxpayer's suit to have the building turned over to the new city government. The city council joined Bowman and, in a court trial, Superior Court Judge Richard M. Sims Jr. awarded the building to the city which has controlled it since.

The Garden Club, Book Club and Bridge Club sections of the Community Club withdrew, leaving the Fling Section to assume the duties of the community club, which it has done.

With the City of Novato in charge of the Community House, it held its city council meetings there. Soon it acquired the Presbyterian Church properties which were adjacent and turned them into the present city hall complex.

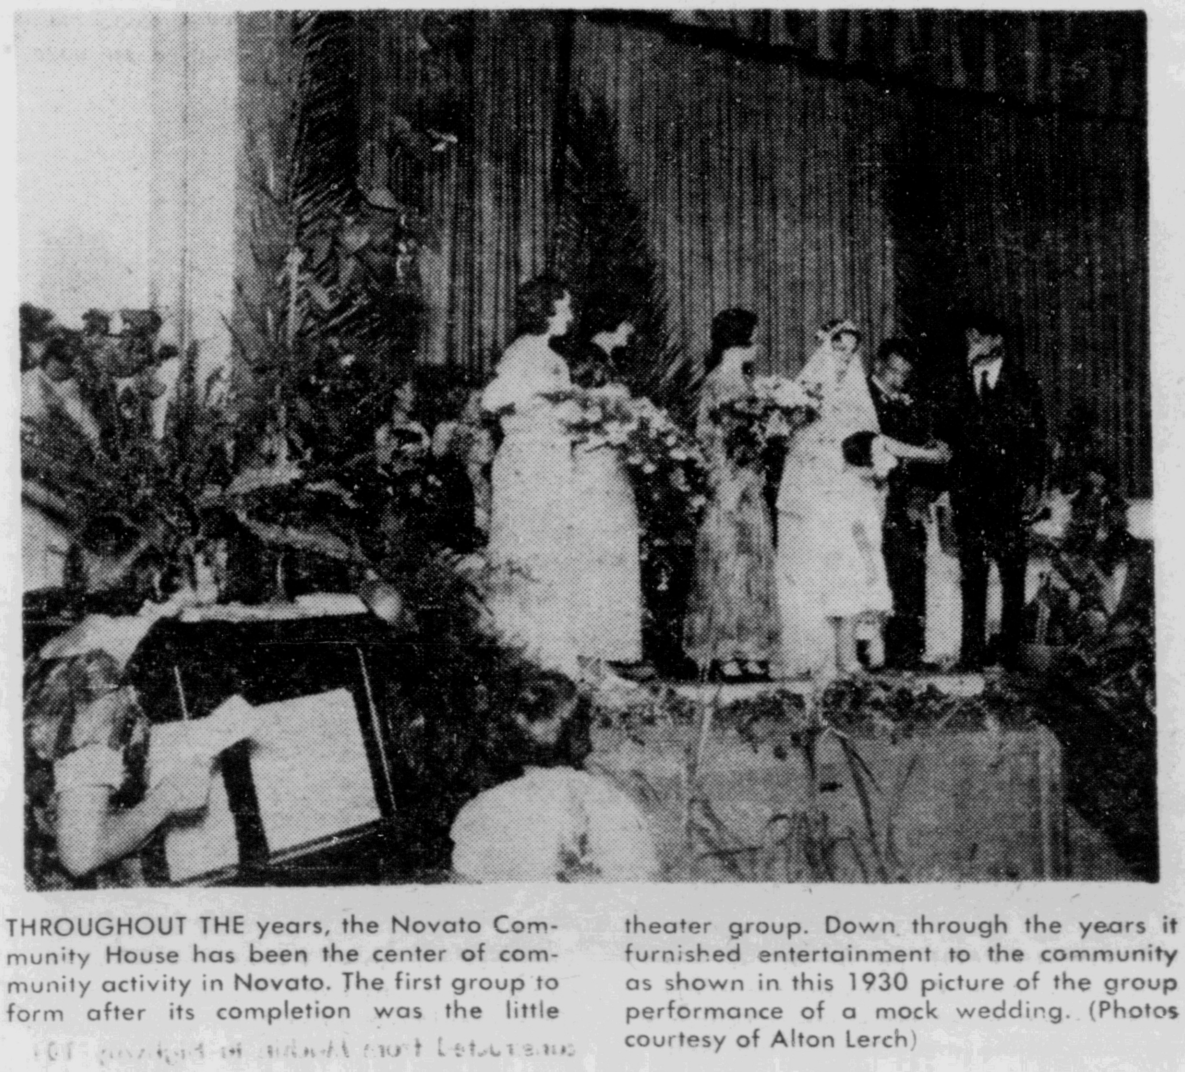
WITH THE addition of the George Morrison house to the police station, the Community House stood out apart, unpainted and badly in need of repair.

Then the city council voted $10,000 for the renovation.

Edward W. Adams, parks and recreation director, supervised the roof repairs and repairs to the structure of the building. The volunteers followed the plans of Mrs. Carpenter and renovated the interior.

NOW THE community house, in the words of many old timers, looks better than it ever has before.

Visitors will be able to judge for themselves at next weekend's big celebration.



THROUGHOUT THE years, the Novato Community House has been the center of community activity in Novato. The first group to form after its completion was the little theater group. Down through the years it furnished entertainment to the community as shown in this 1930 picture of the group performance of a mock wedding. (Photos courtesy of Alton Lerch)

Pencil In Hands Of The Infinite

By DON KEOWN

FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT: His Life, His Work, His Words, by Olgivanna Lloyd Wright, Horizon Press, 224 pages, $7.50.

NO ROOM IN THE ARK by Alan Moorehead, abridged edition, Harper & Row, 166 pages, $3.95.

Marinites feel a proprietary interest in anything having to do with the late Frank Lloyd Wright because he left his highly individualistic mark among us in the form of the imposing Marin County Civic Center administration building.

We note with pride that the largest single illustration in the new book "Frank Lloyd Wright: His Life, His Work, His Words" is a striking double-page photograph of that edifice.

The book is by Wright's widow and colleague Olgivanna Lloyd Wright. Her emphasis is less upon her late husband's life or biography than it is upon his work and thinking.

For the most part, she chooses to let him speak for himself. With full access to his papers, she produces long and frequent quotations in which Wright discoursed not only upon architecture but upon the arts and living generally.

Wright saw himself as "a pencil in the hands of the Infinite." His "organic architecture," as he called it, represented a move toward freedom. It rejected the basic box-like form that had so long shackled American building design, and it capitalized upon the cantilever principle made possible by steel to an unprecedented extent.

It was, in Wright's view, "the architecture of democracy." He was out to liberate us from "the sense of enclosure." The remarkable collection of illustrations assembled for the book, both photos and drawings, demonstrate just how remarkably well he succeeded. There is a characteristic feeling of freedom and airiness about any structure planned by Wright or his proteges that is instantly recognizable.

The reader receives detailed descriptions of the Wright processes in the development of some of his best-known projects, particularly the early hallmark ones.

There is also considerable insight into Wright as a teacher of young people. He was a believer in broad study, not in specialization. And he had an almost astonishing ability to reach, challenge and inspire the young.

If Mrs. Wright tells us very little about Wright's biography — principally she dwells on his Welsh roots and their lifelong influence —, there are other books to fill that void. And she does reveal a great deal about his personality. As his wife, she was, naturally, an unstinting admirer of the man. Thus there is a propensity to overlook or rationalize the tendency toward conceit and arrogance sometimes reflected in his own words. But there is little doubt that in anyone's eyes, Frank Lloyd Wright was an extraordinary human being as well as working genius. His interests were vast, and he subscribed wholeheartedly to the theory that "beauty is the highest form of morality."

At the back of the book there is a table of chronology of events in Wright's life, and his own listing of his principal architectural innovations.

To understanding of how and why this man created such a lasting and revolutionary impact upon American architecture, the book makes an impressive contribution.

HARPER & ROW has published a new abridged edition of journalist-author Alan Moorehead's excellent "No Room in the Ark."

The book remains as fresh and engrossing a picture of African wildlife today as it was when it was first published in the late 1950s. The abridgement, by Moorehead's wife, retains most of the value and flavor of the full text and allows for quicker reading, although few would regret the time invested in the original, longer version.

Moorehead has a great gift for observing, and then transfering these observations to written description.

Visiting Africa's last great game preserves, he viewed and recorded the habits of the dwindling herds with an absence of cloying sentimentality, but with a probing curiosity that makes for an enthralling experience for his reader who finds himself almost literally accompanying Moorehead into the wilds and bush.

At close range you witness the day-to-day life of the lion, the leopard, the elephant, the giraffe, the crocodile and lesser but equally fascinating wildlife. For Moorehead, the single most exciting experience of his African tours came in the rare sighting of a gorilla, and that makes for an especially brilliant chapter.

Moorehead can paint for his readers, too, an equally compelling portrait of the people and the geography of Africa.

He is no romanticist, and always honest. Of the pygmy: ". . . if you've seen one, you've seen them all."

Seldom does he sermonize on the need for conservation. But his reporting makes this unnecessary. It points out dramatically the stake that mankind has in the reversal of past tends toward the eradication of other living things.

He does tell us that it is too late to save the 90 per cent of Africa's one-time animal population that has been exterminated forever. But he foresaw, as of the time he was writing the book, some hope for the remaining 10 per cent. "It may even be," he wrote, "that the human instinct to kill all the other living things on earth will wear itself out at last."

Unfortunately, further progress in that respect, since Moorehead voiced his qualified optimism, has been little if not nil.

There's a small portfolio of truly remarkable animal photographs in the book.

Those who do not own the book in its original edition would do well to avail themselves of the opportunity presented by this new version. It is a rare and altogether enjoyable reading experience, intended primarily for young readers but well-suited to all ages.

DANDY FOR television fans who dote on old and not-so-old movies, but who like to be a bit selective in the ones they view, is the new $1 Bantam Books paperback "TV Key Movie Guide" edited by Steven H. Scheuer.

It lists in alphabetical order more than 6,900 films that have been sold to television, along with their stars, the plots, the year of filming and their national origins. There is even a rating system, based on from one to four stars.

Many newspapers make use of the "TV Key" reports on their television pages.

"THE SECRETS of San Domenico," the excellent and attractive looseleaf cookbook put out by San Domenico School for Girls, was a quick sellout at that institution's annual charity bazaar.

Now more copies have been printed, and are available through the San Domenico Book Store at $3 a copy.

The Service League, a group of 30 school mothers, compiled the book. They wheedled from parents, students, nuns and friends of San Domenico some 500 treasured recipes, many of them in the "family secret" category. The result is an unusually well balanced presentation of dishes of the kind that not only sound good but also lend themselves to practical preparation.

"THE FAMILY Circus," one of the most popular of the comic cartoons appearing regularly in the Independent - Journal, is available now in book form from the Judson Press, Valley Forge, Pa. "Sunday with the Family Circus" contains 91 of Bil Keane's best drawings. The price is $1.

FAWCETT has published in its Premier Masterwork paperback series Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist" with introduction by Steven Marcus (95 cents).

A SECOND edition of "Northwestern Pacific Railroad," the fast-selling illustrated history by Fred A. Stindt and Guy L. Dunscomb, has been published and is selling for $12.50. The book has been expanded with an additional 16 pages, 29 more historical photographs and an added chapter on the disastrous 1964 Eel River flood.

THE CREEPING HOURS by Hugh Pentecost, Dodd, Mead & Co., 217 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Donald G. Davis.

That flame-bearded artist John Jericho reluctantly leaves his studio again to help solve a puzzle of death and intrigue.

The reason: the brilliant young artist Tommy Nolan, who everyone says has been speaking for the younger generation, is dead — and it isn't suicide as the police believe, but murder.

Nolan's paintings were to be used as a backdrop for a big television show starring the singer Zelda Rankin, who daily must fight her way past hordes of admirers. At night, she, her kookie husband and kookier lover and assorted others play, drink, and sing.

The use of Nolan's pictures was subject of a fight at one of those parties. Then Nolan dies, Jericho wants to know why.

This is Hugh Pentecost as his best. He brings New York and the behind-scenes television world alive with a lively story of intrigue and murder.

"I Thought Manufacturers No Longer Used Ornaments That Melt"

American producers of ornamental trim, beads, sequins, etc. have learned over the years that polystyrene plastic ornaments will dissolve in drycleaning. Unfortunately, foreign imports are not so carefully manufactured. Garments bearing French, Italian or Hong Kong labels are most likely to be decorated with perishable ornaments. Drycleaners have been warned to watch for garments with these labels and to be careful of any with plastic ornamental trim.

If you should attempt to spot-clean such a garment at home and let the cleaning fluid contact the beads or sequins, look out! They may disappear. Your drycleaner knows how to test plastic ornaments for melting. If he finds they may melt, he'll remove them before cleaning and, properly, make a charge for removing and replacing them. In instances where the trim cannot be removed he may refuse to clean the garment.

American manufacturers are much more customer-conscious than foreign manufacturers. The free enterprise system where the customer is king has taught them that.

The Forts Along Marin's Shoreline

Their History Has Been A Colorful One

By GEORGE VANDEGRIFT

In 1850, by executive order of President Millard Fillmore, a 1,300-acre strip of land stretching from Cavallo Point to Tennessee Cove on the Marin County side of the Golden Gate was established as Lime Point Military Reservation.

Three Army posts occupy this tract today—Forts Baker, Barry and Cronkhite.

Here, trim, modern structures stand side by side with crumbling remnants of the past to tell the story of a century of change in defensive armament from smooth-bore cannon to supersonic guided missiles.

FROM POST Civil War days until after World War II more than 20 batteries have been quartered on Marin's Lime Point reservation.

Armed with cannon ranging in calibre from a puny three inches to a massive 16, they have constituted an iron link in a defensive chain reaching from Point Reyes to south of Half Moon Bay. Their mission: To protect the Golden Gate from attack by sea.

At the turn of the century when seacoast ordnance was still far from its peak potential, a writer in the Monthly Overland said San Francisco's Golden Gate was "the most scientifically and completely protected harbor on the Atlantic or Pacific seaboard."

AS AN EXAMPLE of the defenses of that day, a battery of 12-inch barbette mounted cannon was emplaced on Lime Point Ridge near where the northern tower of the Golden Gate Bridge stands today. These guns replaced larger but more primitive 15-inch Rodman cannon and 13-inch mortars.

At 496 feet above sea level they were said to be the highest located artillery pieces in the world except for a battery at Gibraltar.

In modern times air space, not sea approaches, is of primary concern, and so today Fort Baker, the oldest of Marin's three former coast artillery forts, is the headquarters of a command whose mission is the protection of the entire West Coast Guard attack from the air.

THE NAME OF this command is 6th Region, United States Army Air Defense Command. It is part of the nationwide Army Air Defense Command (ARADCOM), headquartered at Colorado Springs, Colo.

ARADCOM deploys Nike Hercules guided missiles at sites throughout the country as the Army component of the unified United States-Canadian North American Air Defense Command. Three such Nike sites are located in Marin County, at Fort Barry, Fort Cronkhite and San Rafael.

Just as today's supersonic missiles and sophisticated radars at Forts Baker and Cronkhite point up the striking change in weaponry during the past 100 years, so does the very physical location of 6th Region's headquarters illustrate the fascinating mingling of the old and the new in this quiet corner of Marin.

THE HEADQUARTERS is housed in a building centered in the U of a typical parade ground of bygone days, laid out in 1868 but little used by today's missilemen.

This nerve center of modern air defense is also but a stone's cast away from the remains of Batteries Duncan and Cavallo that date back to 1874. These batteries, just south of Sausalito, were armed with clumsy eight-inch muzzle-loaders and helped guard the inner harbor as adjuncts to Fort Point on the San Francisco side of the Golden Gate.

Although Lime Point Military Reservation was established in 1850, little was built there for almost two decades because of the failure of the federal government to acquire the land.

ON THE EVE of the Civil War, the only installation on the Marin tract was a light station erected in 1855 on the western cliffs where the Golden Gate meets the Pacific. Located about a quarter mile north of the present Bonita Lighthouse, it fired a warning cannon every half-hour

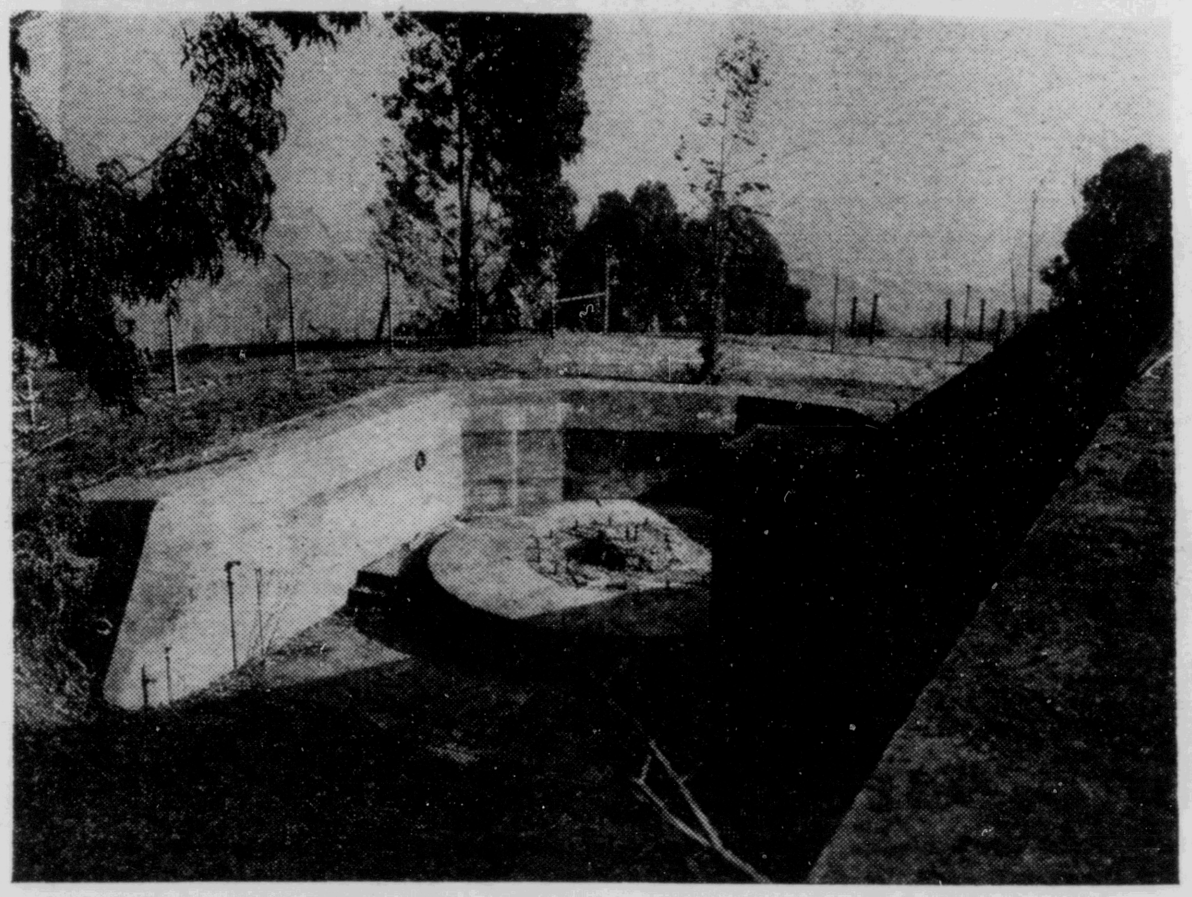
HISTORIC BATTERY SPENCER on Marin's shoreline is shown as it looks today, with the Golden Gate Bridge looming to the south. The original battery was completed in 1897, but additional breastworks were added after the turn of the century. (U.S. Army photos)



THESE ARE REMAINS of Fort Baker's Battery Duncan where one of two eight-inch cannon once guarded the inner Golden Gate. Nearby now is the building housing headquarters 6th Region, U. S. Army Air Defense Command.

Mammoth And Moving

FIVE SMOOTH STONES by Ann Fairbairn, Crown, 756 pages. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

The first grand-scale novel exploiting the civil rights struggle makes its bid for best-seller lists and the wide screen.

It may well be the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the Sixties. Written at white heat, just as corn-filled and emotional, it too is a flaming exposition of evil.

If this mammoth novel makes the grade, which it is very likely to do, it will surely serve to educate the public about the Negro movement far more effectively than the most penetrating essay or treatise. This is the stuff to move the masses.

The story is very, very long and teeming with characters, throughout subordinated to the action and quite perfunctory. First we meet the beloved grandfather, L'il Joe, the inevitable prototype of the "old-fashioned" Negro who, with the help of a Danish professor, brings up the boy David, instilling in him a deep respect for his heritage, at the same time he teaches him how to survive in the depression-stricken white world.

David leaves New Orleans for a northern college where he excels (he is of course very handsome and, palatably, "light milk chocolate in color") and also falls in love with Sara, a white — whom I'm afraid he calls "Smallest," and who refuses to believe the world has no place for their marriage.

This is just the main thread in a book overflowing with subplots and scenes set all over the United States and Europe. New groups of people, new situations are introduced constantly, as the lovers suffer and part. At last David, now a promising Boston lawyer, is offered the chance to serve as a diplomat to a new African country.

It is at this point that the book takes fire. David, inflamed by L'il Joe's murder, refuses his chance for a future with Sara and resolutely turns back to the South to join in the fight for equality.

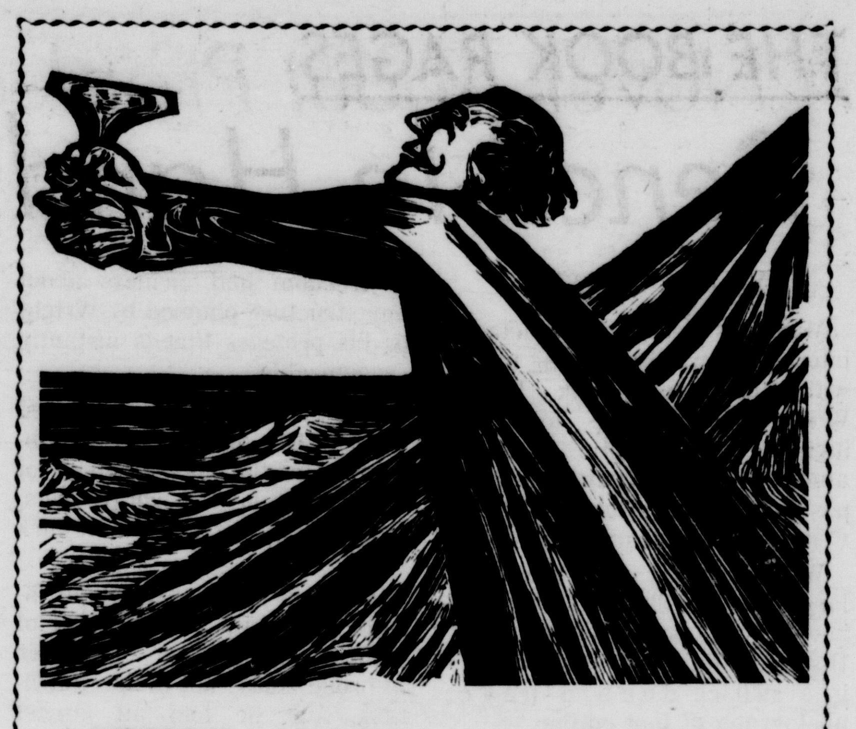
And now hosts of new people fill the stage: The militants, the "Martin Luther Kings," and the often two-edged white liberals who swarm into the South. There is the strategy and interaction, the bickering behind the lines of CORE, NAACP and SNCC (under different names). Swiftly we come to know the political set-ups, the leading personalities, black and white, of several backwater Southern communities.

Someone from another planet might believe the passionate accounts of children spat on, beset by police dogs, herded en masse into jail, are luridly overdone. But we know better. We saw it all, and no doubt will see more, right on our own television screens.

As it is manifestly impossible to overstate the jungle conditions of the South, as well as the insults and injustices Negroes are subject to in the rest of the country, Miss Fairbairn cannot be faulted for giving full rein to her emotions, and the melodrama soars.

The unabashed sentimentality of this strong call for justice is not to everyone's taste. But one must give full credit to the writer who is able to organize this colossus, with its myriad characters, its panorama of scenes and most of all the sizzling action of the last half of the book.

It is rare for a book to qualify as great popular entertainment and deliver a message at the same time. Miss Fairbairn has succeeded brilliantly and deserves the rich reward she will no doubt reap.



A WOODCUT entitled "Ode to Joy" by Ernst Barlach is among the illustrations included in "Barlach," art critic Alfred Werner's biography and pictorial study of the great German artist of the 20th Century.

A Fascinating Place And Time

THE ANCIENT WORLD by Giovanni Garbini, McGraw-Hill, 176 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Patricia Perry.

The geographical area we call the Ancient Middle East stretches from Egypt to Persia and south to the Arabian Peninsula, and it was in this area that the most ancient civilizations created by man were to develop.

Man's artistic creations produced during an immense time span, from the seventh millennium settlement of Jericho to the period of Greek supremacy in the 5th Century B. C., are covered in this book; it's broken into three sections, Mesopotamia with the fascinating Sumerian civilization, the peripheral areas, an immense arc of highlands stretching from Persia to Turkey and embracing Syria, Palestine and the Arabian Peninsula, and thirdly, Egypt, the civilization of the Nile Valley.

Now forget all your preconceptions about archeological finds being dry and dusty, about dull accounts of ruins and digs. This handsomely illustrated volume—102 of the 200 in full color —is a pleasure and a joy. If you have some Christmas gift money left over, rush right out and buy it. It's the kind of book you'll browse through for years, perhaps never finishing the text, but gloating over the statues and bronzes, the wall paintings and pottery, created by artists and craftsmen three, four, five, six thousand years ago.

And how fascinating and mysterious it is. Look at the ceiling painting with birds, butterflies and locusts painted in the tomb of Khonsu at Thebes in 1425 B.C.; the delicate wings in blues and browns look so much like a 19th Century Impressionist's work.

Look with wonder at the magnificent golden head of a bull decorating the front of a lyre unearthed from the royal cemetery at Ur, a creation of a metalworker who worked with love and skill in the period 2600 to 2400 B.C.

Garbini, professor at the Institute of Near Eastern Studies, University of Rome, has written the text in a highly readable style. Don't be misled, though, you won't plough through dynasties and the rise and fall of entire civilizations in an evening's browsing. Nor does Professor Garbini write down to the reader.

He cautions: "For us art involves aesthetic appreciation as well as a consideration of its social, political or religious functions."

This is the second in a McGraw-Hill series called "Landmarks of the World's Art." Other volumes will include "The Classical World," "Man and the Renaissance" and the "Age of Baroque." Let's hope they'll be as great a bargain as this.

A Primer About Painting For The Timid Beginner

THE PAINTING OF PICTURES by Arthur Zaidenberg, World, 140 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Artist and instructor Arthur Zaidenberg has aimed this book at the person who would like to paint but who is timid about beginning.

It is written at the most basic level, and is aimed at getting the novice involved and started along the right path.

Thus, it opens with a discussion of why pictures are painted, followed by a dissertation on the selection of materials and equipment. (Oils, says Zaidenberg, are the best medium for the beginner.)

Zaidenberg urges an experimental approach allowing the beginner to develop his own style. But he provides some loose guidelines for the experimentation, and supports his explanations with illustrations that are both his own drawings and the work of master painters—some of these color plates.

It could serve as a "review course" for the more experienced artist, as well as an elementary text for the novice.

Mankind And His Feathered Friends

BIRDS IN OUR LIVES edited by Alfred Stefferud and Arnold L. Nelson, Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, 561 pages, $9. Reviewed by Don Keown.

A study of the whole, wide relationship of birds to mankind and other life upon this earth is a major undertaking.

The Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, a U.S. Department of Interior agency, has tackled that ambitious project. With the help of numerous individuals concerned with and versed in wildlife resources, it has produced in "Birds in Our Lives," a large, well-written, generously-illustrated and comprehensive volume on the subject.

John S. Gottschalk, director of the publishing bureau, says the objective is "the broadening of the public's understanding of the importance of birdlife and of natural world to all of us." In his foreword, Secretary of Interior Stewart Udall describes the focus as the part played by birds "in the web of life."

Sixty-one different writers have contributed material upon topics in which they are recognized authorities. Included are some of the country's foremost ornithologists, representatives of other related sciences, spokesmen for conservation and field sports, educators, federal agency chiefs and consultants, etc. All worked under the editorship of Alfred Stefferud and Arnold L. Nelson.

Their scope includes a panoramic view of birdlife, a study of its relationship to literate and other facets of man's culture, their place in sports and recreation, their role in nature's general scheme, the part they have played in science, their husbandry, such controversial topics as pesticides, hunting, pollution and flyway intrusion, problems such as crop foraging and aircraft and utility dangers and damage, and discussion of what people are doing and should do to secure the future of the birds and their benefits.

"We, all of us, must be the responsible stewards of birds in our lives," says John S. Gottschalk in his piece.

It is a handsome book. While some may lament the absence of color illustrations, the 372 black and white photographs and 80 wash drawings that are included have been well chosen and superbly reproduced.

In Marin, Audubon stronghold that it is, the book should enjoy an especially warm reception. It is not, however, a book restricted to any one group, but should be of interest to everyone titillated by those winged creatures that are from any standpoint among the most marvelous of God's creations.

"Birds in Our Lives" is available for $9 from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington D.C., 20402.

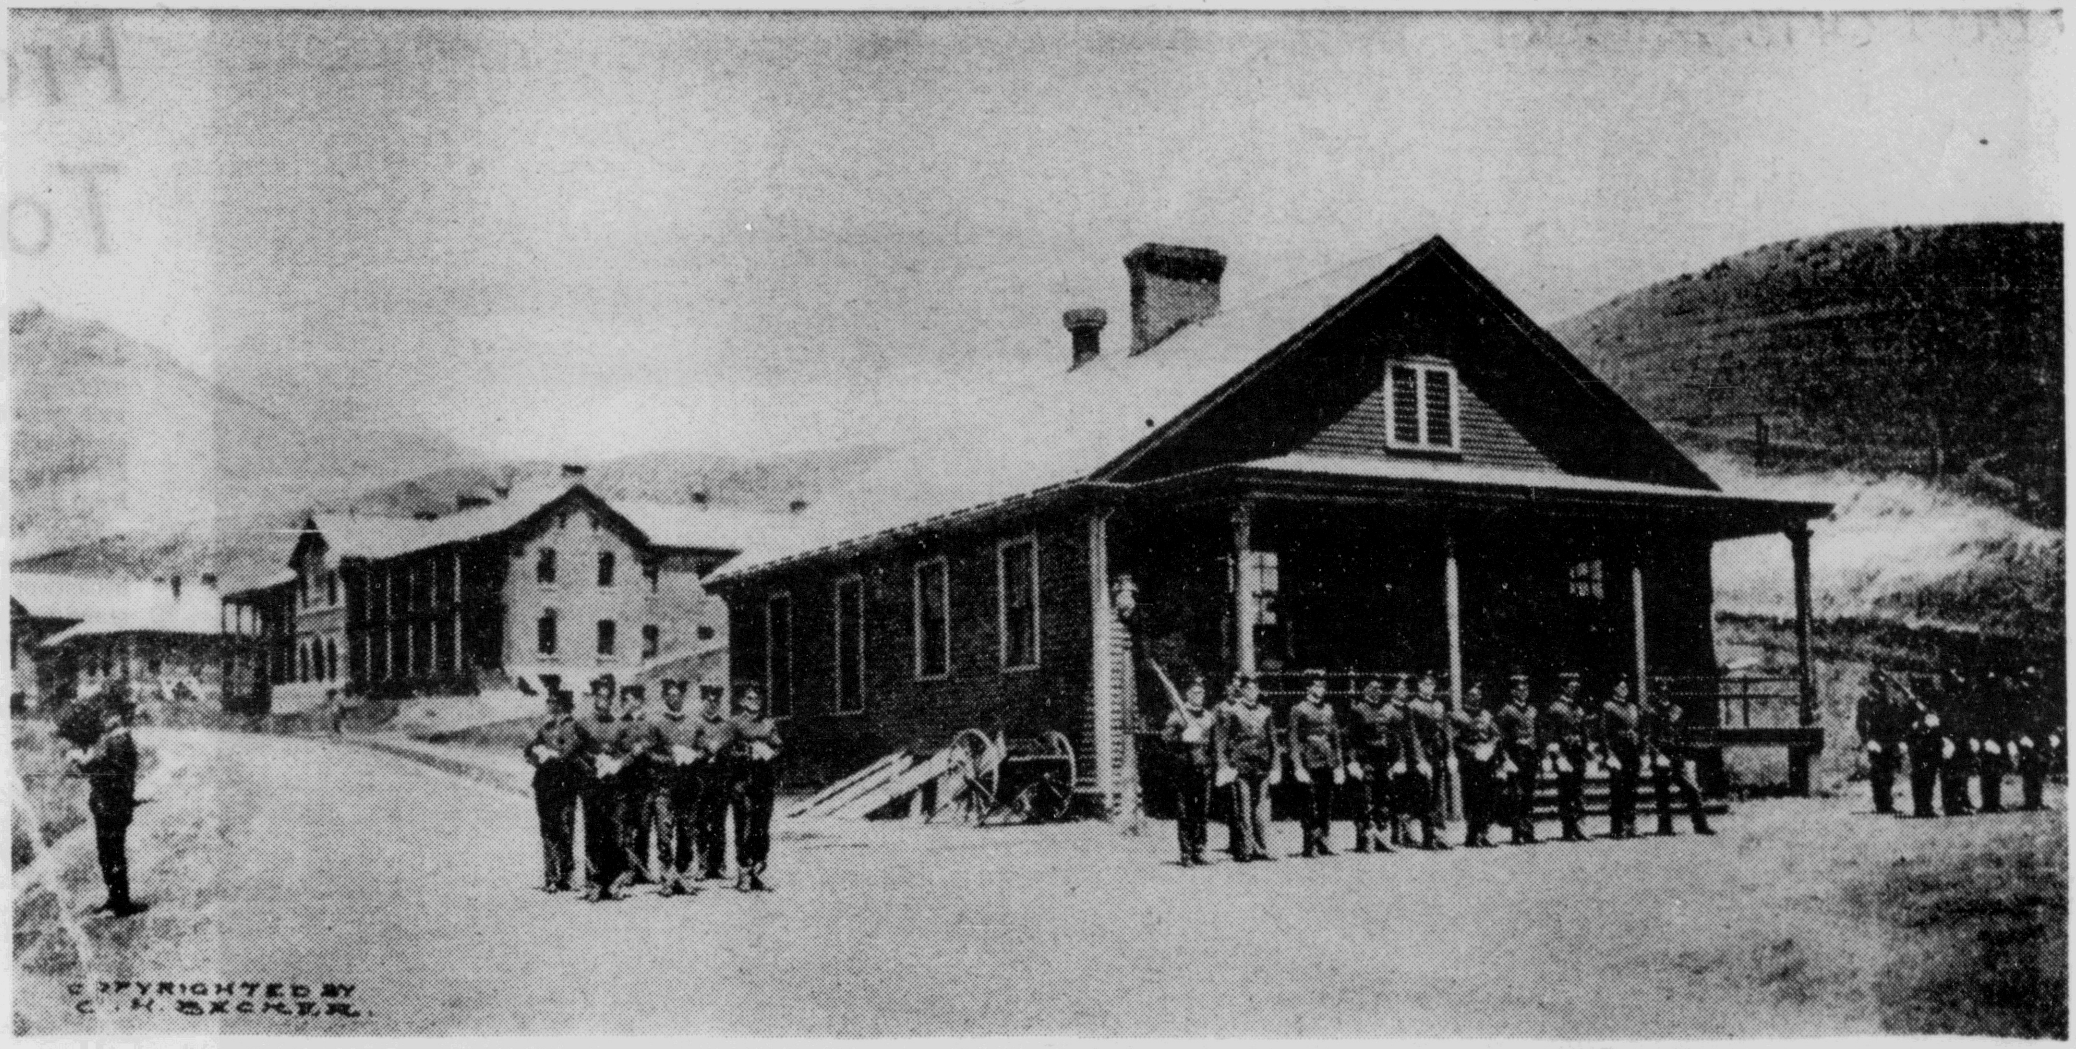
Biblical Story By Wibberley

THE CENTURION by Leonard Wibberley, William Morrow and Co., 251 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

Subtitled "A novel of the ministry and passion of Christ," the book treats the events of the Book of Matthew as current history of the time when the Romans ruled Judea.

The author of "Mouse on the Moon," and many other books, both fiction and non-fiction, former Independent-Journal editor Wibberley uses effectively a quiet, straightforward style to describe the drama of the coming of the Messiah proclaimed King of the Jews.

"The Centurion" of the title, the Roman Longinus, is the person through whom the story is told, and whose unhappy lot it is to carry out the crucifixion.



GUARD MOUNT and guardhouse at Fort Baker are shown as they appeared at the turn of the century. The guardhouse still stands today. And behind it can be seen the building that now houses Headquarters 6th Region, U.S. Army Air Defense Command. (U.S. Army photos)

during foggy weather.

Soon after it was built, a retired Army artillery sergeant, apparently looking for a soft berth, eagerly undertook the task of tending the station. He soon quit, however. Fog, he complained, kept him sleepless for days on end, firing his cannon every 30 minutes. Besides, he added, he got lonesome.

During the war years 1861 to 1865, most defensive structures at the Golden Gate were of a makeshift and emergency nature.

AT THE START of the Civil War, Fort Point was near completion, batteries were emplaced on Alcatraz and at several other sites in the Bay Area, but construction of the buildings, roads, breastworks and bunkers for Lime Point batteries did not begin until 1868. It was not until then that the long hassle over ownership ended and procurement of the tract effected.

The much disputed land was part of the original Richardson Rancho Saucelito Grant of 1828 and the conflict over its ownership reached the United States Congress where charges and counter-charges of graft and corruption were hurled about with great abandon but little immediate effect.

Until 1904, Forts Barry and Baker were units of the Lime Point Reservation. Final division of the tract came in 1937 when Fort Cronkhite was established at its northwestern limits. Today the forts are sub-posts of the Presidio of San Francisco.

FORTS BAKER, Barry and Cronkhite, with their vestiges of the past and modern installations standing side by side, not only present an intriguing comparison between the old and the new, they also offer a sort of stratified military archeology of coast artillery fortifications bv era.

When gun ranges were extremely limited, battery emplacements were sited well within the harbor entrance. Batteries Duncan and Cavallo, mentioned earlier, are examples. They represent the era between post Civil War days and the 1890s.

When wooden ships and smooth-bore cannon were succeeded by vessels of steel with more destructive armament, defensive coast artillery kept pace. This was during the intermediate era, about 1890 to World War I, when rifled guns increased in range to about 10 miles.

EMPLACEMENTS then stood at the very entrance of the Golden Gate.

The aforementioned 15-inch battery atop Lime Point Ridge represents this era. Traces of its brick emplacements still remain among the concrete breastworks of Battery Spencer. The latter, armed with two 12-inch barbette-mounted rifles, was finished in 1897 and remained until the early 1940s.

Battery Kirby is another example of intermediate armament. Begun in 1872 and improved in 1898, it employed two 12-inch disappearing rifles. Remnants of its breastworks and magazines can be seen at Kirby Beach, a small cove almost directly beneath the northern tower of the Golden Gate Bridge.

MANY OF THE artillery pieces emplaced in Marin prior to World War I were removed

ANOTHER VIEW OF Battery Duncan as it looks today shows how remnants of this eight-inch battery stand on a hillside just within the limits of Fort Baker and some two miles south of Sausalito. It is just one of many relics of past military eras to be found in Marin's shoreline forts.

A Novel About Problems Of Adolescence

THE LAST PICTURE SHOW by Larry McMurtry, Dial Press, 280 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Gary Tischler.

This is a growing up sexually novel.

That makes it almost too bad, because McMurtry, author of "Leaving Cheyenne" which was made into an excellent film, "Hud," has so many things going for him as a writer.

He can evoke an achingly real sense of place and atmosphere, in this case, the dreary, windswept landscapes surrounding a small Northern Texas town. The sense of desolation, of drying up, of being nowhere felt by the adolescents in the novel is a lingering one.

His style is straightforward, without literary blandishments. He goes for an emotional effect, but what he accomplishes is curiously half-baked.

The subject, after all is an old one: Young high school-age adolescents caught in the tug of war of leaving the things of youth behind, trying to become adults, desiring and wanting sex as a thing and an experience but afraid of its responsibilities.

McMurtry adds nothing new to the subject. His adolescents debate the subject, engage in it frequently, feel pangs and sweat over it.

The two principal problems are that he purports to say that these particular adolescents are representative of today's youth. They are no more representative than the town is.

Two of the main characters, Duane, the fullback on the perennially losing football team, and Jacy, the rich girl, have about as much depth as tissue paper.

They have an aimless poor boy - rich girl romance which comes down to a tedious will-she-or-won't-she battle. Neither really cares once it happens. Nor do they care very much about anything that happens to them.

McMurtry has more success with his older people and with one of the youngsters, Duane's best friend Sonny. The portrait of the he-man football coach, his withering wife and her affair with Sonny is sharply, beautifully drawn. And Sam, the proprietor of the town pool hall, is perhaps the most sympathetic character, an old man still young who sees his own youth reflected in the confused activities of his customers.

Anatomy, Nutrition Linked By Experts

YOUR BODY: Its Anatomy and Nutrition by Dr. S. William Kalb and Dr. Christian A. Hovde, C. S. Hammond & Co., 150 pages. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

This book is the result of the teamwork of a Seton Hall University professor of anatomy and a Newark, N.J., physician and nutritionist who at one time headed the American College of Nutrition.

It breaks down into two sections, the first dealing with the human anatomy, the second with nutrition and its relationship to the well-being of the body.

Included are the expected discussions of the special problems of the obese, the underweight, children, the aged, expectant mothers, etc.

"Your Body," however, has a number of unusual features.

Among these are the illustrations that include a full set of anatomical sketches by Ronald Keller in color, a glossary of medical terms, weight tables, menu planning advice and a separate booklet listing the caloric values of the more popular foods.

It is a concise book, quickly read and easily referred to in the future. Yet it seems to cover its subjects with unusual clarity.

Some Lessons For The New Emerging Countries Of Asia

THE PHILIPPINES: YESTERDAY AND TODAY by Delia and Ferdinand Kuhn, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 248 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

This work, one of a series on contemporary civilizations, is particularly timely in view of the Vietnam war and the emergence of Southeast Asian countries.

The authors admit that their work is an introductory rather than a comprehensive study, but it might well contain some lessons for other new countries in Southeast Asia which had been under foreign rule for many years.

The Philippines, first under the rule of Spain and then the United States, won its independence in 1949, only to find the changeover no easy task.

The blending together of political, economic, social and religious institutions and people of diverse ancestry while taking on the role of a new nation is not an easy path.

The Philippines, an Asian land long ruled by Westerners, can never be wholly Asian or wholly Western, the authors contend, but it can take the best from both worlds.

THESE TWO PHOTOGRAPHS depict the striking change that has taken place in the outer appearance of Fort Baker in the past 65 years. The picture at top was taken from a hilltop at the turn of the century. Coast artillery batteries were located at left center. during that conflict and shipped overseas. These included five-inch guns from Battery Wagner, eight-inch guns from Battery Duncan, and 12-inch mortars from Battery Alexander.

These pieces were the "late" intermediate era and their breastworks and magazines still stand today, cheek by jowl with sleek, modern Nike missile sites.

Fort Cronkhite is a prime example of the final period of American shore fortifications, an era spanning the years between the two World Wars. Gun ranges had jumped to 20 to 25 miles. Cronkhite's Battery Townsley with its two huge 16-inch Navy rifles was situated far outside the Golden Gate from where it could launch 2,250-pound projectiles well out to sea.

BUILT ENTIRELY of steel and concrete, Battery Townsley was regarded in 1940 as impregnable to land, sea and air attack. It was the first "modern" coast artillery battery on the continent completely underground and one of the earliest to use radars and computers.

Today some of Battery Townsley's bunkers are used for storage purposes by nearby Nike missile sites.

Armament at the Marin fortifications during World War II also included anti-motor torpedo boat batteries, or AMTBs. There were 40-millimeter guns at Point Bonita and 90mm AMTBs at Gravelley Beach, closer to the bridge, and pedestal-mounted three-inchers at Kirby Beach.

ALSO AT THIS time, Army mine layers were berthed at Fort Baker and barrage balloon hangars operated at Fort Barry.

The close of World War II saw the end of the proud and tradition-steeped Coast Artillery Corps.

The Ligurian Riviera

The Travel Page

The subject is roses.

Roses, carnations, oleanders and camellias, and for that matter almost every form of temporate zone and subtropical blossoming—all to be found in Italy's northern province of Liguria.

The Ligurian Riviera forms a taut bow, from Ventimiglia, which is virtually a stone's throw from Monte Carlo and Menton, to La Spezia, "the city of poets" at the end of the arc.

IN THIS region so favored by nature, the date palm mingles with the umbrella pine and flowers abound in such profusion as to create a flower market within the land of flowers.

The Italian Riviera owes its abundance of blossoms to a most happy situation and configuration of land.

High mountain ranges, the Maritime Alps and the Apennines, fringe its seacoast and shelter it from northerly winds at every quarter. The volcanic soil, moreover, is singularly adapted to rich vegetation and, what with soil and climate in combination, there are no barren spots in Liguria.

A BLUE SKY and a bluer sea, a warm sun and a warm people, have created an ideal winter and summer playground.

Actually there are two Ligurian Rivieras, the Riviera di Levante (East) and the Riviera di Ponente (West), with Genoa, the birthplace of Columbus, as the dividing line.

The Riviera di Levante is best known to Americans because of the familiar names of Portofino, Rapallo, Santa Margherita and La Spezia, where people from this country have long holidayed.

PORTOFINO gained fame, moreover, because the Duke and Duchess of Windsor honeymooned there; it was favored, too, by Clark Gable and other Hollywood stars who sought rest and relaxation from their Roman holidays.

To the West, San Remo is known internationally; it is luxurious and glittering, boasting an elegant casino, race tracks, fine ships, splendid villas, 280 hotels and an 18-hole golf course.

From Ventimiglia on, through San Remo to Genoa, elegant resorts are strung like pearls along the entire coast, almost abutting one upon the other. They are too numerous for detailed description, but Ventimiglia is a pleasant little town, ancient-modern, famed for its prehistoric caves, its 11th Century churches, Roman ruins, an excellent archeological museum, and, of course, flower markets.

BORDIGHERA is similarly known for its gardens and flower markets, and in general is a center for subtropical growths—it supplies the palm leaves for the Vatican observance of Palm Sunday. Ospedaletti is noted for its roses and carnations.

Spotorno has superior climate from April through October, and is much favored by sun-famished Germans, Austrians, Belgians, and even French tourists.

To stroll in its back country hills is to walk in a profusion of flowers, past Roman ruins, medieval churches and historic fortresses.

ALASSIO (favorite spot of artists and writers, including Ernest Hemingway) is nearby, and boasts a velvety sand beach where one can bathe from March to October, scuba-dive and sail to one's heart's content.

Lately Alassio, Spotorno and other neighboring seaside resorts have begun to draw American tourists in increasing number. A major attraction is the 18-hole, par 72, Garlenda golf course, newest and one of the best appointed in Italy; famed by green hills, it is irrigated by a huge artificial reservoir, so that the fairways are green in all seasons. The course was laid out in 1965 on land that formed part of the estate of the Marquis of Balestrino, whose ancient castle overlooks the fourth hole, and it is within a short drive of the seacoast.

Liguria shares with so many other regions of Italy the virtue that its holiday resorts are never more than a few hours away from some great center of art and culture, or metropolitan excitement. The center of course, is Genoa, bearing the same relation to the seaside resorts as Long Island, for example, does to New York City.

GENOA IS well worth an extended visit. It is an elegant and aristocratic city as well as a bustling seaport, and its Via Balbi is lined with palaces. It once rivaled Venice as the queen of the Mediterranean, and, in addition to the Great Navigator, Columbus, gave birth to the most famous fiddler of all times, Paganini, and to the great doge, Andrea Doria.

All in all, the Ligurian Riviera is one long sweep of holiday pleasure. Prices are surprisingly reasonable and the region has decided for the tourist season of 1967 to maintain the same rates that have been in effect since 1964.

GARLENDA ON the Ligurian Riviera boasts not only a modern 18-hole golf course, but, within those grounds, a medieval chapel, the Church of San Rocco di Gadlenda.

Sightseers Are Attracted By California's Man-Made Wonder

Higher than the Washington Monument with enough concrete to build a three-foot walkway around the world at the equator, California's own Shasta Dam on the Sacramento River never ceases to amaze the visiting tourist as it works hard to control the water from Shasta Lake.

When full, the 35-mile long Shasta Lake, formed by the Sacramento, McCloud and Pitt rivers, according to the National Automobile Club, contains enough water to cover the entire state of Connecticut to a depth of one-and-a-half feet.

SO MUCH water, in fact, that during its unharnessed days it caused millions of dollars' worth of damage.

Formerly flowing uncontrolled into the Pacific Ocean, this water mercilessly flooded valley farmlands, towns and cities, transforming these once productive areas into desolate wastelands. Now Shasta Dam harnesses this destructive force and stores part of it for irrigation during the dry season.

Not only useful but a wonder to see, this magnificently proportioned dam rises 602 feet above bedrock in the river canyon, making it the highest overflow-type dam in the world.

TO MAKE room for this, the second tallest and largest concrete structure in our country, 37 miles of Southern Pacific's main line railroad, which wound through the Sacramento River Canyon, were relocated in 1938, as were 21 miles of Highway 99.

Equally amazing proved the method of transporting and placing the enormous amounts of concrete. During the three-and-a half years of its actual construction, which began in 1939, over 12 million tons of sand and gravel passed over mountains and valleys on a conveyor belt that stretched along for 9.6 miles. On one day in August, 1941, the concreting plant worked efficiently enough to place 11,700,090 yards of concrete in designated spots.

Part of the 170-million dollar Central Valley Irrigation Project, Shasta Dam, completed in 1945, cost a total of 12 million dollars. In 1949, Shasta Power Plant went into full operation.

MUCH EXCITEMENT and astonishment filled the air when visitors to Shasta Dam spotted a waterfall three times higher than Niagara Falls. Five times since the dam's completion this miracle of nature appeared and five times people marveled at the beauty of it. Each time excess rainfall and snow blended to form the waterfall, rushing down the 500-foot spillway.

So far more than two-million visitors have viewed Shasta Dam, experiencing a feeling of pride in our very capable engineers, capable enough to build such a powerful control of ravaging natural forces.

Why not see for yourself the man-made wonder that is Shasta Dam?

ir power,

the importance of fixed coast defenses based on heavy guns waned. Mighty Battery Townsley's classic 16-inchers were fired for the last time in February, 1948, and a few months later the blowtorches and wreckers moved in to dismantle the last of the Golden Gate's harbor defense batteries.

TWO YEARS OF comparative quiet followed for Marin's forts and then with the Korean War a different type of armament appeared—90mm and 120mm anti-aircraft batteries.

Although improved they were of fast-fading World War II vintage and were short-lived. Their phasing out started in 1954 and a new era arrived, the era of the air defense guided missile.

Just as coast artillery armament had kept pace with the increased capabilities of sea-launched attacks, so did air defense keep abreast of the mounting potency of aircraft.

THE DEVELOPMENT of high-speed aircraft during the closing months of World War II resulted in the creation of a new system of Army air defense a decade later. This was Nike, an electronic system in which a supersonic missile is controlled ad guided from take-off to target by ground based equipment. It was named for the Greek goddess of victory.

The 1953 advent of the first of the Nike family, the Nike Ajax, meant far more than just a difference in "hardware." It marked a sweeping change in the very basic concept of air defense weapon deployment.

What occurred was that Army air defense weapons suddenly broke away from the concept of fixed or limited defense of the immediate area to an entirely new and "flexible" defense by missiles deployed near the defended area but capable of destroying targets at long range—before enemy aircraft reached a bomb-released line.

INITIALLY, Nike Ajax sites in Marin, and at other locations defending the Bay Area, were temporary, above-ground emplacements.

The first such site became operational at Fort Cronkhite on June 1, 1954. Soon after, another temporary Ajax battery was activated at Fort Barry.

By the summer of 1955, permanent sites with underground missile storage pits, elevators and other refinements were completed at both Marin forts.

FORT BARRY, which as late as 1943 still had two 12-inch disappearing cannon emplacement at Battery Mendell, scored a "first" in the history of local air defense. The first Nike Hercules battery to protect the Bay Area became operational there on Jan. 15, 1959. Hercules, the second generation Nike missile, possesses a greater destructive and performance capability than its predecessor, the Nike Ajax

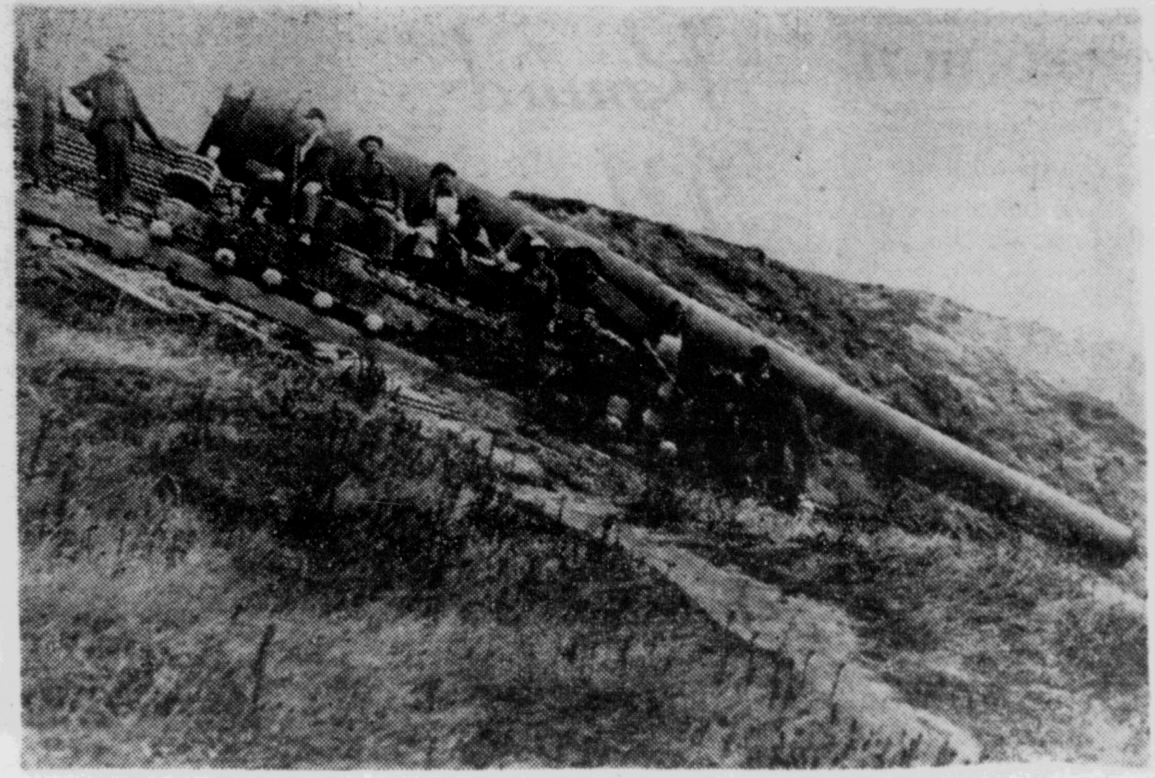
The next Marin County Hercules unit was San Rafael's, operational two months after the Barry site. Fort Cronkhite's Ajax went to Hercules on Sept. 29, 1959.

Today Marin County's old Lime Point Military Reservation is one of more than 30 complexes in the United States armed with Nike Hercules missiles.

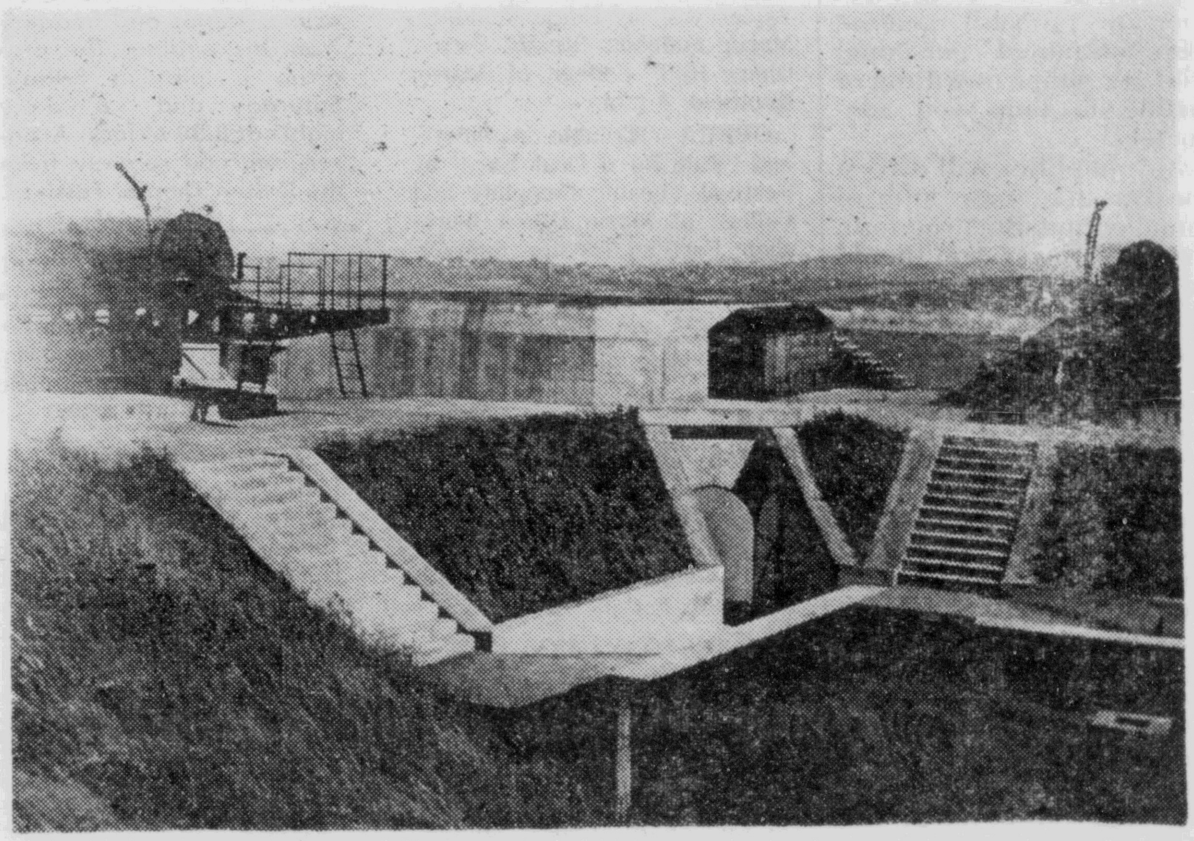
THE NIKE Hercules will range more than 75 miles.

Hercules not only has a conventional warhead, but can utilize a nuclear warhead to wipe out entire flights of aircrafts. It can destroy any known aircraft and any aerodynamically supported missile. It can intercept any known type of aircraft at altitudes below 1,000 feet or up to and beyond 150,000 feet, more than 28 miles high.

Nike Hercules missiles are a far cry indeed from the primitive cannon that protected the Golden Gate some 100 years ago.



THIS 50-TON ordnance piece was being dragged uphill in 1904 for emplacement by civilian contractors at Fort Barry's Battery Mendell. The gun barrel had been brought from San Francisco by a barge that landed at Point Bonita.



IN THE EARLY 1900s, near where the north tower of the Golden Gate Bridge stands today, the breastworks and 12-inch guns of Battery Spencer at Lime Point Bluff, Fort Baker, stood guard against enemy attack.

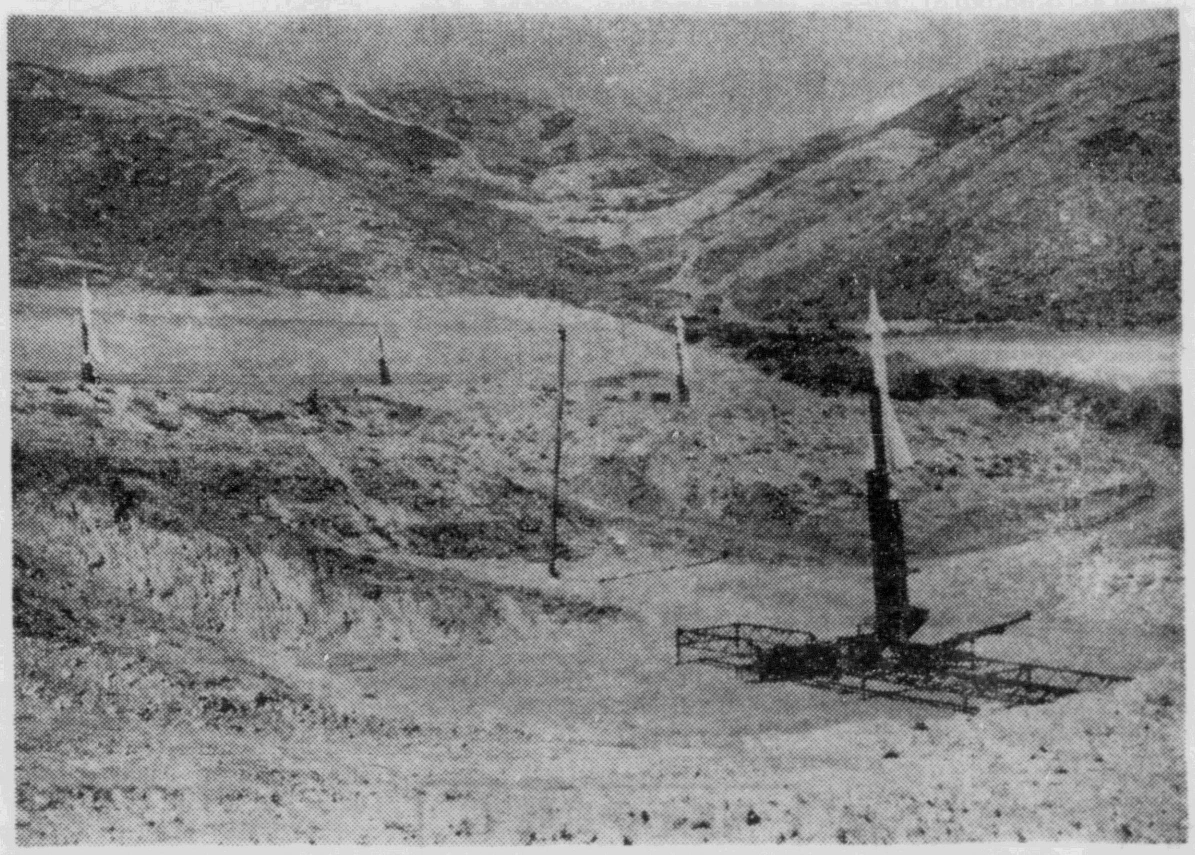
artillery installations built in 1905 — Batteries O'Rorke, Smith-Guthrie and Alexander.



TEMPORARY SITES for the first members of the Nike family of Army air defense missiles, the Nike Ajax, became operational at Forts Barry and Cronkhite in 1954. By the summer of 1955, these had given way to permanent sites with underground missile pits, elevators and other refinements.

The Versatile Viburnum

Gardening Page

If variety is the spice of life, gardeners can find it in the viburnum family.

This versatile group of shrubs, both evergreen and deciduous, offers a dozen or more garden forms and the Marinite who doesn't try at least one or two of them is missing out.

All the viburnums are showy and a good percentage of them produce intensely fragrant flowers. These latter are apt to be in bloom any time from late fall to late spring, depending on variety. And when they are, your garden can be a very nice place, indeed.

THE PERFUME of the fragrant viburnums is a beautiful thing in itself and worth planting for its own sake.

There is a native American viburnum, but the varieties of interest to Californians come either from Asia or Europe. They are not particular about soil, though a loamy, well drained soil, is usually recommended. Drainage is more important than the type of soil you have—drainage and water.

Viburnums don't need as much water as camellias and azaleas, but they should not be left without it during our long, dry summers.

ONE OF THE nicest viburnums to meet for the first time is the evergreen, Sweet Viburnum.

As the name suggests, its white flowers are fragrant. They are carried in late spring, to be followed in summer by clusters of red fruit that later turns black. The foliage is dark green and has a leathery quality which makes a high, wide and handsome background for the garden setting.

Another fine evergreen member of the family is the Leather Leaf Viburnum.

IT IS NOT as tall as the Sweet Viburnum, but still a handsome shrub for borders and backgrounds. Its white blooms are earlier than the above, coming in April and May and are only slightly less fragrant. The fruit clusters turn black faster than do those of the Sweet Viburnum, also.

Leather Leaf Viburnum derives its name from the leathery, wrinkled leaves, which are deep green on top and light- colored and felt-like on the underside.

One of the all-time favorite viburnums is the Laurestinus Viburnum, a medium to large shrub with shiny, deep green foliage and flat heads of pinkish-white flowers in winter. A smaller, more compact form of Laurestinus has recently been introduced and should be even more popular than the parent.

AMONG DECIDUOUS viburnums the Burkwood Viburnum is probably the the most widely grown in California.

Along the coast, this is almost an evergreen, holding some of its handsome, dark green leaves through the winter and shedding the rest for only the shortest time. Flowers are pinkish-white and fragrant, filling the garden with their sweetness in late winter.

The second most popular of deciduous viburnums is the Carlesi Viburnum, also called Korean Allspice.

This is a shrub of considerable refinement, three or four feet high and spreading somewhat more than that. Its deep green foliage turns to shades of red in fall, giving one even more reason for planting it—as if the intensely fragrant spring blooms weren't reason enough.

SO MUCH FOR the fragrant viburnums. There are also members of the family which have no fragrance, and of them, two, at least, deserve special mention. Both are commonly called "Snowballs" and both are deciduous.

First of these is the Common Snowball or Eastern Snowball, a medium to large shrub producing literally masses of round, white blooms. The foliage of this one turns to crimson in fall, one of our best fall-color producers.

The second Snowball is the Japanese Snowball, also with round clusters of white blooms, though there are slightly tinted with green.

Both Snowballs are highly recommended and deserve a place in your garden.

BOTANICAL NOTE: The Sweet Viburnum is offered as Virbunum odoratissimum; Leather Leaf Viburnum is Viburnum rhytidophyllum; Laurestinus is Viburnum tinus; Burkwood Viburnum is Viburnum Burkwoodii; Carlesi Viburnum is Viburnum carlesi; Eastern Snowball is Viburnum apulis sterile; Japanese Snowball is Viburnum tomentosum sterile.

Let's Plant A Rose—And Let's Do It Right

During the next few weeks, while the dormant planting season is in full swing, many will be planting a rose for the first time.

If you are one of the many, a word of advice from the California Assn. of Nurserymen might come in handy at this time.

THERE IS A natural reticence which all of us have to overcome when trying something new and the feeling is not reduced when you encounter your first dormant rose.

"That's a rose?" you ask, as your nurseryman offers up what looks like a loose bundle of sticks. You wonder how such a device can grow into the most beautiful of all flowering shrubs.

What your nurseryman sells you is a rose bush with the top cut back and the bareroots dangling. It doesn't look like much, but if you take reasonable care in planting it, your rewards will be plenty.

FIRST, BETWEEN purchase and planting your rose should be kept moist—or at least the roots should. Immediate planting is preferred, but if there's to be a delay, simply bury the roots in a convenient place in moist soil.

Remember that roses like sun—at least half a day's sun and preferably more. Choose any well-drained garden bed that meets the sun requirements and dig holes that are 18 inches to two feet deep by about 18 inches in diameter.

The soil at planting time should be workable—that is, not too wet. Mound some of it in the center of the hole, forming a cone of loose soil so that when the bare roots of the rose are spread out over it, the rose will be at the proper planting level.

PROPER LEVEL is arrived at by locating the bud union (ask your nurseryman to show you this) just above final soil level.

Before setting the rose in, trim off broken roots, if there are any, back to sound wood. Then, holding the rose with one hand, gradually fill in around the roots, firming the soil to eliminate any air pockets. When you've filled and firmed, water thoroughly and your rose is planted.

Do not fertilize until after the plant starts to grow.

To Prevent Damage To Your Tree

By checking your shade trees for weak branch crotches, you may be able to prevent mutilation or destruction of a valuable tree.

Most tree branches develop and grow more or less horizontally from the trunk with a upward sweep as they increase in length. Normally the angle between the branch and the trunk is wide, and the crotch is shaped somewhat like the letter U. These branch crotches are strong and rarely split even in severe storms.

In contrast, sometimes branches grow upright from the point of development, almost parallel with the central stem and often compete with it for leadership. The angle at the crotch of the branch and main stem is narrow and the crotch is V-shaped.

Such crotches are weak and are likely to split during storms.

Recommendations of the National Arborist Assn. are that V-shaped branch crotches be strengthened artificially. This may be done by installing one or more sections of tree screw-rod at the crotch and placing a system of supporting cables in the upper part of the tree's crown. A competent arborist should be employed to do this work.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Plant shade trees now while bareroot stock is available. Your nurseryman will recommend a variety.

✓ For gardens that need redesigning, January and February are good months to transplant shrubbery and to plant new varieties.

✓ Spray peach trees and nectarines with a dormant spray to prevent leaf curl. See your nurseryman for the proper spray material.

✓ Many hardy perennials such as Shasta daisies, phlox and perennial asters may be divided now.

✓ Gladiolas are available for planting or soon will be in most areas. Dust the corms with an insecticide before planting to avoid later trouble from thrips. For the biggest and best blooms, plant top grade bulbs.

It bears repeating. Long after the sweetness of the discount purchase has wilted away, the bitterness of the poor service and wrong choice of components remains. Ponder these words! Remember, that the purchase of a home music system is a purchase intended to give many years of relaxation and enjoyment. Remember also that the average music lover is not a radio technician or engineer, and is not expected to speak in technical terms of Db's, tracking angles, compliance or flat response, when all he really wants is to hear music without distortion. This is where the job of a trained sound specialist is most important. In a discount store you are probably dealing with untrained personnel who are either unwilling or unable to help you adequately.

Any amplifier will drive a speaker into some form of sound output. But to perform correctly, the system should be well balanced, as would be one outlined by an experienced audio specialist. In a quality Hi-Fi store, the specialist will demonstrate various balanced possibilities. The listener will have the opportunity to compare these systems with laboratory standards. The goal is to provide the consumer with the best balanced component music system for his budget. Further, before delivery to the customer's home the system is assembled, bench tested with laboratory standard equipment and adjusted to meet the manufacturer's specifications; thus, assuring maximum performance of each unit. Should the need for service occur after installation, the customer can either have a technician come to his home, or bring the unit to the store that sold it for prompt service.

A discount house as a rule does not have service facilities, so you have to take the component to a factory service agency (generally an independently owned repair shop under contract with many manufacturers to repair their units for $3.00 or $4.00 regardless of the problem and usually crowded with repairs.) Often times the cost difference between a purchase from a quality Hi-Fi Stereo store and a discount store is used up in trying to obtain satisfactory performance. Can you honestly afford the gamble, or would you rather know that what you have chosen is the best for you?

GULL

Svelte vulture—

Like a careless pinwheel
Wheeling, feeling, sea-spent,
He floats down, cloud-sent—
To light, haughty-eyed, upon my orange peel.

God kissing carrion, from celestial doors,
Loosed by Diana from Olympian dells,
He preys on garbage, picks at rotting horseshoe shells—
Then squawks, flaps, slaps water, skims, and soars

To realms azure.

MORNING

Dawn curtains my window.
Outside, the disembodied caw caw caw
of a crow
bludgeons the stillness.
Now in the cities
the slow traffic rumble quickens
and soon faceless people
everywhere
will arise from rumpled sheets
and put on clothing
                    and masks.
And most important will be the masks
for without these they cannot face
the world
          or themselves.
I, too, must arise and
                    adjust my mask.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

On the Vanguard labels:

BOYCE: Eight Symphonies—Isolisti di Zagreb/Antonio Janigro conducting—Bach Guild Stereo BGS-70668:

Boyce has been called England's most talented composer in the period between Purcell and Elgar.

His music is forthright, energetic and quite original. In fact, few of these symphonies sound like music of the middle 1700s—they seem of a later period.

The stereodisc effectively replaces the previously fine mono set on Westminster directed by Karl Haas.

VAUGHAN WILLIAMS: A London Symyphony (No. 2) — Halle Orchestra/Sir John Barbirolli — Vanguard Everyman Stereo SRV-134SD:

This bargain sub-label of Vanguard has had one of the most consistently excellent series of releases in the concert music field.

This is probably the Vaughan Williams to own, and certainly this particular version is the one to own. This sound-picture of the captial in all its various moods is one of the most evocative things the English composer has written. It almost justifies the label sometimes attached to Vaughan Williams of an impressionist composer.

Fine Stereo.

PURCELL: The Fantasias for three to seven viols (complete) — The Concentus Musicus, Vienna/Nikolaus Harnoncourt — Bach Guild Stereo BGS-70676:

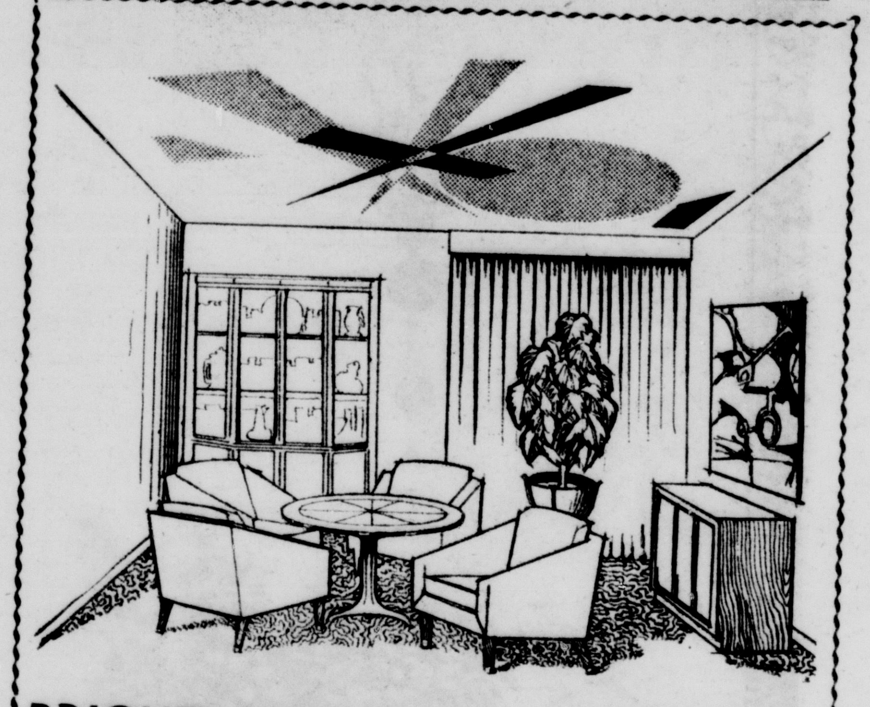
This English music is quite a world apart from Vaughan Williams.

An early scholarly exercise by Purcell, these fantasias have been compared to Bach's "Art of Fugue." This writer finds both works equally difficult to sit through, but early music buffs will appreciate the careful playing of the Viennese group on its viols and the good stereophonics.

HONEGGER: JUDITH — Netania Davrath/Blanche Christ-Lake City Symphonic Choir/Utah Abravanel — Vanguard Stereo VSD-71139:

First complete discing of this Biblical music drama, whose form is similar to the composer's earlier "King David." Netania Davrath is a perfect Judith, and Mrs. Milhaud provides a clear narration.

Abravanel merits thanks for the wonderful performances coming out of Salt Lake City lately.



BRIGHT IDEAS

Abstracts On The Ceiling Enliven The Living Room

By JOE JONES

It's not as crazy as you think!

For many years the Impressionists, the Abstraconists, the Nonobjectives ainted and starved — objects of derision and scorn. And although people laughed (and some still do), these painters had a great influence on design in America.

It has been felt in many fields—textiles, advertising, industrial design and architecture.

If you live in a "modern" home or apartment, you, too, can lean on these men to enhance your interiors with paint. You can be a Kandinsky or a Mondrian.

With a little planning, a roller, masking tape and non-drip paint, you can make your living room a modern work of art.

The ceiling is the center of interest in this case. Forget the walls—paint them a neutral gray or white. Go to a print shop and buy a Mondrian or Kandinsky print and this is your inspiration. Simplify it and paint it on your ceiling. Or better still, create your own abstract design and you'll be even more proud of yourself.

Use bright, clean colors and you'll be amazed at the dramatic effects you will achieve.

Plan carefully what you are doing beforehand. With a ruler and pencil lay out the areas to be painted and mark them for color. Mask carefully. Paint carefully.

You will have a work of art all your own.

When You Decorate, Why Not Be Different?

What better place to be different than in your own home?

Feel like painting one wall a different color than the others? Go ahead and do it.

Feel like mixing traditional with contemporary furniture? Go ahead and do it.

Feel like arranging the paintings on your wall in a careless fashion rather than an orderly arrangement? Go ahead and do it.

IF ANY OR all of these things satisfies you, never mind whether you think it's correct. Because decorating standards, once unreasonibly rigid, are flexible enough to permit almost anything you want these days.

There is a growing recognition that it is far more important to satisfy the desires of the occupants of a home than to meet set requirements, which change over the years anyhow.

There was a time when you would have been thought something of a "kook" if you had painted one wall of your living room a different color than the others. Not now. It's an accepted way of creating a pleasing effect.

BUT ACCEPTED or not, you should try it—or almost anything else—if you feel so inclined.

If you can't find the courage to put a vibrant color on one wall of an otherwise sedate living room, experiment with one of the other rooms—the kitchen, the family room, one of the bedrooms, even the bathroom.

What's the worst that can happen? You won't like it? Nobody can stop you from repainting it, either another color or the original color.

STILL ANOTHER way to get a single different wall is to use a different type of material.

A paneled wall, using random-width wood panels or plywood or plastic-surfaced hardboard, can dress up a room whose three other walls are painted plaster or wallboard. A wall of laminated plastic, the kind you ordinarily find on coffee tables and other furniture, creates an individual and pleasant effect.

We have even seen a single wall of a recreation room finished with ordinary resilient floor tiles.

ANOTHER SUCH room had three walls of birch-faced plywood sheets and one wall of striated plywood squares. The latter were stained a dark color to lend a remarkably effective contrast to the light tone of the birch.

The next time you decide to redecorate or refinish a room, spend a little time visiting your local lumber yard or buillding supply material. Look over the wide variety of materials now available and, if one of them strikes your fancy, consider using it on a single wall. It's one way to start you thinking in the right direction.

Sure, it may cost you a little extra money. Know anything good that doesn't?

IF PROPERLY DONE

Yes, Lacquer Can Be Brushed On

Prediction:

The following information about the application of lacquer with a brush will bring some disagreement from professional wood finishers who believe that lacquer can be applied properly only with a sprayer.

It happens every time.

THIS IS THE advance reply:

A good lacquer finish can be obtained with a brush if a "brushing" lacquer is used: if it is thinned at least 50 per cent with lacquer thinner; if it is applied with broad strokes; if no attempt is made to go over the same area twice; if several thin coats rather than one or two thick coats are put on; and if a little practicing is done first on scrap wood until the knack is acquired.

Each of those points is important. But none is more important than the advice not to go over the same area twice. That's because lacquer dries so quickly.

IN FACT, the drying begins the moment the lacquer is applied. Thus, you can not go back and brush out a section you thought did not come out exactly right — even if you do it within a few seconds after the application. Try it and you'll get a botched-up result, caused by the action of the new lacquer on the coat that so quickly has begun to set.

To avoid trouble, brush quickly and surely, with no attempt to return to any area. The next coat will take care of a tiny spot you may have missed, because each application sinks into the previous one rather than resting on it.

A very light sanding between coats is our recommendation, although there is one school of thought (in wood finishing, there is always more than one school of thought) which believes that only the last coat of lacquer should be sanded.

THE FAST-DRYING qualities which make the above precautions necessary have their good points. Lacquer does not pick up dust as much as does varnish, for instance. Also, several coats can be applied in a single day.

While on the subject of lacquer and varnish, the latter can be applied over the former, but the former can not be applied over the latter.

Never mind trying to figure that out. It merely means that you can apply varnish over lacquer, but you can not apply lacquer over varnish.

THE THINNER used in lacquer has a tendency to lift the varnish, much in the same manner as varnish remover.

Because lacquer is volatile as well as noxious, it should be applied only in an area where there is plenty of ventilation and no open flame.

Handsome Panel

Handsome way to handle a pass-through between kitchen and dining room is to panel the wall in a finely grained softwood, then make a matching pull-down door to close off the opening when not in use. Door should fit exactly into paneling so joints don't show, push up inside wall when pass-through is needed.

When A Louver Door Is Needed

Certain rooms seem to call for connecting doors. For example, the bedroom and dressing room, and the kitchen and dining area.

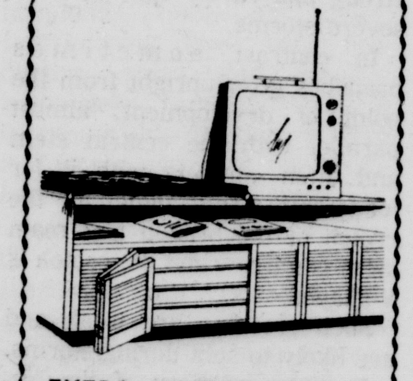
Pretty, practical louver doors are often the answer.

As connecting doors, louvers have two special assets: a slim, classic look that makes them equally appropriate for contemporary or traditional decor—such as a modern kitchen on one side and a formal dining room on the other; and a slat design that offers both privacy and a sense of "openness." This maintains the separateness of the rooms while tying them together.

Modern louver doors of ponderosa pine are available in stock sizes and in several styles. There are full louvers and partial louvers—those which have louvers in the top half and a closed wood panel on the bottom.

A popular type of connecting unit is the folding louver door. These fold back against themselves when opened, and require practically no floor clearance. They are used in areas which cannot easily accommodate the swing of a regulation door.

Louvers are also used as closet and wardrobe doors. The free flow of air between the louvers helps keep clothes fresh and protects them from mildew.



EXTRA seating, shelves for magazines and big books, enclosed space for table leaves and pads are all built into this stand for the portable TV. Unit is just a box and can be made of pine with inexpensive louvered shutters for doors along base.

Pencil In Hands Of The Infinite

By DON KEOWN

FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT: His Life, His Work, His Words, by Olgivanna Lloyd Wright, Horizon Press, 224 pages, $7.50.

Marinites feel a proprietary interest in anything having to do with the late Frank Lloyd Wright because he left his highly individualistic mark among us in the form of the imposing Marin County Civic Center administration building.

We note with pride that the largest single illustration in the new book "Frank Lloyd Wright: His Life, His Work, His Words" is a striking double-page photograph of that edifice.

The book is by Wright's widow and colleague Olgivanna Lloyd Wright. Her emphasis is less upon her late husband's life or biography than it is upon his work and thinking.

For the most part, she chooses to let him speak for himself. With full access to his papers, she produces long and frequent quotations in which Wright discoursed not only upon architecture but upon the arts and living generally.

Wright saw himself as "a pencil in the hands of the Infinite." His "organic architecture," as he called it, represented a move toward freedom. It rejected the basic box-like form that had so long shackled American building design, and it capitalized upon the cantilever principle made possible by steel to an unprecedented extent.

It was, in Wright's view, "the architecture of democracy." He was out to liberate us from "the sense of enclosure." The remarkable collection of illustrations assembled for the book, both photos and drawings, demonstrate just how remarkably well he succeeded. There is a characteristic feeling of freedom and airiness about any structure planned by Wright or his proteges that is instantly recognizable.

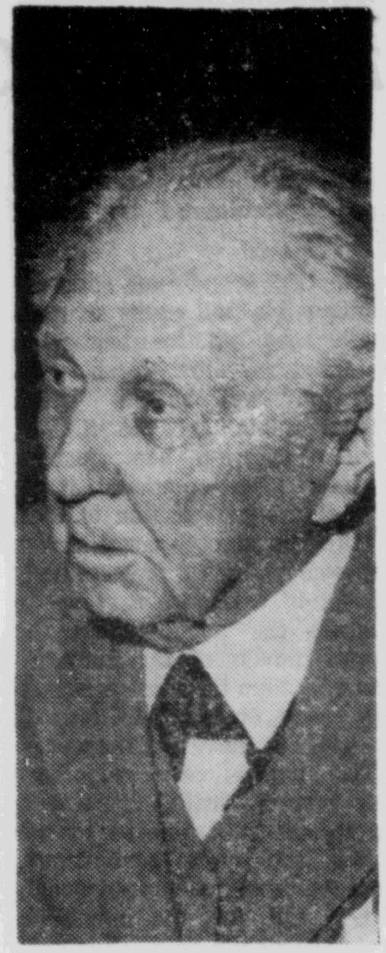
The reader receives detailed descriptions of the Wright processes in the development of some of his best-known projects, particularly the early hallmark ones.

There is also considerable insight into Wright as a teacher of young people. He was a believer in broad study, not in specialization. And he had an almost astonishing ability to reach, challenge and inspire the young.

If Mrs. Wright tells us very little about Wright's biography — principally she dwells on his Welsh roots and their lifelong influence —, there are other books to fill that void. And she does reveal a great deal about his personality. As his wife, she was, naturally, an unstinting admirer of the man. Thus there is a propensity to overlook or rationalize the tendency toward conceit and arrogance sometimes reflected in his own words. But there is little doubt that in anyone's eyes, Frank Lloyd Wright was an extraordinary human being as well as working genius. His interests were vast, and he subscribed wholeheartedly to the theory that "beauty is the highest form of morality."

At the back of the book there is a table of chronology of events in Wright's life, and his own listing of his principal architectural innovations.

To understanding of how and why this man created such a lasting and revolutionary impact upon American architecture, the book makes an impressive contribution.



FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT

NO ROOM IN THE ARK by Alan Moorehead, abridged edition, Harper & Row, 166 pages, $3.95.

HARPER & ROW has published a new abridged edition of journalist-author Alan Moorehead's excellent "No Room in the Ark."

The book remains as fresh and engrossing a picture of African wildlife today as it was when it was first published in the late 1950s. The abridgement, by Moorehead's wife, retains most of the value and flavor of the full text and allows for quicker reading, although few would regret the time invested in the original, longer version.

Moorehead has a great gift for observing, and then transfering these observations to written description.

Visiting Africa's last great game preserves, he viewed and recorded the habits of the dwindling herds with an absence of cloying sentimentality, but with a probing curiosity that makes for an enthralling experience for his reader who finds himself almost literally accompanying Moorehead into the wilds and bush.

At close range you witness the day-to-day life of the lion, the leopard, the elephant, the giraffe, the crocodile and lesser but equally fascinating wildlife. For Moorehead, the single most exciting experience of his African tours came in the rare sighting of a gorilla, and that makes for an especially brilliant chapter.

Moorehead can paint for his readers, too, an equally compelling portrait of the people and the geography of Africa.

He is no romanticist, and always honest. Of the pygmy: ". . . if you've seen one, you've seen them all."

Seldom does he sermonize on the need for conservation. But his reporting makes this unnecessary. It points out dramatically the stake that mankind has in the reversal of past tends toward the eradication of other living things.

He does tell us that it is too late to save the 90 per cent of Africa's one-time animal population that has been exterminated forever. But he foresaw, as of the time he was writing the book, some hope for the remaining 10 per cent. "It may even be," he wrote, "that the human instinct to kill all the other living things on earth will wear itself out at last."

Unfortunately, further progress in that respect, since Moorehead voiced his qualified optimism, has been little if not nil.

There's a small portfolio of truly remarkable animal photographs in the book.

Those who do not own the book in its original edition would do well to avail themselves of the opportunity presented by this new version. It is a rare and altogether enjoyable reading experience, intended primarily for young readers but well-suited to all ages.

DANDY FOR television fans who dote on old and not-so-old movies, but who like to be a bit selective in the ones they view, is the new $1 Bantam Books paperback "TV Key Movie Guide" edited by Steven H. Scheuer.

It lists in alphabetical order more than 6,900 films that have been sold to television, along with their stars, the plots, the year of filming and their national origins. There is even a rating system, based on from one to four stars.

Many newspapers make use of the "TV Key" reports on their television pages.

"THE SECRETS of San Domenico," the excellent and attractive looseleaf cookbook put out by San Domenico School for Girls, was a quick sellout at that institution's annual charity bazaar.

Now more copies have been printed, and are available through the San Domenico Book Store at $3 a copy.

The Service League, a group of 30 school mothers, compiled the book. They wheedled from parents, students, nuns and friends of San Domenico some 500 treasured recipes, many of them in the "family secret" category. The result is an unusually well balanced presentation of dishes of the kind that not only sound good but also lend themselves to practical preparation.

"THE FAMILY Circus," one of the most popular of the comic cartoons appearing regularly in the Independent - Journal, is available now in book form from the Judson Press, Valley Forge, Pa. "Sunday with the Family Circus" contains 91 of Bil Keane's best drawings. The price is $1.

FAWCETT has published in its Premier Masterwork paperback series Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist" with introduction by Steven Marcus (95 cents).

A SECOND edition of "Northwestern Pacific Railroad," the fast-selling illustrated history by Fred A. Stindt and Guy L. Dunscomb, has been published and is selling for $12.50. The book has been expanded with an additional 16 pages, 29 more historical photographs and an added chapter on the disastrous 1964 Eel River flood.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE CREEPING HOURS by Hugh Pentecost, Dodd, Mead & Co., 217 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Donald G. Davis.

That flame-bearded artist John Jericho reluctantly leaves his studio again to help solve a puzzle of death and intrigue.

The reason: the brilliant young artist Tommy Nolan, who everyone says has been speaking for the younger generation, is dead — and it isn't suicide as the police believe, but murder.

Nolan's paintings were to be used as a backdrop for a big television show starring the singer Zelda Rankin, who daily must fight her way past hordes of admirers. At night, she, her kookie husband and kookier lover and assorted others play, drink, and sing.

The use of Nolan's pictures was subject of a fight at one of those parties. Then Nolan dies, Jericho wants to know why.

This is Hugh Pentecost as his best. He brings New York and the behind-scenes television world alive with a lively story of intrigue and murder.

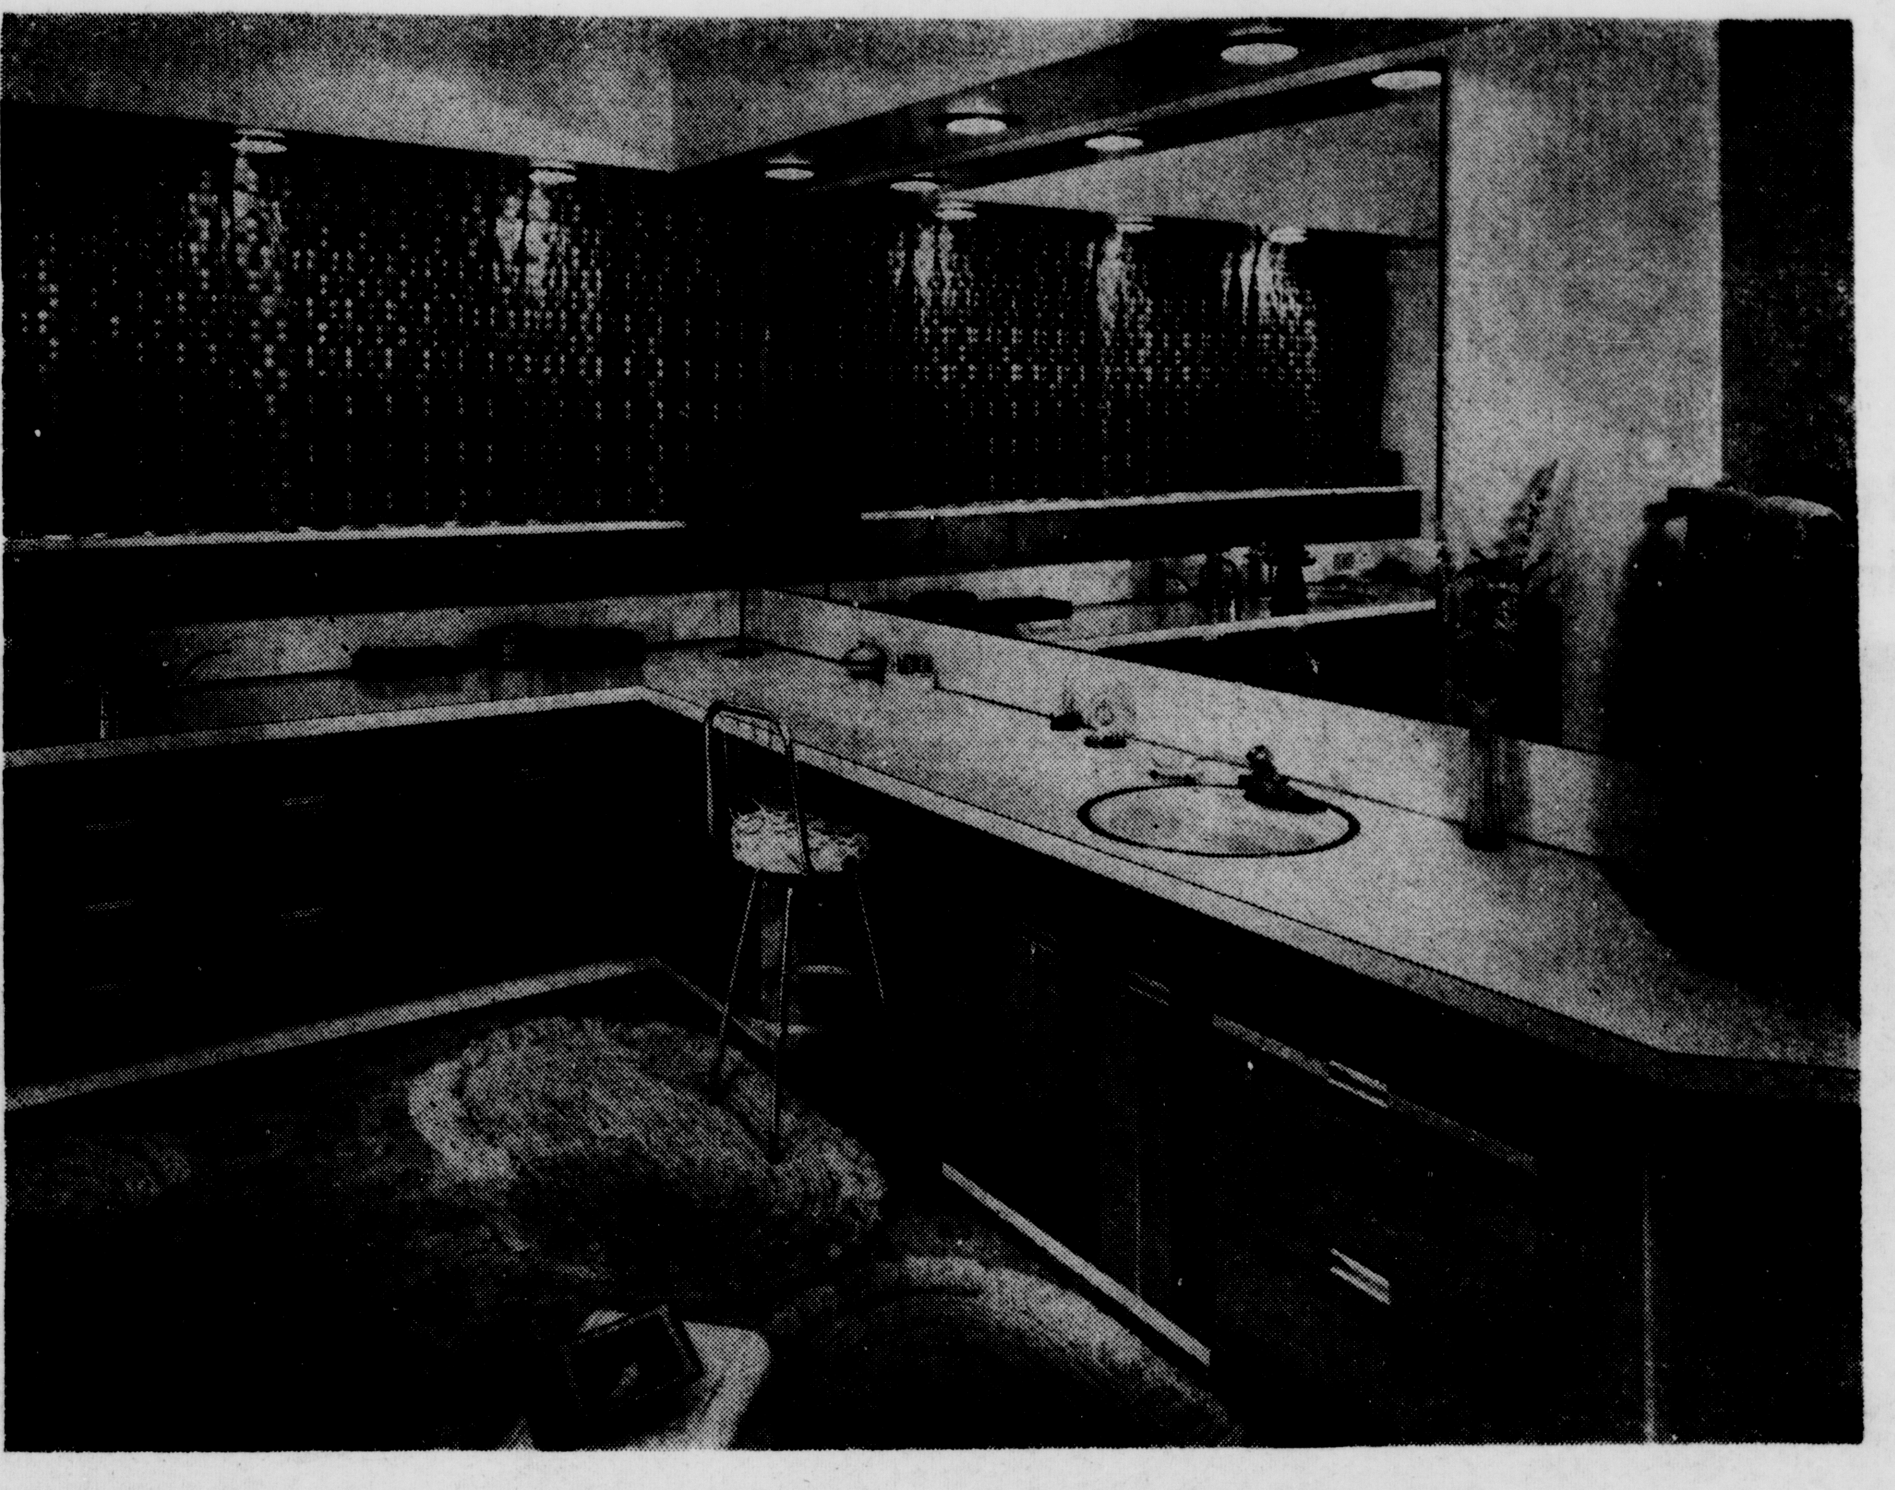
"I Thought Manufacturers No Longer Used Ornaments That Melt"

American producers of ornamental trim, beads, sequins, etc. have learned over the years that polystyrene plastic ornaments will dissolve in drycleaning. Unfortunately, foreign imports are not so carefully manufactured. Garments bearing French, Italian or Hong Kong labels are most likely to be decorated with perishable ornaments. Drycleaners have been warned to watch for garments with these labels and to be careful of any with plastic ornamental trim.

If you should attempt to spot-clean such a garment at home and let the cleaning fluid contact the beads or sequins, look out! They may disappear. Your drycleaner knows how to test plastic ornaments for melting. If he finds they may melt, he'll remove them before cleaning and, properly, make a charge for removing and replacing them. In instances where the trim cannot be removed he may refuse to clean the garment.

American manufacturers are much more customer-conscious than foreign manufacturers. The free enterprise system where the customer is king has taught them that.

By Robert and Ronald Casassa, Marin Cleaners, Inc.



LUXURIOUS LOOKING but mighty practical is this master bathroom featuring storage tailored for every need, from hairpins to super-size towels. Cabinetwork also keys color scheme with carpet, while curtains pick up the orange-golds of the solid, edge-glued Douglas fir. Idea is acceptable to many homes.

The Bathroom Pampers With Practicality

Of all the rooms in the house, it's the bath which has changed most in recent years.

As a matter of fact, it wasn't so long ago when the bathroom wasn't even in the house.

Today it's practically a palace in its own right. It may have music piped in to accompany the shower-stall baritone. There may be a fully equipped writing desk alongside the tub for those who like to catch up on correspondence while they soak. There may even be a sun-flooded patio built at one end.

THE AVERAGE modern bath, however, is designed mostly to pamper with practicality—the sensible luxuries.

There's storage, for instance. The more, the better—and best are the built-ins which are custom-tailored to provide for specific needs and space requirements.

As in the kitchen, standard under-counter cupboards are giving way to drawers which slide their contents out to the user without requiring a headstand or deep knee bend. There should be big drawers for big things, little drawers for little things, and some deep enough to take tall cans of hair spray and bottles of hand lotion.

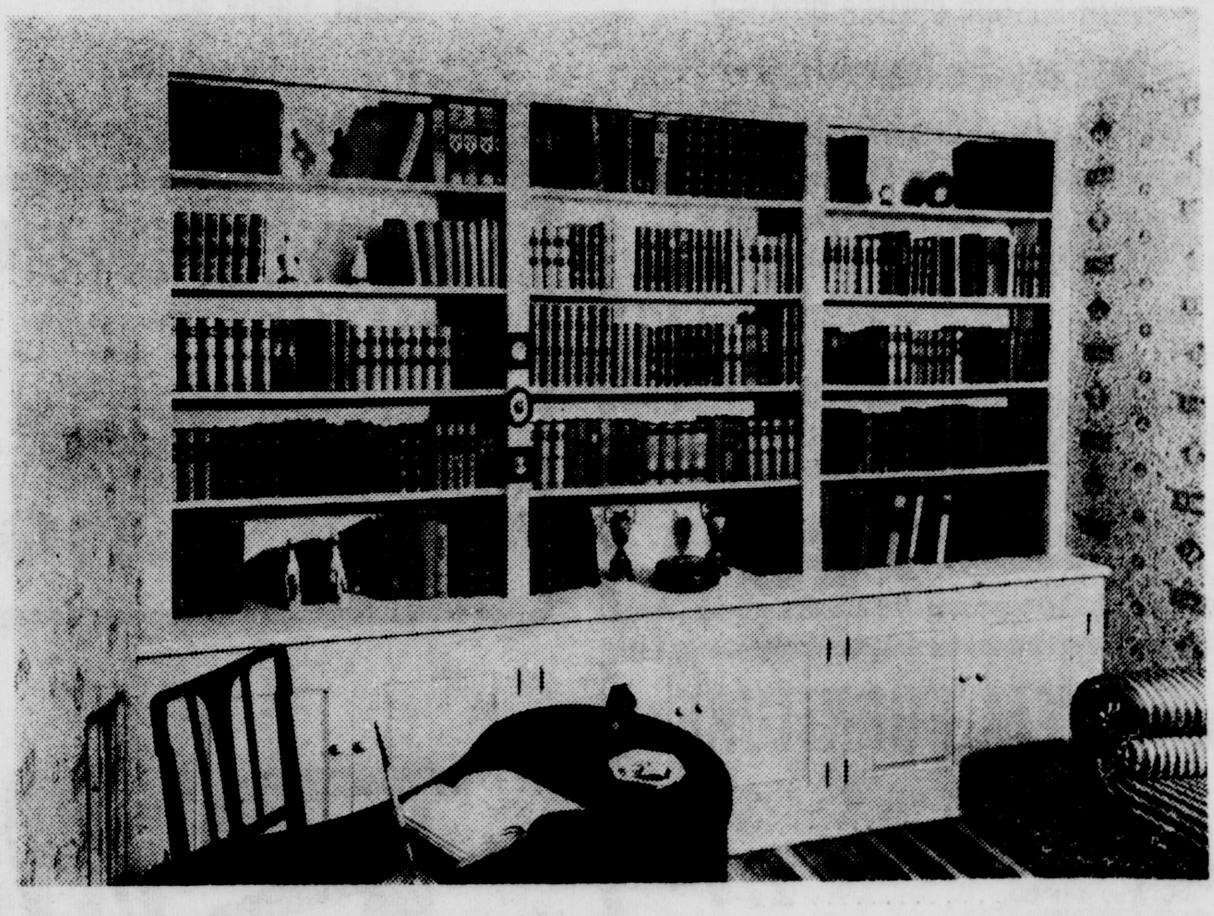
SUPER-SIZE bath towels can be stacked neatly on slide-out shelves inside cupboards, and supplies of soap and tissue are best handled that way, too. Prescriptions and such, however, belong in shallow wall cabinets with push-button combination locks on the doors.

Handsome is as handsome does, but with the wide variety of woods and finishes available, there's no excuse for the cabinetwork to be anything but pretty. You can spend what you want—little or lots.

One of the most attractive but least costly materials is solid Douglas fir lumber which has been glued to make big panels easily cut to the desired size and shape. The edge-glued panels of solid lumber have unusual strength and stability, and the fir can be finished with stain, clear varnish, or paint.

A CLEAR finish captures this wood's rich orangy-gold coloring which works well into the warm-toned color schemes currently favored. Stain can change it to any other wood shade desired. Paint is least practical, simply because it requires more upkeep and shows smudges and fingermarks.

In addition to having good cabinetwork, you can pamper yourself with giant three-way mirrors, single handle faucets, pretty oval lavatories, simulated marble countertops, ceiling heat and sun lamps, wood paneled walls, and carpeting, all of which are down-to-earth practical but look lavishly luxurious.



BOOKS ARE a natural for adding character and charm to a room. And they are most effective when displayed in a handsome built-in bookcase. You can build your own by sending 75 cents to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., 10510, and asking for Built-In Bookcase Pattern 264. Be sure to include your zip code number. The step-by-step method outlined by the pattern is simple and economical. It includes directions on figuring materials and specifying widths. Only stock moldings and plywood are used. Beneath the counter there is cabinet space to house a high fidelity or television set.

Mammoth And Moving

FIVE SMOOTH STONES by Ann Fairbairn, Crown, 756 pages. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

The first grand-scale novel exploiting the civil rights struggle makes its bid for best-seller lists and the wide screen.

It may well be the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the Sixties. Written at white heat, just as corn-filled and emotional, it too is a flaming exposition of evil.

If this mammoth novel makes the grade, which it is very likely to do, it will surely serve to educate the public about the Negro movement far more effectively than the most penetrating essay or treatise. This is the stuff to move the masses.

The story is very, very long and teeming with characters, throughout subordinated to the action and quite perfunctory. First we meet the beloved grandfather, L'il Joe, the inevitable prototype of the "old-fashioned" Negro who, with the help of a Danish professor, brings up the boy David, instilling in him a deep respect for his heritage, at the same time he teaches him how to survive in the depression-stricken white world.

David leaves New Orleans for a northern college where he excels (he is of course very handsome and, palatably, "light milk chocolate in color") and also falls in love with Sara, a white — whom I'm afraid he calls "Smallest," and who refuses to believe the world has no place for their marriage.

This is just the main thread in a book overflowing with subplots and scenes set all over the United States and Europe. New groups of people, new situations are introduced constantly, as the lovers suffer and part. At last David, now a promising Boston lawyer, is offered the chance to serve as a diplomat to a new African country.

It is at this point that the book takes fire. David, inflamed by L'il Joe's murder, refuses his chance for a future with Sara and resolutely turns back to the South to join in the fight for equality.

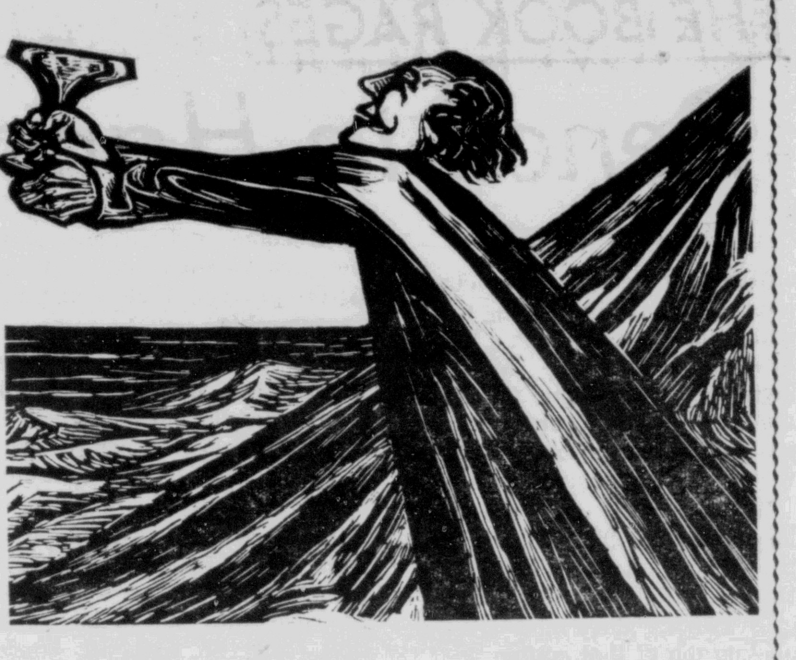
And now hosts of new people fill the stage: The militants, the "Martin Luther Kings," and the often two-edged white liberals who swarm into the South. There is the strategy and interaction, the bickering behind the lines of CORE, NAACP and SNCC (under different names). Swiftly we come to know the political set-ups, the leading personalities, black and white, of several backwater Southern communities.

Someone from another planet might believe the passionate accounts of children spat on, beset by police dogs, herded en masse into jail, are luridly overdone. But we know better. We saw it all, and no doubt will see more, right on our own television screens.

As it is manifestly impossible to overstate the jungle conditions of the South, as well as the insults and injustices Negroes are subject to in the rest of the country, Miss Fairbairn cannot be faulted for giving full rein to her emotions, and the melodrama soars.

The unabashed sentimentality of this strong call for justice is not to everyone's taste. But one must give full credit to the writer who is able to organize this colossus, with its myriad characters, its panorama of scenes and most of all the sizzling action of the last half of the book.

It is rare for a book to qualify as great popular entertainment and deliver a message at the same time. Miss Fairbairn has succeeded brilliantly and deserves the rich reward she will no doubt reap.



A WOODCUT entitled "Ode to Joy" by Ernst Barlach is among the illustrations included in "Barlach," art critic Alfred Werner's biography and pictorial study of the great German artist of the 20th Century.

A Fascinating Place And Time

THE ANCIENT WORLD by Giovanni Garbini, McGraw-Hill, 176 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Patricia Perry.

The geographical area we call the Ancient Middle East stretches from Egypt to Persia and south to the Arabian Peninsula, and it was in this area that the most ancient civilizations created by man were to develop.

Man's artistic creations produced during an immense time span, from the seventh millennium settlement of Jericho to the period of Greek supremacy in the 5th Century B. C., are covered in this book; it's broken into three sections, Mesopotamia with the fascinating Sumerian civilization, the peripheral areas, an immense arc of highlands stretching from Persia to Turkey and embracing Syria, Palestine and the Arabian Peninsula, and thirdly, Egypt, the civilization of the Nile Valley.

Now forget all your preconceptions about archeological finds being dry and dusty, about dull accounts of ruins and digs. This handsomely illustrated volume—102 of the 200 in full color—is a pleasure and a joy. If you have some Christmas gift money left over, rush right out and buy it. It's the kind of book you'll browse through for years, perhaps never finishing the text, but gloating over the statues and bronzes, the wall paintings and pottery, created by artists and craftsmen three, four, five, six thousand years ago.

And how fascinating and mysterious it is. Look at the ceiling painting with birds, butterflies and locusts painted in the tomb of Khonsu at Thebes in 1425 B.C.; the delicate wings in blues and browns look so much like a 19th Century Impressionist's work.

Look with wonder at the magnificent golden head of a bull decorating the front of a lyre unearthed from the royal cemetery at Ur, a creation of a metalworker who worked with love and skill in the period 2600 to 2400 B.C.

Garbini, professor at the Institute of Near Eastern Studies, University of Rome, has written the text in a highly readable style. Don't be misled, though, you won't plough through dynasties and the rise and fall of entire civilizations in an evening's browsing. Nor does Professor Garbini write down to the reader.

He cautions: "For us art involves aesthetic appreciation as well as a consideration of its social, political or religious functions."

This is the second in a McGraw-Hill series called "Landmarks of the World's Art." Other volumes will include "The Classical World," "Man and the Renaissance" and the "Age of Baroque." Let's hope they'll be as great a bargain as this.

A Primer About Painting For The Timid Beginner

THE PAINTING OF PICTURES by Arthur Zaidenberg, World, 140 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Artist and instructor Arthur Zaidenberg has aimed this book at the person who would like to paint but who is timid about beginning.

It is written at the most basic level, and is aimed at getting the novice involved and started along the right path.

Thus, it opens with a discussion of why pictures are painted, followed by a dissertation on the selection of materials and equipment. (Oils, says Zaidenberg, are the best medium for the beginner.)

Zaidenberg urges an experimental approach allowing the beginner to develop his own style. But he provides some loose guidelines for the experimentation, and supports his explanations with illustrations that are both his own drawings and the work of master painters—some of these color plates.

It could serve as a "review course" for the more experienced artist, as well as an elementary text for the novice.

Mankind And His Feathered Friends

BIRDS IN OUR LIVES edited by Alfred Stefferud and Arnold L. Nelson, Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, 561 pages, $9. Reviewed by Don Keown.

A study of the whole, wide relationship of birds to mankind and other life upon this earth is a major undertaking.

The Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, a U.S. Department of Interior agency, has tackled that ambitious project. With the help of numerous individuals concerned with and versed in wildlife resources, it has produced in "Birds in Our Lives," a large, well-written, generously-illustrated and comprehensive volume on the subject.

John S. Gottschalk, director of the publishing bureau, says the objective is "the broadening of the public's understanding of the importance of birdlife and of natural world to all of us." In his foreword, Secretary of Interior Stewart Udall describes the focus as the part played by birds "in the web of life."

Sixty-one different writers have contributed material upon topics in which they are recognized authorities. Included are some of the country's foremost ornithologists, representatives of other related sciences, spokesmen for conservation and field sports educators, federal agency chiefs and consultants, etc. All worked under the editorship of Alfred Stefferud and Arnold L. Nelson.

Their scope includes a panoramic view of birdlife, a study of its relationship to literate and other facets of man's culture, their place in sports and recreation, their role in nature's general scheme, the part they have played in science, their husbandry, such controversial topics as pesticides, hunting, pollution and flyway intrusion, problems such as crop foraging and aircraft and utility dangers and damage, and discussion of what people are doing and should do to secure the future of the birds and their benefits.

"We, all of us, must be the responsible stewards of birds in our lives," says John S. Gottschalk in his piece.

It is a handsome book. While some may lament the absence of color illustrations, the 372 black and white photographs and 80 wash drawings that are included have been well chosen and superbly reproduced.

In Marin, Audubon stronghold that it is, the book should enjoy an especially warm reception. It is not, however, a book restricted to any one group, but should be of interest to everyone titillated by those winged creatures that are from any standpoint among the most marvelous of God's creations.

"Birds in Our Lives" is available for $9 from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington D.C., 20402.

Biblical Story By Wibberley

THE CENTURION by Leonard Wibberley, William Morrow and Co., 251 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

Subtitled "A novel of the ministry and passion of Christ," the book treats the events of the Book of Matthew as current history of the time when the Romans ruled Judea.

The author of "Mouse on the Moon," and many other books, both fiction and non-fiction, former Independent-Journal editor Wibberley uses effectively a quiet, straightforward style to describe the drama of the coming of the Messiah proclaimed King of the Jews.

"The Centurion" of the title, the Roman Longinus, is the person through whom the story is told, and whose unhappy lot it is to carry out the crucifixion.

A Novel About Problems Of Adolescence

THE LAST PICTURE SHOW by Larry McMurtry, Dial Press, 280 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Gary Tischler.

This is a growing up sexually novel.

That makes it almost too bad, because McMurtry, author of "Leaving Cheyenne" which was made into an excellent film, "Hud," has so many things going for him as a writer.

He can evoke an achingly real sense of place and atmosphere, in this case, the dreary, windswept landscapes surrounding a small Northern Texas town. The sense of desolation, of drying up, of being nowhere felt by the adolescents in the novel is a lingering one.

His style is straightforward, without literary blandishments. He goes for an emotional effect, but what he accomplishes is curiously half-baked.

The subject, after all is an old one: Young high school-age adolescents caught in the tug of war of leaving the things of youth behind, trying to become adults, desiring and wanting sex as a thing and an experience but afraid of its responsibilities.

McMurtry adds nothing new to the subject. His adolescents debate the subject, engage in it frequently, feel pangs and sweat over it.

The two principal problems are that he purports to say that these particular adolescents are representative of today's youth. They are no more representative than the town is.

Two of the main characters, Duane, the fullback on the perennially losing football team, and Jacy, the rich girl, have about as much depth as tissue paper.

They have an aimless poor boy - rich girl romance which comes down to a tedious will-she-or-won't-she battle. Neither really cares once it happens. Nor do they care very much about anything that happens to them.

McMurtry has more success with his older people and with one of the youngsters, Duane's best friend Sonny. The portrait of the he-man football coach, his withering wife and her affair with Sonny is sharply, beautifully drawn. And Sam, the proprietor of the town pool hall, is perhaps the most sympathetic character, an old man still young who sees his own youth reflected in the confused activities of his customers.

Anatomy, Nutrition Linked By Experts

YOUR BODY: Its Anatomy and Nutrition by Dr. S. William Kalb and Dr. Christian A. Hovde, C. S. Hammond & Co., 150 pages. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

This book is the result of the teamwork of a Seton Hall University professor of anatomy and a Newark, N.J., physician and nutritionist who at one time headed the American College of Nutrition.

It breaks down into two sections, the first dealing with the human anatomy, the second with nutrition and its relationship to the well-being of the body.

Included are the expected discussions of the special problems of the obese, the underweight, children, the aged, expectant mothers, etc.

"Your Body," however, has a number of unusual features.

Among these are the illustrations that include a full set of anatomical sketches by Ronald Keller in color, a glossary of medical terms, weight tables, menu planning advice and a separate booklet listing the caloric values of the more popular foods.

It is a concise book, quickly read and easily referred to in the future. Yet it seems to cover its subjects with unusual clarity.

Some Lessons For The New Emerging Countries Of Asia

THE PHILIPPINES: YESTERDAY AND TODAY by Delia and Ferdinand Kuhn, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 248 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

This work, one of a series on contemporary civilizations, is particularly timely in view of the Vietnam war and the emergence of Southeast Asian countries.

The authors admit that their work is an introductory rather than a comprehensive study, but it might well contain some lessons for other new countries in Southeast Asia which had been under foreign rule for many years.

The Philippines, first under the rule of Spain and then the United States, won its independence in 1949, only to find the changeover no easy task.

The blending together of political, economic, social and religious institutions and people of diverse ancestry while taking on the role of a new nation is not an easy path.

The Philippines, an Asian land long ruled by Westerners, can never be wholly Asian or wholly Western, the authors contend, but it can take the best from both worlds.

Charges Filed In Shooting; Victim Is Poor

A formal charge of assault with a deadly weapon was brought late yesterday against a Novato man in the shooting earlier of a civil engineer in his San Rafael apartment.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Leonard Shaw brought the reduced complaint against John W. Frederick, 36, of 50 Sullivan Lane, Novato, who had been booked earlier on suspicion of assault with intent to murder.

The victim, Matt Cernac Jr., 43, of 1825 Lincoln Avenue, was reported in poor condition today in Marin General Hospital.

Authorities remain puzzled over the shooting. Frederick, who called police to the shooting scene, has refused to talk, and Cernac's condition prevents questioning of him.

Frederick, in stocking feet, was arraigned on the charge before Judge Hadden W. Roth of Marin Municipal Court. Roth reduced to $25,000 bail of $55,000 set after the earlier booking.

Hearing for counsel and plea was set for 1:30 p.m. Monday. Joseph A. Dahlman, Frederick's attorney, was not present at the arraignment. He had previously recommended his client remain silent.

Cernac was found lying in a hallway in his apartment about 1:30 a.m. with a bullet in the head. A .22 caliber automatic pistol was found by police near Cernac.

Shaw said two drinks were found in the apartment, indicating Frederick might have been invited in. Shaw said there was no evidence of forced entry.

Shaw said authorities have learned that Frederick had spent his last $5 in the Gold Clown Bar on Fourth Street, San Rafael, before going to Cernac's.

Shaw identified the gun as Cernac's, and said state criminal identification men were running tests on the weapon.

'HAVEN'T AN ENEMY'

Beating Victim Is Baffled By Midnight Ambush At His Home

By JOHN F. KEARNEY

A San Rafael man lies today in a hospital bed hopelessly baffled as to the motive for the brutal attack which put him there.

Leonard N. Atwood, 50, reached for a cigarette with shaking fingers, lit it and said, "I haven't an enemy in the world . . . not one. I've racked my brains and I can't find an answer."

At his charming single-story home overlooking a peaceful San Rafael Bay, his wife, Betty Ann said, "He has no one but friends. My own theory is that it was a prowler."

Atwood, a buyer for U.S. Steel Co., had stayed late in San Francisco Tuesday night on business.

He arrived at his home at 816 Point San Pedro Road about 12:25 a.m. Wednesday and the first thing he noticed was that the lights—usually left on outside by his wife—were out.

He started down the steps to his front door and it was then it happened. He was ambushed.

"I'm almost sure I was hit from behind. It came so suddenly. I put up my right hand to ward off a blow which I feel certain would have been fatal," said Atwood. He had about $75 on him, which he said was not taken.

The light bulbs outside had been removed, apparently by the attacker, believed by the couple to have been at least as tall as Atwood, who is 6 feet 5 inches, because of the height of the bulbs from from the ground.

This is one aspect of the attack most puzzling to both the Atwoods and the Sheriff's deputies: what reason would an assailant have for removing the light bulbs in preparation for the attack? Loosening them would have served to hide his face if he thought he could be identified by the victim. The bulbs were never found.

At the moment of the attack, Mrs. Atwood, alone in the darkened house, believed herself in danger.

"I must have gone to bed about 11 o'clock and was awakened by a most horrible sound. It was like a heavy scuffling. Then I heard a terrible moaning sound as if someone was trying to say something," she explained.

She went out into the passageway the front door and noticed the outside lights were out. She called out: "Is that you, Leonard?" There was no answer.

She said: "Whoever you are, please go away." Mrs. Atwood went immediately to the telephone and dialed the operator. "I'm alone in the house and I think there is a prowler outside the door. Please get me some help," she told the operator.

Suddenly, the midnight silence was broken by the clang of a miniature ship's bell which the couple had put outside their home.

Now thoroughly terrified, Mrs. Atwood said she called out again and received the reply: "Yes, it's me. Let me in."

When she opened the door, she found her husband covered in blood.

Yesterday, she said her only

Red Guard Military Unit Storms Anti-Mao Hideout

TOKYO (AP) — A Red Chinese military unit has stormed a hideout of military officers opposed to Communist Chairman Mao Tse-tung and arrested "scores" of the officers, a Japanese newspaper reported today.

It appeared to be the first report of violence within China's 2.5-million-man People's Liberation Army over Mao's purge of his opponents. Peking radio reported earlier that an "acute and complicated" struggle involving a small but influential group of anti-Maoists had built up within the army.

A RETRACTION

Other Japanese reports said President Liu Shao-chi, the top anti-Mao leader, recently demanded before the Communist Central Committee a retraction of his "self-criticism" widely publicized last December.

The reports said the demand could indicate that Liu was confident of maintaining his power and that he had launched a counterattack against Mao and Defense Minister Lin Paio.

The Peking correspondent of Mainichi Shimbun said the officers were arrested last Tuesday in Lanchow, a city of more than 150,000 persons 700 miles west of Peking on the Yellow River.

WALL POSTER

The correspondent quoted a wall poster put up in Peking and signed by "the 750th Lantzu Regiment." The regiment is stationed in Lanchow.

The poster reportedly said the captured officers were "black military elements" loyal to Gen. Liu Chih-chien, ousted by Mao's supporters as director of the Military Revolution Committee and No. 2 man in charge of ideological matters in the army. The officers' documents were reported confiscated.

Correspondents of the Yomiuri and Sankei newspapers, quoting wall posters that ap-

Unruh Urges Halt To Tuition Charges

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh says Gov. Reagan should wait before trying to charge tuition at the University of California and state colleges.

Unruh, D-Inglewood, said yesterday his Joint Committee on Higher Education should be given time to consider tuition. He promised that the committee "will be able to develop a sound mechanism for financing institutions of higher learning in the state."

A $400 annual tuition — mentioned only as an example by Finance Director Gordon P. Smith — would make U.C. the most expensive major state university in the country, Unruh said. He explained the total annual cost would be $643, if tuition were added to present incidental fees.

Unruh offered no comment on Reagan's standing order to cut 1967-68 state operations by 10 per cent.

Reagan has so far made no specific proposal on tuition but has said he favors the idea.

State officials and financial experts began yesterday to look for ways to cut spending and explain it to voters. Some outside reaction was bitter.

The Reagan administration has called a halt to hiring new employees, put a freeze on buying office equipment and ordered closing of eight of 13 new aid centers for the poor in racially troubled areas.

Many state department heads, including appointees of Democratic Gov. Brown, indicated yesterday they expected to carry out necessary services and still trim costs.

Meanwhile on the U. C. campus, President Clark Kerr has ordered the nine campuses of the 87,000-student school to hold up admission until the financing crisis is clarified.

Kerr's ban on admissions included both graduate and undergraduate applicants. He said it would stay in force until after the chancellors of the university's campuses meet to discuss what to do about the economy edict.

The chancellors have a meeting scheduled for Jan. 18.

In other developments Friday, Governor Reagan announced he would appear on statewide television Monday night for a three-minute "report to the people." The subject was not announced, but it was assumed it would deal with state finances in general and school finances in particular.

San Francisco Couple Terrorized On Road

Husband In Hospital; Novato Boys Held

A 23-year-old San Francisco man lay in Marin General Hospital today, reportedly the victim of a carload of Novato boys bent on a night of sadistic thrills.

Roger T. Jensen was in fair condition with a possible back injury, possible concussion and multiple bruises—the results of an exercise in terror, given by four 17-year-old boys.

Jensen told Mill Valley police that his ordeal began on Highway 101 last night, when the boys pulled alongside his car in their 1955 Chevrolet.

They began their harrassment by shouting obscenities at Jensen and his wife Patricia, he said. As the "game" progressed, the boys would race their car past Jensen's, then pull in front and slow down.

Apparently unsatisfied with the results of this fun, the boys next began bombing his car with bottles, Jensen told police.

One of Jensen's tires blew out and he pulled the car to the side of the highway. When he and his wife emerged to fix the tire, the youths drove up and began throwing rocks, police said.

The terrified couple scrambled back into the car, and drove on the flat tire to a Union 76 service station at 679 East Blithedale Avenue. Their antagonists followed.

When Jensen got out of his car, one of the boys walked up and struck him with his fist, knocking him unconscious. A service station operator called police and the boys raced off in their car.

UNCONSCIOUS

When officers arrived, they found Jensen unconscious. Mrs. Jensen had cuts on her legs suffered when the boys stoned them on the highway, police said. An ambulance took Jensen to the hospital.

The boys were arrested later by Corte Madera police, after Mill Valley broadcast a description of their car. The boys said Jensen tried to run them off the highway and they retaliated.

They were all booked at juvenile hall. The one who struck Jensen, was booked on suspicion of aggravated assault, conspiracy and throwing substance at a vehicle with intent to do bodily harm. The other three were booked on the last two charges.

A check with Novato police showed that, in the past, the boys had been in brushes with the law over curfew violations, "and other minor things. Nothing really serious," said Sgt. Douglas Stone of Mill Valley.

Special LBJ Note To Reds On Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A special message urging agreement on ways to halt further deployment of antimissile defense systems was understood to be on its way from President Johnson to Soviet leaders today.

Officials yesterday listed this as one of the principal items touched upon in a confidential communication which the new American Ambassador to Russia, Llewellyn E. Thompson, is to deliver.

Thompson is to present the note to Soviet President Nickolai Podgorny.

Official sources said the basic theme of the presidential message concerns the desire of the United States to make every effort to improve relations with the Soviet Union and to arrive at various disarmament agreements.

Johnson said in his State of the Union address Tuesday that Russia "has begun to place near Moscow a limited antimissile defense." He made it clear the United States will not begin similar deployment of its Nike-X antiballistic missiles until it has made an effort to persuade the Russians to abandon their plans and avoid a costly new arms spiral.

Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, who believes that the best defense against nuclear missiles is an improved offense, is opposed to entering an arms race with the Soviet Union for deployment of vast antiballistic missile systems.

The United States hopes to get Russia to stop at this point and try to negotiate an agreement which will save the United States up to $40 billion and presumably have the same financial advantages for the Russians.

The President needs quick assurance from the Russians of their willingness to suspend further deployment of defensive missiles. Otherwise, he will face intense pressure in Congress in the months ahead to go ahead and begin deployment of a similar American system.

B-52s Attack DMZ; Thailand Base In Order

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. B-52 bombers today attacked North Vietnamese troop concentrations in the demilitarized zone (DMZ), and it was learned that the mighty Stratofortresses now are stationed at a new base in Thailand.

The B-52 bombing strike today was against a regular Communist force which intelligence sources spotted in the DMZ that divides the warring Vietnamese. It was not known if the bombers took off from nearby Thailand or from their regular station 2,500 miles away in Guam.

Informed sources said, however, B-52s already are on station at U-Tapao Air Base in Thailand and bombing runs either have begun or will shortly. The proximity of Thailand cuts down air-to-air refueling requirements and could results in a step-up in attacks by the high-flying bombers.

U.S. 7th Fleet destroyers used their five-inch guns to support the B-52 strike.

Spokesmen also said that in ground action yesterday, more than 74 guerrillas were killed in scattered actions in the northern provinces.

In one of the battles, U.S. Marines defending a Central Highlands artillery outpost inflicted heavy casualties on Viet Cong raiders armed with mortar, machineguns and hand grenades.

In another, 330 miles northeast of Saigon, artillery supporting South Korean marines killed 27 soldiers out of a 300-man guerrilla force. Two other clashes in the same area resulted in another 27 enemy dead, spokesmen said.

Meanwhile, the Soviet news agency Tass reported that in recent raids U.S. airplanes have bombed every section of the North Vietnamese capital. In one case, the report said, 300 houses in a single street were "razed to the ground."

In a channel to Saigon harbor today, a U.S. Navy minesweeper was sunk when rammed by a Norwegian freighter.

Year's First Golden Gate Span Victim

Someone bought a bus ticket to death yesterday.

A man, aged about 35, asked for a ticket to Sausalito at the Greyhound bus depot in Martinez. The schedule he was given said the bus would arrive at 1 p.m.

At 2:05 p.m., two workmen glanced over the railing of the Golden Gate Bridge and saw a body floating in the water. The body was recovered at 2:50 p.m.

San Francisco Deputy Coroner Ken Kindred searched the pockets of the unidentified man and found a canceled bus ticket from Martinez to Sausalito.

No one saw the man jump from the bridge, reported the California Highway Patrol, who listed the case as a suicide.

The man achieved a notoriety of a kind. He was the first known suicide off the bridge this year and the 308th since the bridge was opened.

Soul Searching May Continue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The soul searching that led to dumping Adam Clayton Powell's wife from a Congressional payroll seems to be spreading in the House.

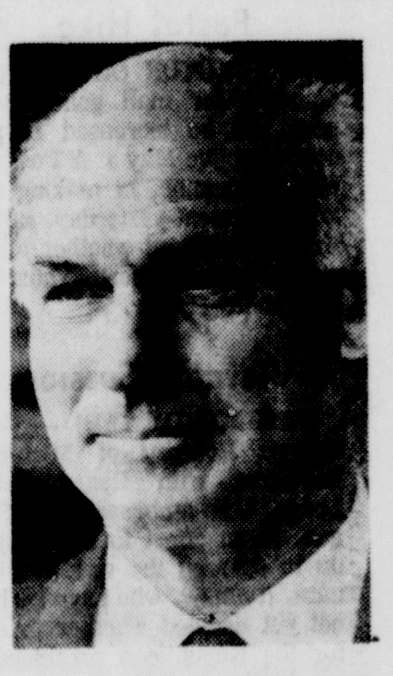
Members were talking today about getting all relatives off the Congressional payroll, and one complained that the Senate was "dragging its feet" in its investigation of the activities of Sen. Thomas Dodd, D-Conn.

New Episcopal Bishop Seated; Succeeds Pike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Rt. Rev. C. Kilmer Myers today urged churchmen to work for an end "of violence, both in Vietnam and in the great cities of our land," as he was installed sixth bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California.

The former suffragan bishop of Michigan succeeded retired Bishop James A. Pike in colorful ceremonies at Grace Cathedral. Rt. Rev. John E. Hines of New York City, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States, presided.

Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken of San Francisco attended, the first chief pastor of his Roman Catholic archdiocese ever to enter an Episcopal Cathedral and occupy a throne.



PHILLIP DRATH
To North Vietnam

Drath To Join Medical Supply Trip Into North

By DAVID DIETZ

"We want to make as much fuss as possible. We want to show how much we are opposed to this terrible war, and that the people of the North need as much help as the people in the South."

So said Phillip Drath today as the unsuccessful peace candidate for Congress prepared to leave for North Vietnam with seven others to deliver medical supplies.

"We're not just pro-South; we're pro-people," he continued. "We believe in helping all people. We don't have any enemies, except war itself, poverty and ignorance."

Drath said the trip, which starts Monday with a flight from San Francisco to Tokyo, was organized by an ad hoc committee of the Society of Friends (Quakers) to which Drath belongs.

"We have been trying for some time to send medical supplies to the Red Cross in North Vietnam, but the State Department has interfered," Drath said. "So we decided to go on our own."

He reported that the society had received permission from North Vietnamese officials to enter the country, but that the group had not gotten approval from Washington.

"I don't think there's a law against it (the trip)," Drath said.

Drath said he and Horace Champney, a society member from Iowa, would depart for Tokyo at 1 p.m. Monday and join six other society members in Tokyo. From there, the group will sail in a 55-foot schooner owned by a society member to Hong Kong and Haiphong, North Vietnam.

The Ligurian Riviera

The Travel Page

The subject is roses.

Roses, carnations, oleanders and camellias, and for that matter almost every form of temporate zone and subtropical blossoming—all to be found in Italy's northern province of Liguria.

The Ligurian Riviera forms a taut bow, from Ventimiglia, which is virtually a stone's throw from Monte Carlo and Menton, to La Spezia, "the city of poets" at the end of the arc.

IN THIS region so favored by nature, the date palm mingles with the umbrella pine and flowers abound in such profusion as to create a flower market within the land of flowers.

The Italian Riviera owes its abundance of blossoms to a most happy situation and configuration of land.

High mountain ranges, the Maritime Alps and the Apennines, fringe its seacoast and shelter it from northerly winds at every quarter. The volcanic soil, moreover, is singularly adapted to rich vegetation and, what with soil and climate in combination, there are no barren spots in Liguria.

A BLUE SKY and a bluer sea, a warm sun and a warm people, have created an ideal winter and summer playground.

Actually there are two Ligurian Rivieras, the Riviera di Levante (East) and the Riviera di Ponente (West), with Genoa, the birthplace of Columbus, as the dividing line.

The Riviera di Levante is best known to Americans because of the familiar names of Portofino, Rapallo, Santa Margherita and La Spezia, where people from this country have long holidayed.

PORTOFINO gained fame, moreover, because the Duke and Duchess of Windsor honeymooned there; it was favored, too, by Clark Gable and other Hollywood stars who sought rest and relaxation from their Roman holidays.

To the West, San Remo is known internationally; it is luxurious and glittering, boasting an elegant casino, race tracks, fine ships, splendid villas, 280 hotels and an 18-hole golf course.

From Ventimiglia on, through San Remo to Genoa, elegant resorts are strung like pearls along the entire coast, almost abutting one upon the other. They are too numerous for detailed description, but Ventimiglia is a pleasant little town, ancient-modern, famed for its prehistoric caves, its 11th Century churches, Roman ruins, an excellent archeological museum, and, of course, flower markets.

BORDIGHERA is similarly known for its gardens and flower markets, and in general is a center for subtropical growths—it supplies the palm leaves for the Vatican observance of Palm Sunday. Ospedaletti is noted for its roses and carnations.

Spotorno has superior climate from April through October, and is much favored by sun-famished Germans, Austrians, Belgians, and even French tourists.

To stroll in its back country hills is to walk in a profusion of flowers, past Roman ruins, medieval churches and historic fortresses.

ALASSIO (favorite spot of artists and writers, including Ernest Hemingway) is nearby, and boasts a velvety sand beach where one can bathe from March to October, scuba-dive and sail to one's heart's content.

Lately Alassio, Spotorno and other neighboring seaside resorts have begun to draw American tourists in increasing number. A major attraction is the 18-hole, par 72, Garlenda golf course, newest and one of the best appointed in Italy; famed by green hills, it is irrigated by a huge artificial reservoir, so that the fairways are green in all seasons. The course was laid out in 1965 on land that formed part of the estate of the Marquis of Balestrino, whose ancient castle overlooks the fourth hole, and it is within a short drive of the seacoast.

Liguria shares with so many other regions of Italy the virtue that its holiday resorts are never more than a few hours away from some great center of art and culture, or metropolitan excitement. The center of course, is Genoa, bearing the same relation to the seaside resorts as Long Island, for example, does to New York City.

GENOA IS well worth an extended visit. It is an elegant and aristocratic city as well as a bustling seaport, and its Via Balbi is lined with palaces. It once rivaled Venice as the queen of the Mediterranean, and, in addition to the Great Navigator, Columbus, gave birth to the most famous fiddler of all times, Paganini, and to the great doge, Andrea Doria.

All in all, the Ligurian Riviera is one long sweep of holiday pleasure. Prices are surprisingly reasonable and the region has decided for the tourist season of 1967 to maintain the same rates that have been in effect since 1964.

GARLENDA ON the Ligurian Riviera boasts not only a modern 18-hole golf course, but, within those grounds, a medieval chapel, the Church of San Rocco di Gadlenda.

Sightseers Are Attracted By California's Man-Made Wonder

Higher than the Washington Monument with enough concrete to build a three-foot walkway around the world at the equator, California's own Shasta Dam on the Sacramento River never ceases to amaze the visiting tourist as it works hard to control the water from Shasta Lake.

When full, the 35-mile long Shasta Lake, formed by the Sacramento, McCloud and Pitt rivers, according to the National Automobile Club, contains enough water to cover the entire state of Connecticut to a depth of one-and-a-half feet.

SO MUCH water, in fact, that during its unharnessed days it caused millions of dollars' worth of damage.

Formerly flowing uncontrolled into the Pacific Ocean, this water mercilessly flooded valley farmlands, towns and cities, transforming these once productive areas into desolate wastelands. Now Shasta Dam harnesses this destructive force and stores part of it for irrigation during the dry season.

Not only useful but a wonder to see, this magnificently proportioned dam rises 602 feet above bedrock in the river canyon, making it the highest overflow-type dam in the world.

TO MAKE room for this, the second tallest and largest concrete structure in our country, 37 miles of Southern Pacific's main line railroad, which wound through the Sacramento River Canyon, were relocated in 1938, as were 21 miles of Highway 99.

Equally amazing proved the method of transporting and placing the enormous amounts of concrete. During the three-and-a half years of its actual construction, which began in 1939, over 12 million tons of sand and gravel passed over mountains and valleys on a conveyor belt that stretched along for 9.6 miles. On one day in August, 1941, the concreting plant worked efficiently enough to place 11,700,090 yards of concrete in designated spots.

Part of the 170-million dollar Central Valley Irrigation Project, Shasta Dam, completed in 1945, cost a total of 12 million dollars. In 1949, Shasta Power Plant went into full operation.

MUCH EXCITEMENT and astonishment filled the air when visitors to Shasta Dam spotted a waterfall three times higher than Niagara Falls. Five times since the dam's completion this miracle of nature appeared and five times people marveled at the beauty of it. Each time excess rainfall and snow blended to form the waterfall, rushing down the 500-foot spillway.

So far more than two-million visitors have viewed Shasta Dam, experiencing a feeling of pride in our very capable engineers, capable enough to build such a powerful control of ravaging natural forces.

Why not see for yourself the man-made wonder that is Shasta Dam?

Reds Free Wortham On Bail

MOSCOW (UPI)—A Soviet court has released imprisoned American Buel Ray Wortham on bail to await appeal on his three-year conviction for blackmarketeering, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said today.

Wortham

The embassy spokesman said the Soviet Supreme Court had also granted the 25-year-old North Little Rock, Ark., youth permission to make a personal plea for freedam at a hearing expected later this month or early in February.

Wortham and a fellow American, Craddock M. Gilmour Jr., of Salt Lake City, Utah, were convicted by a Leningrad court Dec. 21 on charges of exchanging American and Finnish dollars for rubles o the black market.

Gilmour, 24, was fined $1,111, but Wortham, who was also convicted of stealing a Russian bear statue, was given three years of a possible maximum eight year sentence.

The American Embassy spokesman said that Wortham's appearance at the coming appeal hearing was the prime condition laid down when bail was granted.

Wortham was released this morning from Leningrad city jail where he has been held in solitary confinement most of the time since his arrest Oct. 1.

The spokesman said Wortham would take the overnight train to Moscow and stay at the U.S. Embassy until his appeal hearing.

The bail money was raised by his father, Buel Wortham, a North Little Rock machine operator, from a $20,000 bank loan and contributions from fellow citizens of the Arkansas town.

German Lays Wreath At Tomb

PARIS (AP) — West German Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger made a symbolic gesture today that seemed to reflect his government's hopes for a new era of good feeling with French President Charles de Gaulle's regime.

Kiesinger

The chancellor began the final day of his first official visit to Paris by laying a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier under the Arch of Triumph.

It was a gesture former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer made in the early days of Franco-German conciliation.

Kiesinger, accompanied by Foreign Minister Willy Brandt and other members of the West German delegation, stood at attention as a band played the French and German national anthems over the din of Paris traffic.

From the ceremony, Kiesinger went to the presidential palace for his final round of talks with De Gaulle.

Today marked the fourth anniversary of De Gaulle's veto of British entry into the Common Market. There was no indication that, at De Gaulle's urging, West Germany had backed away from its support of British membership in the Economic Union.

Appointment Ends Family Feud

WASHINGTON (AP)—The appointment of Undersecretary of Labor John F. Henning as ambassador to New Zealand draws the curtain on a unique Johnson administration family fight.

Henning

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, who tried to force Henning's resignation two years ago, reportedly warmly congratulated him after President Johnson announced he had selected Henning for the ambassadorship.

But since 1964, when organized labor galloped to Henning's defense and then Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg had to mediate a truce, the Wirtz-Henning relationship at best has been a kind of coexistence.

Wirtz denies the two are still "at odds" two years after the fracas and Henning won't talk about it at all.

But the climate of New Zealand is certain to be welcome to Henning after spending two years in the discomfort of being unwanted as the Labor Department's No. 2 man.

Wirtz' original reason for wanting to replace Henning reportedly was that he wanted to make his own choice of his second in command.

The two also differed on philosophical approaches to some labor matters.

Judge Sees Short Baker Trial

WASHINGTON (AP)—U. S. Dist. Judge Oliver Gasch has told jurors that the Bobby Baker trial may end much sooner than the originally predicted 2 to 2½ months.

The government announced yesterday it can conclude by the middle of next week its case against the former Senate Democratic secretary charged with tax evasion, theft and conspiracy.

Gasch then announced his "good news," as he called it, to the jury and later recessed the trial until Monday morning when he will hear arguments on a defense motion to dismiss the charges because of a government admission that it electronically eavesdropped on Baker.

Although the Justice Department confirmed that two conversations involving Baker were bugged in March 1965, it said the recordings had no connection with the indictment against him.

Two Million Year Old Bone Is Uncovered

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Man may be older than he thinks — by some 800,000 years.

Prof. Bryan Patterson, a paleontologist at Harvard University, announced the discovery Friday. Patterson said he came upon a fossilized chunk of a upper arm bone while walking near Lake Rudolph in Kenya, Africa.

"I found it about 4 p.m. on a hot afternoon lying on the surface," he said. "I saw this thing and said 'ho-hum, another damn knuckle thing.'"

A few hundred steps later, "a light went on inside my head," Patterson said, "and I thought, 'By God, this must be it.'"

It was. Special measurements showed the bone was about 2½ million years old — give or take 200,000 years.

Up to now, scientists have proof of man existing about 1,700,000 years ago. It is based on the discovery of man-like fragments in Tanzania several years ago by African paleontologist Louis Leakey.

Patterson said Leakey's discovery was called "Zinjanthropus," or the "Nutcracker Man."

After Patterson made his find in August, 1965, a Harvard computer cleared up any doubts by him and other scientists that it may have been a bone from a chimpanzee or other ape.

He said the bone structure was closer to modern man's than those of apes or even Leakey's discovery.

Prof. Ernst Mayer, director of Harvard's Museum of Comparative Zoology, said the Patterson discovery indicates that the bone is from a type of early man called "Australopithecus," believed to be in the main line of man's evolution.

Leakey's find, he said, is from a branch line of man which became extinct.

The scientists have knicknamed their find "K.H.-1" and surmise he was about five feet tall, walked erect, had human-like teeth and possessed a small brain and large jaw.

Non-Students Defy Judge's New Order

BERKELEY (UPI)—Two non-student leaders of the recent University of California uprising were sought by police today because they defied a judge's "gag rule."

Michael J. Smith Jr., 25, and Stewart Albert, 26, were wanted on criminal contempt warrants.

Jerry Rubin, 28, and Steven C. Hamilton, 23, were arrested last night on the same warrants.

Municipal Court Judge George Brunn issued the arrest orders after the four men held a sidewalk news conference to discuss why they were taken into custody during the November campus crisis.

Brunn had forbade the four men, university officials and the Alameda County District Attorney's office from talking with newsmen in an attempt to guarantee a fair trial.

The "gag rule" also applied to two other non-student leaders —Mario Savio, 24, and William Miller, 25—but they did not participate in yesterday's meeting with newsmen.

When the judge heard of the four men's defiance, he said, "I do not plan to tolerate willful flouting of my order—there's no point in making court orders if people can violate them with impunity."

"The gag rule was imposed to protect the defendants," Brunn said. "At the time the defendants made no objection and, in the meantime, there has been no effort by their attorney to modify the rule."

During the news conference Rubin said he and the other defendants were being persecuted for political reasons, not for participating in the demonstration at UC.

The six men were arrested Nov. 30 on charges of trespassing and creating a public nuisance during a sit-in demonstration near a Navy recruiting table in the Student Union Building. The action touched off a student strike. They are to go on trial Monday.

Surplus Bidding

Waste lubricants and light unprepared steel scrap will be sold in a bid sale by the Defense Surplus Sales office at Hamilton Air Force Base. Bids will be opened at 1 p.m., Jan. 26, at the surplus sales office, Oakland Naval Supply Center.

Hanoi Rejects New Peace Feelers Through Cambodia

SAIGON (UPI)—The Vietnamese Communists have rejected peace feelers from western diplomats relayed through Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia, it was disclosed today.

The western diplomats were identified only as "white skinned gentlemen" by Sihanouk. He stressed, however, they were not Americans.

The disclosure came in a broadcast of a lengthy speech made by Sihanouk at the Jan. 1 opening of the 23rd Buddhist Congress in Phnom Penh, capital of Cambodia.

It went unnoticed because his remarks were carried only on domestic Cambodian radio.

But according to a text of the broadcast, which was recorded and received here today, Sihanouk said the western diplomats asked him to approach Hanoi and the Viet Cong and find out if they were willing to negotiate a settlement to the Vietnam war.

"In response to their request, I have met with the North Vietnamese—that is their ministers—and I also have met with the minister of the National Liberation Front (political arm of the Viet Cong)," Sihanouk said.

"I have asked them whether they are willing to cease the struggle and accept negotiations, for I know that they have suffered a lot following the American bombing of Hanoi and other cities, killing a large number of children, women, old men and others.

"I have asked how can they fight further pain and suffering. Can they stop the fighting and accept talks?"

Sihanouk said the Communists replied in these words:

"We cannot accept negotiations, for even if there are negotiations they will not grant us independence and freedom. They will not allow us to reunify the country, that is, to reunify the north and south.

"They want negotiations in order to perpetuate the division of Vietnam with half the country belonging to them. So we cannot accept negotiations."

Four Parkways Recommended To Legislature

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The State Park Commission yesterday recommended the legislature designate four parkways totaling 177 miles.

They are a three-county Tahoe Parkway, 47 miles, from U.S. 50 at Echo Summit to Interstate 80 at Truckee; Avenue of the Giants; 38 miles, in the Humboldt County redwoods; Skyline Boulevard, 40 miles, San Mateo, Santa Clara and Santa Cruz counties, and Mulholland Drive, 52 miles, Los Angeles County.

The parkways would include turnouts to roadside picnic areas and trails for hiking, bicycling and horseback riding.

Nine Perish In Row House Fire

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A fire that engulfed a three-story row house in a ball of flame killed nine members of one family today, police said. Three others were injured or were unaccounted for, according to police.

The fire was a few blocks from Girard College in the North Philadelphia section of the city.

Marin Pair On Regional Panel

Two Marin officials will participate in a public information conference on Bay Area regional government scheduled for Jan. 28 in Phelan Hall at the University of San Francisco.

Sausalito Mayor Mel Wax will moderate a panel examining regionalization from a municipal and county viewpoint at 10 a.m. Alan Bruce, Marin County administrator, will be a panelist. The conference will last until 5 p.m.

Counsel's Office Still Operating

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The State Consumer Counsel's Office in the State Capitol is still functioning, but on a smaller scale and on a tentative basis.

Mrs. Kay Valory of Lafayette, a faithful supporter of Ronald Reagan, was appointed acting consumer counsel to succeed Helen E. Nelson of Mill Valley. Governor Reagan said she would head a study team to investigate the value of the office. During the campaign, Reagan had indicated he doubted the necessity of the office.

William Clark, cabinet secretary, announced an immediate cutback in the consumer counsel's staff that would reduce the cost of operation by $40,000 to $50,000.

Recall Of Caster Oil Is Ordered

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The Food and Drug Administration (EDA) has ordered a West Coast manufactuere to recall all shipments of castor oil after it was discovered the bottles contained poisonous camphorated oil.

The EDA said yesterday it issued the order to Howe & Co. of Seattle when a young woman was hospitalized after drinking the mislabeled product. The company distributes the oil to the states of Washington and Alaska.

Magazine Rejects Final Kennedy Plea

HAMBURG, Germany (UPI) —A West German magazine has turned down a last-ditch appeal by a close friend of Mrs. John F. Kennedy to stop serialization of an uncut version of William Manchester's controversial book, "The Death of a President."

"There is no cause for abridging or changing the manuscript," Henri Mannen, second and third parts of the series.

Stern, which has a circulation of more than two million in Germany, will publish the second installment Tuesday. Copies of the magazine are available in many U.S. cities.
be "very upset" about the plans of the German magazine to continue publishing the serialization which describes events during and after the assassination of President Kennedy in 1963.

Stern has already published the first installment of Manchester's book last week and it was sold out in two days. But the passages in the serialization said to be offensive to Mrs. Kennedy were contained in the chief editor of Stern, said last night.

He made the statement after a two-and-a-half hour meeting with William Vanden Heuvel, an attorney and close friend who flew here yesterday morning in an attempt to persuade Nannen to delete certain passages to which Mrs. Kennedy had objected.

Stern bought an unabridged version of the serialization for $72,000, but refused to cut the sections which Look magazine agreed to delete under threat of a lawsuit by the former First Lady. William Attwood, editor-in-chief of Look, also took part in Friday's talks with Nannen.

Negligence Probe Made In Big Fire

NEW YORK (AP) — Investigations were under way on several fronts today to determine if negligence led to yesterday's gas explosion and fire that leveled a Queens residential area.

City, state and county agencies began looking into statements by residents who said they were brushed off when they complained about gas odors last week to the Department of Health and the Brooklyn Union Gas Co., which services the area.

No one was injured in the fire which demolished nine frame homes and badly damaged eight others in a drab working-class neighborhood of Jamaica, Queens, about two miles north of John F. Kennedy International Airport.

Mayor John V. Lindsay ordered James Marcus, commissioner of water supply, gas and electricity, to investigate the charges. The city fire marshal's office, the State Public Service Commission and detectives from the Queens district attorney's office also were conducting separate probes.

"It is difficult to determine if serious complaints were made to the gas company in advance of the explosion and fire," Lindsay said.

About 300 people were driven from their homes.

Reagan Names License Aide

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Henry M. Shine Jr., an official of the National Assn. of Home Builders was named director of professional and vocational standards by Gov. Reagan yesterday.

Shine, 45, a Sacramento resident, assumes the $21,500 a year job Feb. 1. He is director of the home builders' National Housing Center.

His Department of Professional and Vocational Standards is in charge of licensing and regulating businesses and professions ranging from physicians to television repairmen. He replaces Harold J. (Butch) Powers.

Military Chief Begins Togo Rule

LOME, Togo (AP) — Togo's new military chief began his authoritarian rule today faced with the same conflicts which he says crippled the civil regime the army overthrew Friday.

In an interview with the Associated Press Lt. Col. Etienne Guassingbe Eyadema said it was "in the superior interest of the nation that I took over power" in the bloodless coup.

Israel Says Terrorists Explode Bomb

JERUSALEM, Israel (UPI)—Israel said today Syrian terrorists set off two explosive charges at an Israeli border water pumping station near the Lebanese frontier.

An Israeli military communique said the two charges exploded last night near the "defensive wall" of the Israeli pumping station of Dishon just one mile from the Lebanese border. The wall was slightly damaged, the communique said.

Three other explosive charges were discovered in the same area and disarmed, the communique said. The incident was the latest of numerous border clashes reported by Israel and Syria this year.

The Israeli note blamed the incident on Syria whom Israel had accused earlier this week of escalating border incidents between the two countries in a bid to infiltrate and take over demilitarized frontier zones.

This latest incident followed a two hour gun battle between Syrian and Israeli tanks, machine guns and troops Wednesday. Both were part of a series of continuing clashes during the last few months that have kept tensions high along the Syrian-Israeli frontier.

The Versatile Viburnum

Gardening Page

If variety is the spice of life, gardeners can find it in the viburnum family.

This versatile group of shrubs, both evergreen and deciduous, offers a dozen or more garden forms and the Marinite who doesn't try at least one or two of them is missing out.

All the viburnums are showy and a good percentage of them produce intensely fragrant flowers. These latter are apt to be in bloom any time from late fall to late spring, depending on variety. And when they are, your garden can be a very nice place, indeed.

THE PERFUME of the fragrant viburnums is a beautiful thing in itself and worth planting for its own sake.

There is a native American viburnum, but the varieties of interest to Californians come either from Asia or Europe. They are not particular about soil, though a loamy, well drained soil, is usually recommended. Drainage is more important than the type of soil you have—drainage and water.

Viburnums don't need as much water as camellias and azaleas, but they should not be left without it during our long, dry summers.

ONE OF THE nicest viburnums to meet for the first time is the evergreen, Sweet Viburnum.

As the name suggests, its white flowers are fragrant. They are carried in late spring, to be followed in summer by clusters of red fruit that later turns black. The foliage is dark green and has a leathery quality which makes a high, wide and handsome background for the garden setting.

Another fine evergreen member of the family is the Leather Leaf Viburnum.

IT IS NOT as tall as the Sweet Viburnum, but still a handsome shrub for borders and backgrounds. Its white blooms are earlier than the above, coming in April and May and are only slightly less fragrant. The fruit clusters turn black faster than do those of the Sweet Viburnum, also.

Leather Leaf Viburnum derives its name from the leathery, wrinkled leaves, which are deep green on top and light- colored and felt-like on the underside.

One of the all-time favorite viburnums is the Laurestinus Viburnum, a medium to large shrub with shiny, deep green foliage and flat heads of pinkish-white flowers in winter. A smaller, more compact form of Laurestinus has recently been introduced and should be even more popular than the parent.

AMONG DECIDUOUS viburnums the Burkwood Viburnum is probably the the most widely grown in California.

Along the coast, this is almost an evergreen, holding some of its handsome, dark green leaves through the winter and shedding the rest for only the shortest time. Flowers are pinkish-white and fragrant, filling the garden with their sweetness in late winter.

The second most popular of deciduous viburnums is the Carlesi Viburnum, also called Korean Allspice.

This is a shrub of considerable refinement, three or four feet high and spreading somewhat more than that. Its deep green foliage turns to shades of red in fall, giving one even more reason for planting it—as if the intensely fragrant spring blooms weren't reason enough.

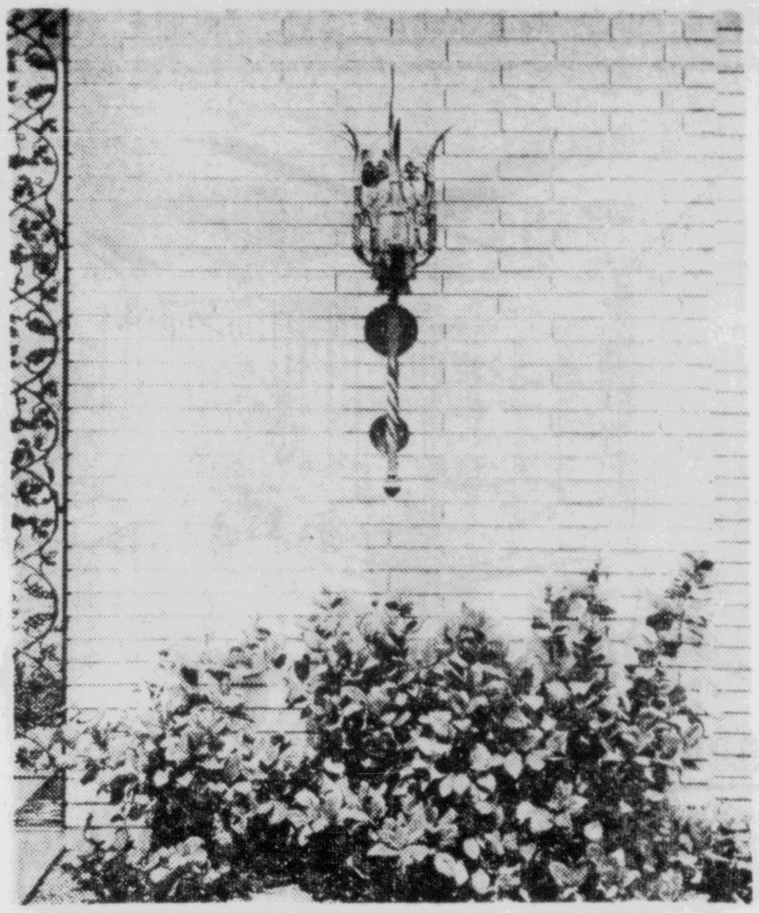
SO MUCH FOR the fragrant viburnums. There are also members of the family which have no fragrance, and of them, two, at least, deserve special mention. Both are commonly called "Snowballs" and both are deciduous.

First of these is the Common Snowball or Eastern Snowball, a medium to large shrub producing literally masses of round, white blooms. The foliage of this one turns to crimson in fall, one of our best fall-color producers.

The second Snowball is the Japanese Snowball, also with round clusters of white blooms, though there are slightly tinted with green.

Both Snowballs are highly recommended and deserve a place in your garden.

BOTANICAL NOTE: The Sweet Viburnum is offered as Virbunum odoratissimum; Leather Leaf Viburnum is Viburnum rhytidophyllum; Laurestinus is Viburnum tinus; Burkwood Viburnum is Viburnum Burkwoodii; Carlesi Viburnum is Viburnum carlesi; Eastern Snowball is Viburnum apulis sterile; Japanese Snowball is Viburnum tomentosum sterile.



PROVIDING A pleasant contrast with the brick background is this Sandankwa Viburnum, one of the evergreen members of a very versatile family of shrubs. Fragrant pinkish flowers are borne in clusters during the early summer on this all-around shrub. (Photo courtesy of California Assn. of Nurserymen)

Let's Plant A Rose—And Let's Do It Right

During the next few weeks, while the dormant planting season is in full swing, many will be planting a rose for the first time.

If you are one of the many, a word of advice from the California Assn. of Nurserymen might come in handy at this time.

THERE IS A natural reticence which all of us have to overcome when trying something new and the feeling is not reduced when you encounter your first dormant rose.

"That's a rose?" you ask, as your nurseryman offers up what looks like a loose bundle of sticks. You wonder how such a device can grow into the most beautiful of all flowering shrubs.

What your nurseryman sells you is a rose bush with the top cut back and the bareroots dangling. It doesn't look like much, but if you take reasonable care in planting it, your rewards will be plenty.

FIRST, BETWEEN purchase and planting your rose should be kept moist—or at least the roots should. Immediate planting is preferred, but if there's to be a delay, simply bury the roots in a convenient place in moist soil.

Remember that roses like sun—at least half a day's sun and preferably more. Choose any well-drained garden bed that meets the sun requirements and dig holes that are 18 inches to two feet deep by about 18 inches in diameter.

The soil at planting time should be workable—that is, not too wet. Mound some of it in the center of the hole, forming a cone of loose soil so that when the bare roots of the rose are spread out over it, the rose will be at the proper planting level.

PROPER LEVEL is arrived at by locating the bud union (ask your nurseryman to show you this) just above final soil level.

Before setting the rose in, trim off broken roots, if there are any, back to sound wood. Then, holding the rose with one hand, gradually fill in around the roots, firming the soil to eliminate any air pockets. When you've filled and firmed, water thoroughly and your rose is planted.

Do not fertilize until after the plant starts to grow.

To Prevent Damage To Your Tree

By checking your shade trees for weak branch crotches, you may be able to prevent mutilation or destruction of a valuable tree.

Most tree branches develop and grow more or less horizontally from the trunk with a upward sweep as they increase in length. Normally the angle between the branch and the trunk is wide, and the crotch is shaped somewhat like the letter U. These branch crotches are strong and rarely split even in severe storms.

In contrast, sometimes branches grow upright from the point of development, almost parallel with the central stem and often compete with it for leadership. The angle at the crotch of the branch and main stem is narrow and the crotch is V-shaped.

Such crotches are weak and are likely to split during storms.

Recommendations of the National Arborist Assn. are that V-shaped branch crotches be strengthened artificially. This may be done by installing one or more sections of tree screw-rod at the crotch and placing a system of supporting cables in the upper part of the tree's crown. A competent arborist should be employed to do this work.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Plant shade trees now while bareroot stock is available. Your nurseryman will recommend a variety.

✓ For gardens that need redesigning, January and February are good months to transplant shrubbery and to plant new varieties.

✓ Spray peach trees and nectarines with a dormant spray to prevent leaf curl. See your nurseryman for the proper spray material.

✓ Many hardy perennials such as Shasta daisies, phlox and perennial asters may be divided now.

✓ Gladiolas are available for planting or soon will be in most areas. Dust the corms with an insecticide before planting to avoid later trouble from thrips. For the biggest and best blooms, plant top grade bulbs.

SUPER SERPENT OF CEMENT

What with Super Bowls, super-stars and Supermen, children in San Rafael's recreation program for tots were delighted to tackle the job of fashioning a "super" serpent in Santa Margarita Valley Park off Del Ganado Road. It's 20 feet long and pink in color. Suzanne Cutler (on ground), seemingly was explaining a construction problem to Laura Mogerman, Mary Anne Cutcher and Karen Mayer, (left to right). In background, Brian Cuneo, (left) and Bobby Hoffman worked while the women dwadled. Scott Tilden, city parks landscape architect, designed the serpent. (Independent-Journal photo by Bob Hax.)

50th Wedding Anniversary Is Celebrated By Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Ballantyne of San Rafael yesterday observed 50 years of married life that has spanned a continent and two long careers.

Their formula for happiness for any young couple planning marriage, according to Mrs. Ballantyne, is to be found in one's attitude rather than material things: "Contentment and being able to look on the bright side of life."

Ballantyne, a native of Denver, met his wife, who was born in Arlington, Mass., in Hoboken, N.J., where she was a proofreader for a printing company and he a conductor on the Delaware and Lackawanna Railroad.

He remained with the railroad for over 40 years, retiring in 1953, when they moved to Marin County to be near their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Mervyn L. Bain of San Rafael and granddaughter Janet Bain.

On coming to Marin, Mrs. Ballantyne continued her career as a proofreader, joining Phillips and Van Orden of San Francisco, printers of telephone books, like her employers in Hoboken. She retired about 10 years ago.

Ballantyne, 78, and Mrs. Ballantyne, 70, are in the best of health, "just enjoying each day as it comes and taking occasional trips" from their home at 124 Merrydale Road.

Last night they celebrated their anniversary at a dinner at Sabella's Restaurant with the Bains and Mrs. Gladys Lowney of San Anselmo, Mrs. Ballantyne's sister.

peared in Peking last night, said President Liu had defended his sending of "work teams" about the country last year.

CONFESSION

Posters put up by Mao's Red Guard supporters last December said Liu had confessed at a Central Committee meeting in October to dispatching work teams opposed to Mao's purge while Mao was absent from Peking for about 50 days before last July 18.

The 68-year-old Liu, Mao's comrade in arms and close adviser during the Chinese Communist revolution, had been considered Mao's successor before the purge developed last summer. Lin Piao is now thought to be Mao's heir.

Running Halts At A Drive-In

The running stopped for Barkwan Chang in a drive-in eating place at Ignacio.

The Chinese restaurant worker was found asleep in a car Thursday and could speeak no English when questioned by sheriff's deputy Ted Hughes.

Chang was brought to the main office and, through an interpreter, said he had entered the United States illegally through Mexicali, Mexico, a year ago and had been on the run ever since.

He worked in Chinese restaurants until he was forced to move on for fear of being found out, reported Hughes. Chang was handed over to the immigration authorities for questioning.

Exchange Student's Interest In U.S. Comes From His Father

Michele (Mike) Tucci, American Field Service Exchange student from Italy at Tamalpais High School, first became interested in the United States when his father told him of the kindness of an American sergeant who captured him in 1943.

"The sergeant who captured him promised that, when he reached Rome, he would inform his parents about my father's condition," Mike said. "So it happened. The sergeant, when he reached Rome in 1944, after one year, brought my grandparents the first news about my father.

"The event struck me very much," said the 18-year-old Roman.

A frank admirer of America "for the solidarity that the states showed other people, especially during and after World War II," he observed that "human dignity" survives science and technology in the United States. He wants to be a nuclear physicist.

Speaking with animated gestures, Mike said he was surprised to find his favorite food in America is Chinese. Italian dishes, of course, share the spotlight with Chinese. He enjoys American pizza because it is not so heavily laced with cheese as the Roman version.

His hosts during the year are the J. Stanley Woodwards of 30 Ashford Avenue, Mill Valley. The most exciting facet of his visit, Mike said, is having an "American brother," Steven Woodward, also 18 and a senior at Tam. The other Woodward children are Claudia, 16, Joan, 12, and Barbara, 14.

At home in Rome are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rodolfo Tucci, and two sisters, Roberta, 16, and Silvia, 5. His father is vice director of the city's central telephone exchange.

Mike said it was difficult to imagine what living here would be like, but since his arrival in September he feels "America and my Mill Valley family are so wonderful, I plan to return in two years to study at the University of California." Under terms of the exchange program, he cannot return to the United States for two years.

Mike particularly likes the variety of classes at Tam in contrast to the more formal education of his Italian school, which allowed little time for relaxation or extra-curricular activities. Despite his devotion to physics, he enjoys all sports, including skin diving, wrestling and hunting. And he likes the Beatles.

"Italian opera?" He grinned, "well, I would say no. There is something about the beat, I believe."

Mike enthusiastically recalled Christmas, "but the nativity scene in music and thought is more prominent in our Christmas celebration."

Mrs. William Pemberton of Mill Valley, president of the American Field Service chapter at Tam, recalled that Mike spoke very little English when he arrived in the fall, "but has learned amazingly well."

"It is still not easy," Mike said, "even though I do better in the morning than in the evening." He studied English for six years in Rome.

"Brother" Steve Woodward said Mike talks in his sleep in rapid-fire Italian, and observed that if he could stay awake long enough, he would be able to learn Italian by just listening to Mike's colorful nocturnal conversations.

"In the American life, I especially like the ideals of freedom that are present in every display of American people," Mike said. "As other people in the world, Italians owe today's prosperity to the help of the United States."

Colored Paint Is The Best

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI)—Tinted or colored paint used on exterior wood withstands weathering much better than white paint, 16 years of experiments at the Pennsylvania State University indicate.

In the long-range tests, reserchers found that when repainting with tinted or colored paints, single-coat applications usually are sufficient. Two coats were needed when using exterior white paints.

Oscar A. Kimmel, assistant professor of farm mechanics, says repainting of exterior wood is most effective if it is done just before film cracks develop. The trick here, he adds, is to watch closely for first signs of cracks and repaint as promptly as possible.

Falls From Car

Eric Jarvis, 18, of 412 Bee Street, Sausalito, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital with head injuries suffered Thursday when he fell from a car in the 1700 Block of Bridgeway.

explanation was that her husband had interrupted a prowler who was on the point of breaking into a house he thought empty. "I can see no other reason for the attack," she said. "My husband is not a playboy. He stays out only occasionally to entertain business friends.

"We have been going over it time after time to try and discover someone, somewhere who might have had a grudge against him. We have come up with nothing.

"He is in a competitive business but even his rivals were the first to call up to ask how he was," she said.

The couple have one son, William, who lives in San Francisco. His two children, aged six and nine, were staying with their grandparents at the time but were not awakened by the attack.

Sheriff's deputies found a 21-inch long pipe fashioned with a handle of iron, but Inspector A. V. Menjou, in charge of the investigation, said he was not sure if this was used as a weapon in the attack.

Menjou said today: "The case is still under investigation. We have put quite a lot of time in on this and the work is still going on."

Asked if he was any nearer solving the identity of the attacker, he said: "I can't make any comment on that at this stage."

The Atwoods are well-known at the Loch Lomond Yacht Harbor where they have kept a boat since moving into their nearby home about 18 months ago.

Atwood's physician at Marin General Hospital, Dr. J. Alderson, told him yesterday he could expect to be discharged about next Wednesday.

Meanwhile, his wife said she will have a private detective keeping watch at the house in case the attacker decides to return.

Drath, a San Rafael building contractor, who ran unsuccessfully for the Democratic nomination in the First Congressional District last June, said an early March arrival in North Vietnam is planned. He hoped about $25,000 in medical supplies could be purchased in Japan for delivery.

Drath said the group hoped to set up a Quaker relief mission in North Vietnam upon arrival.

He revealed plans to continue around the world after leaving North Vietnam to speak in principal cities against the war.

Woman Taken To Hospital

A 65-year-old San Rafael woman was taken to Marin General Hospital yesterday after she was found unconscious in her home from a possible overdose of drugs, police said.

A housemaid and a pool service employee found Mrs. Evelyn McIlwaine lying in a her bed at 22 Kinross Drive about 8:45 a.m. Police found a bottle of drugs on a bed table.

She was reported in good condition today in the hospital.

Agenda Includes Liaison Report

Liaison between Fairfax City Council and city commissions will be discussed at an adjourned meeting of the city council Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Women's Club.

The meeting will begin with a closed session to interview applicants for the design review board. Appointment of members to the park and recreation commission to fill unexpired vacancies will be announced.

Plea Entry Set On Auto Theft

Clarice Linda Trowbridge, 27, of San Pablo, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday on a felony charge of stealing a car owned by Avis Rent-A-Car in San Rafael last Sept 29.

She was arrested by San Rafael police yesterday, and will enter her plea at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Purse Is Stolen

Someone took $40 from her purse while she was out with the children at recess, Rita Marie Laherty, 36, fifth grade teacher at Hamilton School on Hamilton Air Force Base, reported Thursday to Novato police.

OBITUARIES

Walter D. Mann Dies At Age 82

Walter D. Mann, retired electrician and a resident of Marin for 75 of his 82 years, died yesterday at a local hospital after a lengthy illness.

A native of San Francisco, he came to this county with his parents in 1889 and attended the old grammar school on Mission Avenue at B Street, later going on to San Rafael High School.

He worked for the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. for 50 years, retiring about 20 years ago. Mann, a widower, lived at 915 Irwin Street.

He is survived by a son, Walter Mann of San Rafael; three stepdaughters, Mae Morrissey of San Francisco and Gertrude Venitz and Myrtle Valle of San Rafael; five grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

The Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael.

Requiem Mass will be offered at 9:30 a.m. Monday at St. Raphael's Church, San Rafael. Burial will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

AMY E. DIAMOND

Amy E. Dimond, 70, of 54 Hillsdale Avenue, San Anselmo, died in a local hospital yesterday after a month's illness.

A native of Chicago, Ill., Mrs. Dimond lived in San Francisco before moving to Marin County about 15 years ago.

Her husband, Arthur Dimond, is a retired liquor store manager.

Mrs. Dimond is survived by her husband; a daughter, Mrs. Marion E. Jinks of San Anselmo, and four grandchildren.

Funeral will be Monday at 9:30 a.m. at the Chapel of the Hills, San Anselmo. Burial will be private.

Rosary will be recited at the funeral home tomorrow at 8 p.m. The family prefers memorial gifts to the Marin County Chapter of the American Cancer Society.

JOHN SWARD

John Sward of 36 Grove Lane, San Anselmo, was pronounced dead on arrival at Marin General Hospital last night after becoming ill suddenly at his home. He was 90 years old.

Asst. County Coroner Eugene R. Fontaine said cause of death is unknown. An autopsy was performed, he said.

San Anselmo firemen were called to the Sward home at 6 p.m., and applied resuscitators until an ambulance arrived to take him to the hospital.

A native of Bloomington, Ill., Sward lived about 50 years in Marin County and 60 years in California.

He was a bricklaying contractor before retiring, at the beginning of World War II. He was a member of Marin Lodge No. 191, Free and Accepted Masons and a gold card member of the Bricklayers Union in San Francisco.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Virginia McClintock of San Francisco; two sons, Jack Sward of San Anselmo and William C. Sward of Palo Alto; nine grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements are pending at Harry M. Williams Mortuary in San Rafael.

FRANK P. McGIVNEY

Services for Frank P. McGivney, 76, of 507 Bonita Street, Sausalito, will be at 11 a.m. Monday in Golden Gate National Cemetery, San Bruno.

McGivney, a retired civil service engineer, died Tuesday in a San Francisco Hospital. Born in Connecticut, he lived in Marin County 22 years.

Survivors are his wife, Clara; a daughter, Mrs. Ruth A. Roberts of California, and a sister, Catherine, of Shelton, Conn.

The California Funeral Service, San Francisco, is in charge of arrangements.

LEWIS SABLOSKY

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Lewis Sablosky, 81, a pioneer in the American motion picture industry, died yesterday. He once was affiliated with First National Pictures, the production firm which is credited with discovering actress Mary Pickford.

College Employee Hurt In Accident

A College of Marin employee was injured Thursday fhen his car collided with that of an airman from Hamilton Air Force Base at 10:55 p.m.

California Highway Patrol said Ernest Prescott Stokes Jr., 32, of Petaluma, driving north on Highway 101 near Diablo Avenue in Novato, struck the rear of a car driven by M Sgt. Robert Joseph May, 37, of 141 Kenwood Court, Novato, then swerved across the road into the divider and hit the guard rail. Stokes, a programmer for the college district, was treated at Marin General Hospital for scalp cuts. He was cited by the patrol for following too closely.

Bicycle Injuries

Michael K. Maley, 9, of 31 Trellis Drive, San Rafael, suffered fractured ribs and scrapes yesterday when his bicycle was struck by a car driven by Mrs. Annaray Blabon, 19, of 139 Mabry Way, Santa Venetia, at Trellis Drive and Montecillo Road, San Rafael, according to San Rafael police, who said he was pedaling across the intersection in the crosswalk when struck.

Meeting Is Rest

Next week's adjourned meeting of the Ross Town Council will be at 8 p.m. on Wednesday and not Thursday as reported in yesterday's Independent-Journal.

The town hall meeting will be a public hearing on extension of the Corte Madera Creek Flood Control project into Ross.

BRIGHT IDEAS

Abstracts On The Ceiling Enliven The Living Room

By JOE JONES

It's not as crazy as you think!

For many years the Impressionists, the Abstractionists, the Nonobjectives painted and starved — objects of derision and scorn. And although people laughed (and some still do), these painters had a great influence on design in America.

It has been felt in many fields—textiles, advertising, industrial design and architecture.

If you live in a "modern" home or apartment, you, too, can lean on these men to enhance your interiors with paint. You can be a Kandinsky or a Mondrian.

With a little planning, a roller, masking tape and non-drip paint, you can make your living room a modern work of art.

The ceiling is the center of interest in this case. Forget the walls—paint them a neutral gray or white. Go to a print shop and buy a Mondrian or Kandinsky print and this is your inspiration. Simplify it and paint it on your ceiling. Or better still, create your own abstract design and you'll be even more proud of yourself.

Use bright, clean colors and you'll be amazed at the dramatic effects you will achieve.

Plan carefully what you are doing beforehand. With a ruler and pencil lay out the areas to be painted and mark them for color. Mask carefully. Paint carefully.

You will have a work of art all your own.

When You Decorate, Why Not Be Different?

Handyman's Pages

What better place to be different than in your own home?

Feel like painting one wall a different color than the others? Go ahead and do it.

Feel like mixing traditional with contemporary furniture? Go ahead and do it.

Feel like arranging the paintings on your wall in a careless fashion rather than an orderly arrangement? Go ahead and do it.

IF ANY OR all of these things satisfies you, never mind whether you think it's correct. Because decorating standards, once unreasonibly rigid, are flexible enough to permit almost anything you want these days.

There is a growing recognition that it is far more important to satisfy the desires of the occupants of a home than to meet set requirements, which change over the years anyhow.

There was a time when you would have been thought something of a "kook" if you had painted one wall of your living room a different color than the others. Not now. It's an accepted way of creating a pleasing effect.

BUT ACCEPTED or not, you should try it—or almost anything else—if you feel so inclined.

If you can't find the courage to put a vibrant color on one wall of an otherwise sedate living room, experiment with one of the other rooms—the kitchen, the family room, one of the bedrooms, even the bathroom.

What's the worst that can happen? You won't like it? Nobody can stop you from repainting it, either another color or the original color.

STILL ANOTHER way to get a single different wall is to use a different type of material.

A paneled wall, using random-width wood panels or plywood or plastic-surfaced hardboard, can dress up a room whose three other walls are painted plaster or wallboard. A wall of laminated plastic, the kind you ordinarily find on coffee tables and other furniture, creates an individual and pleasant effect.

We have even seen a single wall of a recreation room finished with ordinary resilient floor tiles.

ANOTHER SUCH room had three walls of birch-faced plywood sheets and one wall of striated plywood squares. The latter were stained a dark color to lend a remarkably effective contrast to the light tone of the birch.

The next time you decide to redecorate or refinish a room, spend a little time visiting your local lumber yard or buillding supply material. Look over the wide variety of materials now available and, if one of them strikes your fancy, consider using it on a single wall. It's one way to start you thinking in the right direction.

Sure, it may cost you a little extra money. Know anything good that doesn't?

IF PROPERLY DONE

Yes, Lacquer Can Be Brushed On

Prediction:

The following information about the application of lacquer with a brush will bring some disagreement from professional wood finishers who believe that lacquer can be applied properly only with a sprayer.

It happens every time.

THIS IS THE advance reply:

A good lacquer finish can be obtained with a brush if a "brushing" lacquer is used: if it is thinned at least 50 per cent with lacquer thinner; if it is applied with broad strokes; if no attempt is made to go over the same area twice; if several thin coats rather than one or two thick coats are put on; and if a little practicing is done first on scrap wood until the knack is acquired.

Each of those points is important. But none is more important than the advice not to go over the same area twice. That's because lacquer dries so quickly.

IN FACT, the drying begins the moment the lacquer is applied. Thus, you can not go back and brush out a section you thought did not come out exactly right — even if you do it within a few seconds after the application. Try it and you'll get a botched-up result, caused by the action of the new lacquer on the coat that so quickly has begun to set.

To avoid trouble, brush quickly and surely, with no attempt to return to any area. The next coat will take care of a tiny spot you may have missed, because each application sinks into the previous one rather than resting on it.

A very light sanding between coats is our recommendation, although there is one school of thought (in wood finishing, there is always more than one school of thought) which believes that only the last coat of lacquer should be sanded.

THE FAST-DRYING qualities which make the above precautions necessary have their good points. Lacquer does not pick up dust as much as does varnish, for instance. Also, several coats can be applied in a single day.

While on the subject of lacquer and varnish, the latter can be applied over the former, but the former can not be applied over the latter.

Never mind trying to figure that out. It merely means that you can apply varnish over lacquer, but you can not apply lacquer over varnish.

THE THINNER used in lacquer has a tendency to lift the varnish, much in the same manner as varnish remover.

Because lacquer is volatile as well as noxious, it should be applied only in an area where there is plenty of ventilation and no open flame.

Handsome Panel

Handsome way to handle a pass-through between kitchen and dining room is to panel the wall in a finely grained softwood, then make a matching pull-down door to close off the opening when not in use. Door should fit exactly into paneling so joints don't show, push up inside wall when pass-through is needed.

When A Louver Door Is Needed

Certain rooms seem to call for connecting doors. For example, the bedroom and dressing room, and the kitchen and dining area.

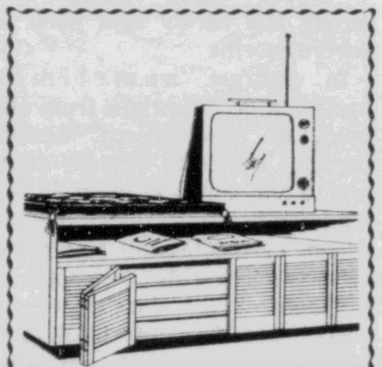
Pretty, practical louver doors are often the answer.

As connecting doors, louvers have two special assets: a slim, classic look that makes them equally appropriate for contemporary or traditional decor—such as a modern kitchen on one side and a formal dining room on the other; and a slat design that offers both privacy and a sense of "openness." This maintains the separateness of the rooms while tying them together.

Modern louver doors of ponderosa pine are available in stock sizes and in several styles. There are full louvers and partial louvers—those which have louvers in the top half and a closed wood panel on the bottom.

A popular type of connecting unit is the folding louver door. These fold back against themselves when opened, and require practically no floor clearance. They are used in areas which cannot easily accommodate the swing of a regulation door.

Louvers are also used as closet and wardrobe doors. The free flow of air between the louvers helps keep clothes fresh and protects them from mildew.



EXTRA seating, shelves for magazines and big books, enclosed space for table leaves and pads are all built into this stand for the portable TV. Unit is just a box and can be made of pine with inexpensive louvered shutters for doors along base.

Chiropractor Asks Entry In Medicare

CHICAGO (UPI)—The president of the International Chiropractors Assn. (ICA) has asked that his field be included in the federal government's Medicare program.

L. W. Rutherford, D. C., of Eugene, Ore., said yesterday, "The Medicare program should be expanded to include all legally recognized health professions." This, he said, included chiropody.

He chided the American Medical Assn., which is opposed to chiropractic as "an unscientific cult," for its opposition to Medicare.

"Not being able to stop it (Medicare), they now embrace it as their own and attempt to dictate its terms and course as if they had been its godfather," Rutherford said. "How short and fickle do they think is memory?"

As opening speaker at the first annual National Congress on Chiropractic, Rutherford said, "Chiropractic services should be included in all state and federal hospitals. This most certainly should include chiropractic care for our veterans." He said his group believes "that the basic right of each individual is his freedom of choice of health care."

The two-day meeting was called by the ICA to "present to the public, eminent educators, governmental dignitaries and thought leaders from other professional groups a candid appraisal of chiropractic today."

Stallion Parade Set In February

An all-breed stallion parade, sponsored by the Redwood Empire Appaloosa Horse Assn., will be held at 9 a.m. Feb. 15 in the covered judging arena at the Sonoma County Fairgrounds in Santa Rosa.

Purpose of the parade, according to John Tornai of Novato, chairman of the event, is to display stallions available for breeding this season.

RETIRES—Edward C. Ward has retired as foreman of the Electric Shop at Hamilton Air Force Base after 30 years. He has seen the base develop from a small bomber base to the center of West Coast defense. He played a major role in developing modern "strobe" runway lighting at Hamilton. He and his wife, Mary, live at 351 Forbes Avenue, San Rafael.

Police Guard Another In Wilson Case

BERKELEY (AP)—Police are guarding a second woman linked with the Painters Union, two of whose officials were killed by shotgun blasts last year.

She is Margaret A. Miller, 46, Berkeley, editor of the Bay Area Painters News.

She said she received a death threat at her home Wednesday. She called it an attempt to prevent publication of the paper which she called "a very effective voice for the reform movement in the Painters Union."

She was named editor by Dow Wilson, San Francisco Painters Union leader before he was mowed down by a shotgun last spring.

Mrs. Miller said a telephoned threat recalled "what happened to Mrs. Ward" and warned Mrs. Miller "is next."

Mrs. Max Ward of Hayward, wife of the triggerman in the union murders, was the target of a shotgun blast Sunday. It missed. She has been under police guard since. Mrs. Ward is scheduled to be a witness in the murder trial under way in San Francisco of Ben Rasnick of Oakland, an international representative of the union.

Cash Box Looted

Burglars pried open a tin section of the National Auto Glass Co. office at 915 Lincoln Avenue, San Rafael, Wednesday night and stole $100 from a metal cash box inside a filing cabinet, manager Robert Zifko told police Thursday.

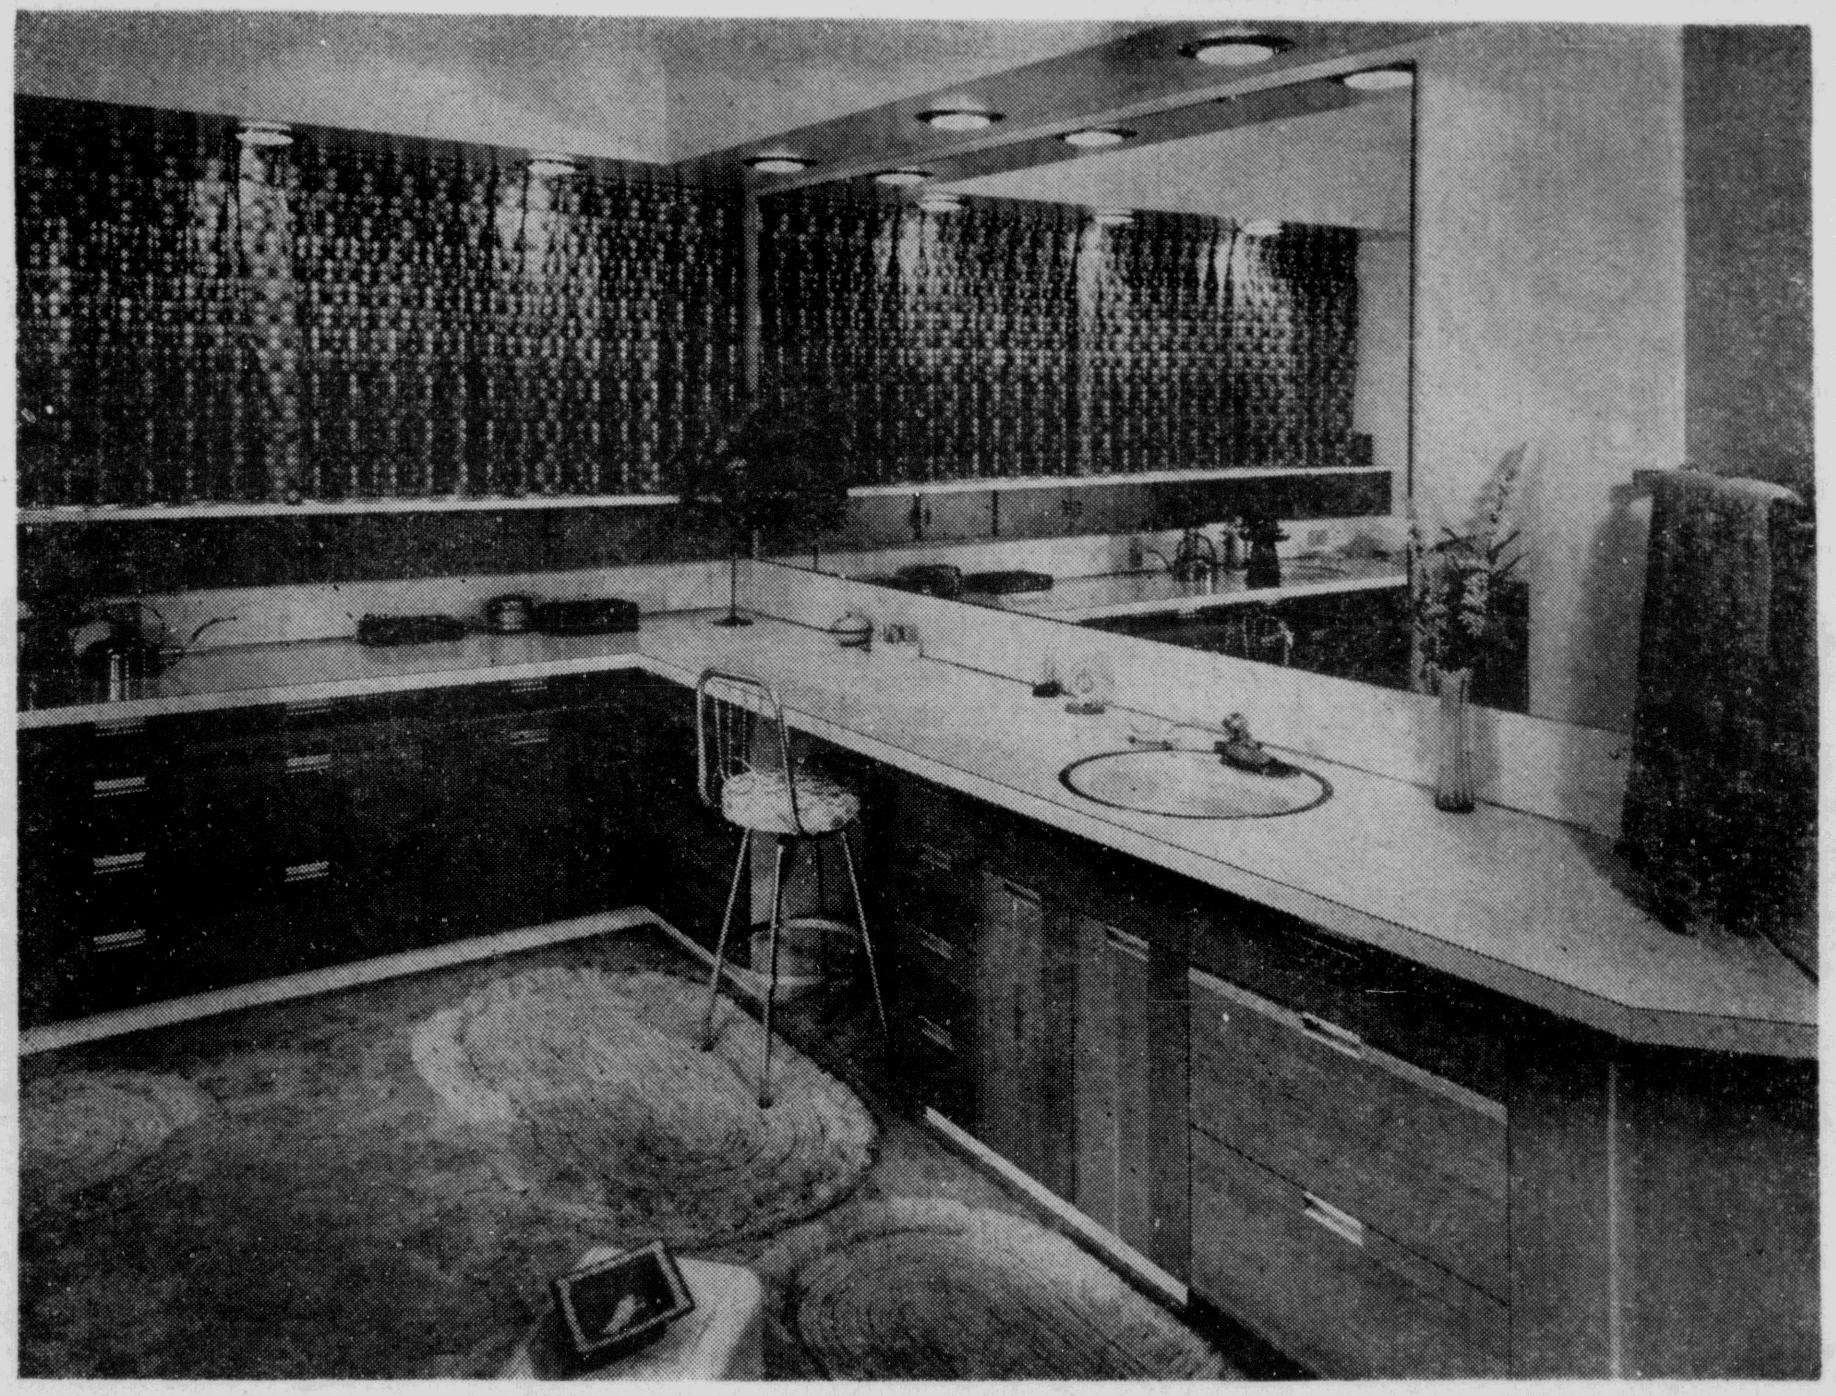
BEST-SELLER WANT-ADS



LUXURIOUS LOOKING but mighty practical is this master bathroom featuring storage tailored for every need, from hairpins to super-size towels. Cabinetwork also keys color scheme with carpet, while curtains pick up the orange-golds of the solid, edge-glued Douglas fir. Idea is acceptable to many homes.

The Bathroom Pampers With Practicality

Of all the rooms in the house, it's the bath which has changed most in recent years.

As a matter of fact, it wasn't so long ago when the bathroom wasn't even in the house.

Today it's practically a palace in its own right. It may have music piped in to accompany the shower-stall baritone. There may be a fully equipped writing desk alongside the tub for those who like to catch up on correspondence while they soak. There may even be a sun-flooded patio built at one end.

THE AVERAGE modern bath, however, is designed mostly to pamper with practicality—the sensible luxuries.

There's storage, for instance. The more, the better—and best are the built-ins which are custom-tailored to provide for specific needs and space requirements.

As in the kitchen, standard under-counter cupboards are giving way to drawers which slide their contents out to the user without requiring a headstand or deep knee bend. There should be big drawers for big things, little drawers for little things, and some deep enough to take tall cans of hair spray and bottles of hand lotion.

SUPER-SIZE bath towels can be stacked neatly on slide-out shelves inside cupboards, and supplies of soap and tissue are best handled that way, too. Prescriptions and such, however, belong in shallow wall cabinets with push-button combination locks on the doors.

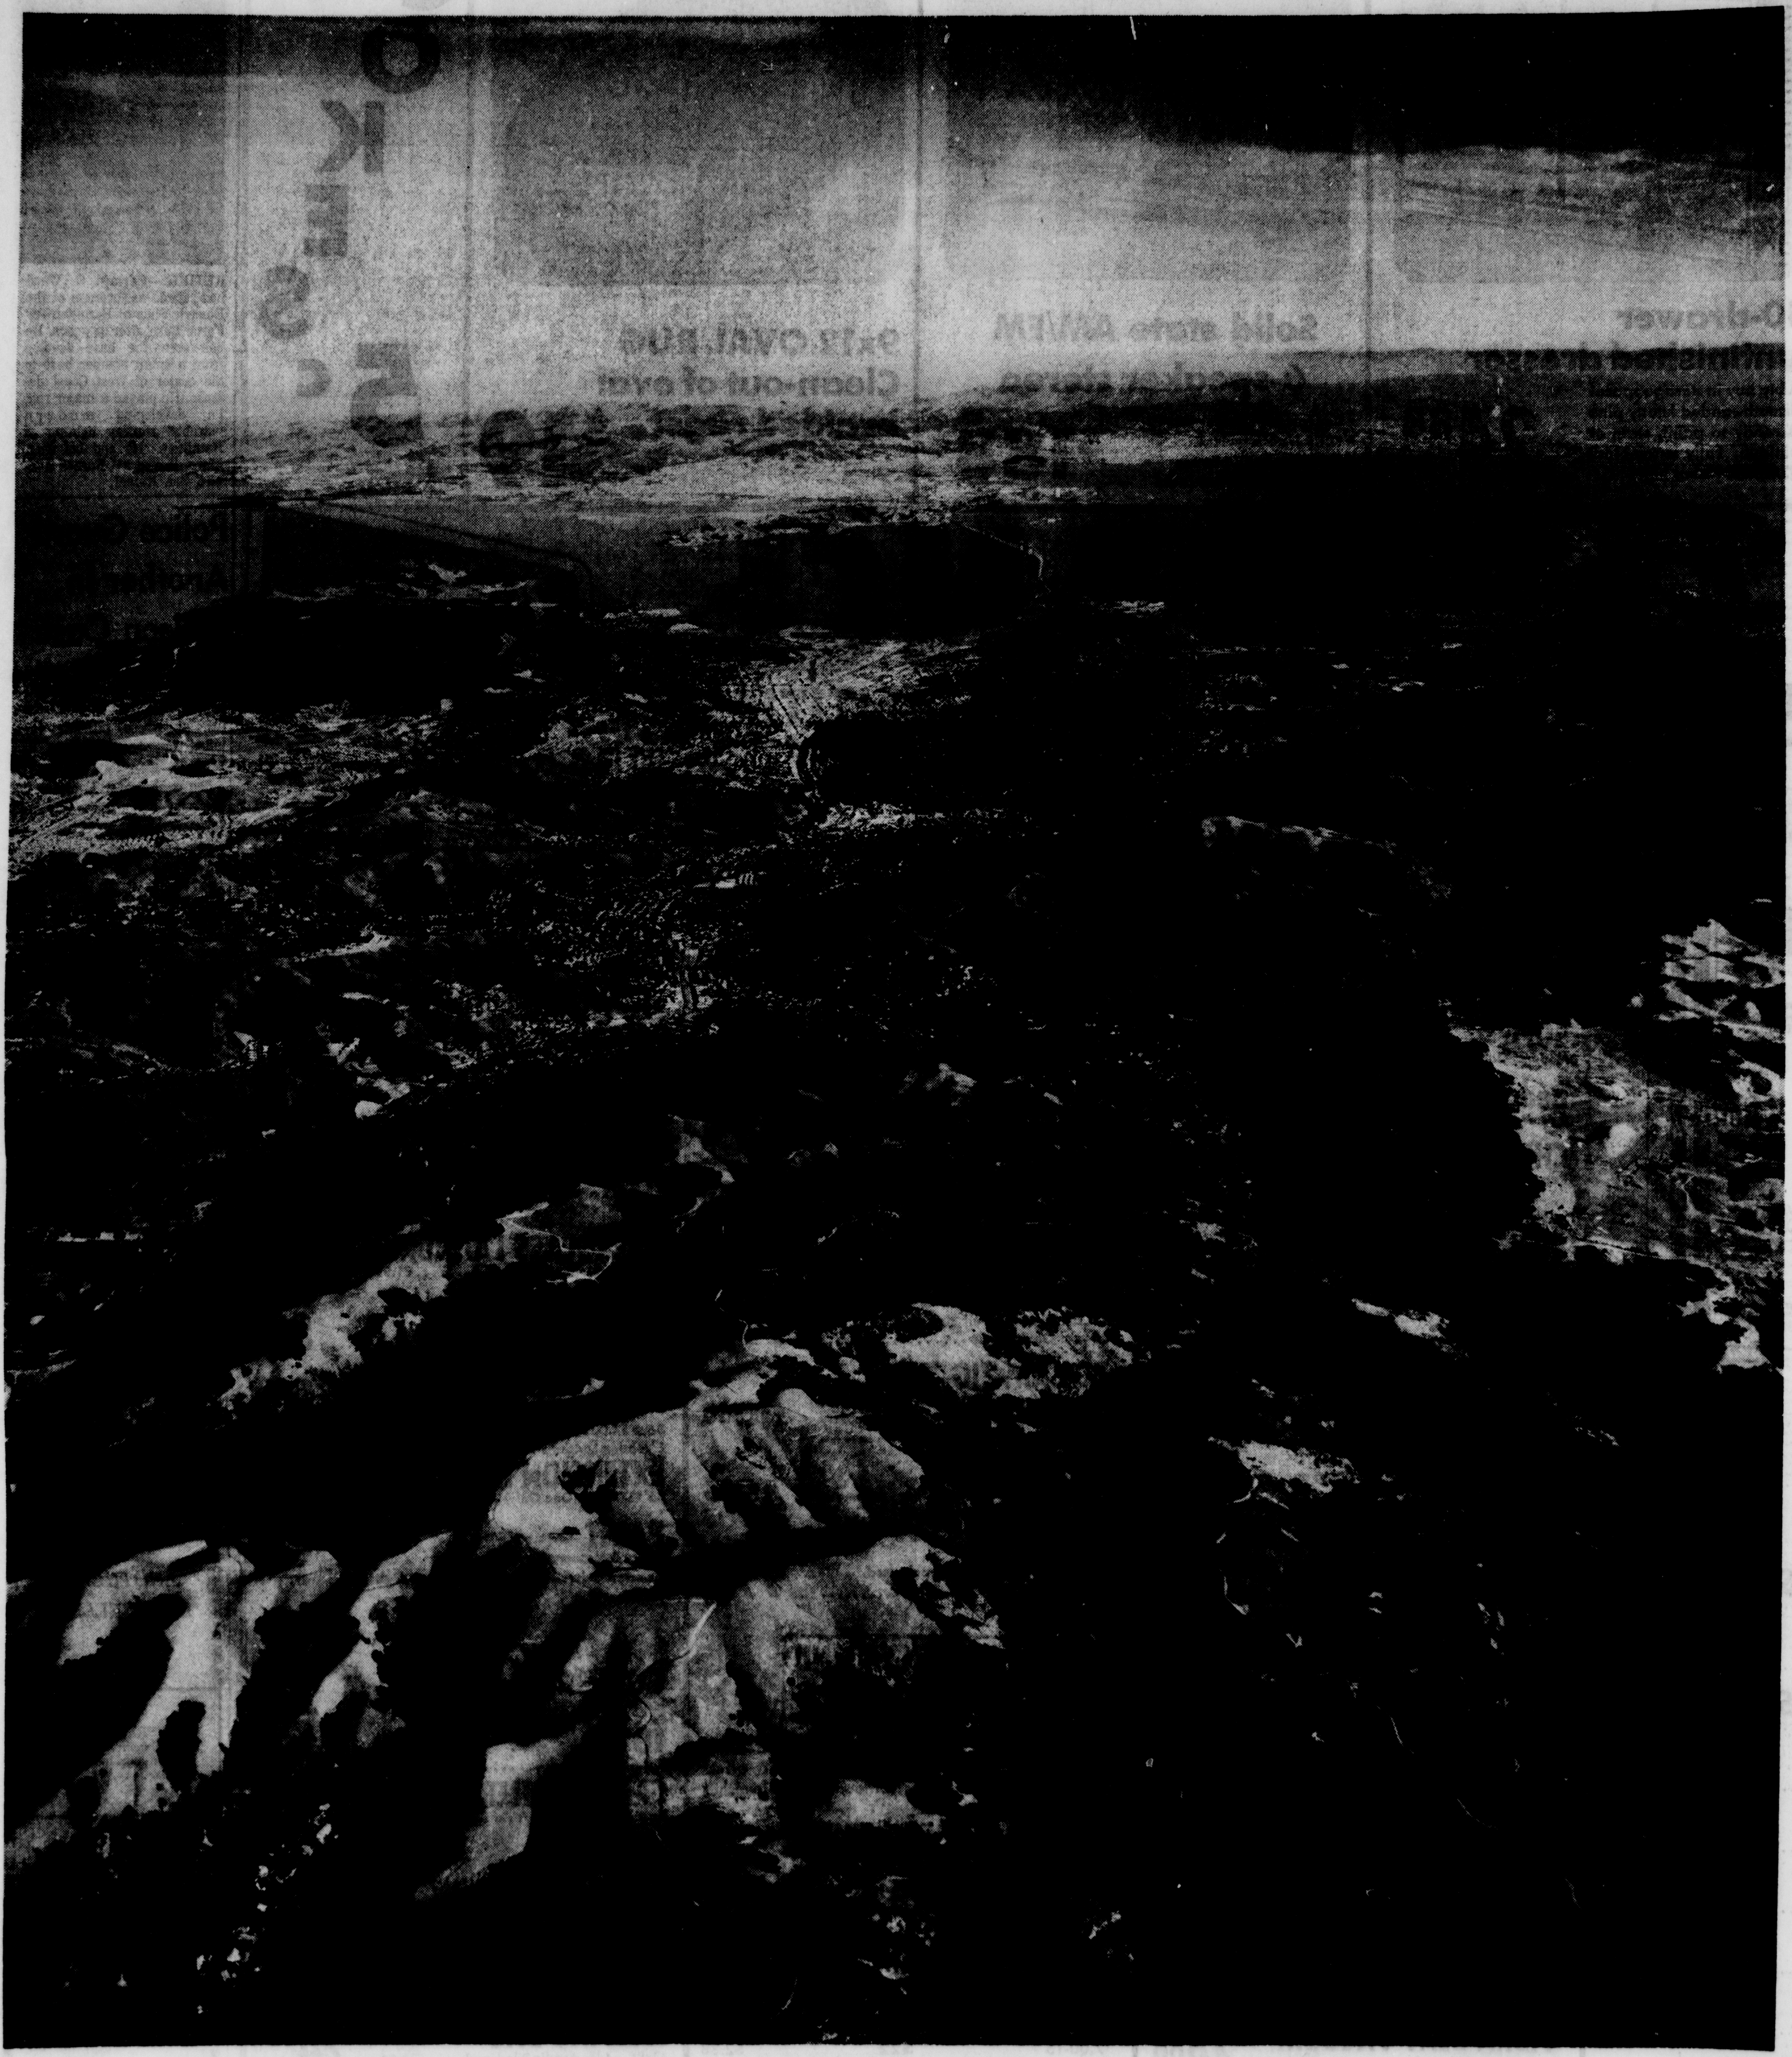
Handsome is as handsome does, but with the wide variety of woods and finishes available, there's no excuse for the cabinetwork to be anything but pretty. You can spend what you want—little or lots.

One of the most attractive but least costly materials is solid Douglas fir lumber which has been glued to make big panels easily cut to the desired size and shape. The edge-glued panels of solid lumber have unusual strength and stability, and the fir can be finished with stain, clear varnish, or paint.

A CLEAR finish captures this wood's rich orangy-gold coloring which works well into the warm-toned color schemes currently favored. Stain can change it to any other wood shade desired. Paint is least practical, simply because it requires more upkeep and shows smudges and fingermarks.

In addition to having good cabinetwork, you can pamper yourself with giant three-way mirrors, single handle faucets, pretty oval lavatories, simulated marble countertops, ceiling heat and sun lamps, wood paneled walls, and carpeting, all of which are down-to-earth practical but look lavishly luxurious.

BOOKS ARE a natural for adding character and charm to a room. And they are most effective when displayed in a handsome built-in bookcase. You can build your own by sending 75 cents to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., 10510, and asking for Built-In Bookcase Pattern 264. Be sure to include your zip code number. The step-by-step method outlined by the pattern is simple and economical. It includes directions on figuring materials and specifying widths. Only stock moldings and plywood are used. Beneath the counter there is cabinet space to house a high fidelity or television set.



Looking Eastward From Marin To Mount Diablo

The hills of Marin look eastward to the hills of Contra Costa County, where Mount Diablo, rival in majesty to Mount Tamalpais, towers above all around it. Joining the two counties is the slender thread of the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge. The long and populous valley leading to the heart of the scene holds Greenbrae, Ross, San Anselmo and Fairfax. To the left of Ross Valley is the more gently rolling landscape of Terra Linda. San Rafael lies partially hidden behind its screen of hills, beyond which can be seen San Pedro Point jutting into the Bay. In the upper right, Tiburon Peninsula reaches out to form Richardson Bay, and points at Angel Island just across Raccoon Strait. (Photo by Areo Photographers of Sausalito)

BEST-SELLER WANT ADS

WHY BUY NOW?

Here Are Eight Good Reasons Why You Should Make Your Dream Castle a Reality TODAY!

1.

Just So Much Land Available

There are approximately 57,230,000 square miles of land surface on this old earth. And of that there is just so much for Marin County home sites. Land values through the years have increased as roads and highways improve.

2.

Increased Population

By 1970 over half of the population of the United States will be under 25. Some experts predict the population is going to increase by an estimated 100 million people during the next 30 years. Where are they all going to live?

3.

More People in Home Buying Bracket

The age group which buys the largest number of single family homes is from 30 to 34. Many good buys in existing homes are on the market now and the so-called "tight money" has not materially affected buyers applying for FHA, GI or VA loans.

4.

A Hedge Against Inflation

Many economists agree that buying a home is a great hedge against possible inflation. Instead of spending money you are investing it. You also enjoy the pride and joy of ownership of the home that reflects your way of life.

5.

Tax Deductions

When you buy a home you can deduct from your income tax return every penny you pay in interest on your home loan. This can be a sizable deduction. You are not able to deduct rent receipts though.

Wage Increases Reflected in Building Costs

Whenever skilled labor receives an increase in wages these increases, in one way or another, are passed along to the consumers. This holds true for wage increases for unskilled labor and for those receiving the minimum wage.

7.

Trend of Interest Rates

Over the past several months interest rates have inched up. They may stabilize although some expect them to climb. At the moment they may be lower than they will be later on.

8.

Good Buys Are on the Market Now

New real estate becomes available every day as family situations change by expansion, transfer or death. If your credit standing is good let your real estate broker help you explore the various financing means which are available today.

Study Body Campaigning For Officers

Campaigning for student body and class offices at San Rafael High School was in full swing today, with elections scheduled next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Seventy students have been nominated for office. All will be introduced to the entire school Monday in the gymnasium at 10:50 a.m., when candidates for student body office will make their speeches.

Balloting will be in the noon hour on both days, in room 108 for seniors; room 217 for juniors; room 204 for freshmen and room 109 for sophomores. Results will be posted late Wednesday, with run-off elections — if necessary — slated for the noon hour, in the same rooms, on Jan. 19 and 20.

Candidates for office are:

STUDENT BODY: President: David Brown, Charles Rosenblad; vice president: Tom Bales, Donald Timmer; secretary: Janet Noble; director of social affairs: Cynthia Sales; director of assemblies: Shari Liggett.

SENIOR CLASS: president: Kersey Clausen, Craig Pagelow; vice president: Robert Ryan; secretary-treasurer: Debra McLain; director of social affairs: Cynthia Jensen.

Congress: Kersey Clausen, Steven Hauge, John Houston, Edward Johnston, Rodney Lame, Patricia Langlais, Robert Maglione, Donald Timmer, Peter Tupas.

JUNIOR CLASS: president: Val Clayton, Peter Carpou, William Hamilton, Paul Kent; vice president: Herbert Rowland; secretary-treasurer: Shelly Hecht;

Home In Mill Valley Looted

Theft of jewelry, a radio and liquor worth $227 was reported Thursday to Mill Valley police by Mort Staub, 30 Glen Drive. The theft occured sometime during the day while the house was empty, he said.

Suzette Morshead, 445 Throckmorton Avenue, Mill Valley, reported to police that a spare tire worth $36 had been stolen from her car Wednesday night while parked in front of her home.

Two paper towel machines and a soft drink machine at Mill Valley Car Wash, Lomita Drive and Ashford Avenue, were broken into last night and !⅛ in change stolen, police reported.

Drainage Talks Are Scheduled

Directors of the Gallinas Village Community Services District Thursday night agreed to a special session with representatives of the county public works department to discuss drainage problems on Descanso Way next to the district's proposed park.

The meeting was set for 8 p.m., Jan. 26, at John MacPhail School, district secretary Marguerite Clark reported.

Directors last night asked for estimates on playground equipment for the park.

Burglars Loot Home Of Guns

Burglars ransacked the Larkspur home of Joseph E. Wagstaff Thursday and took eight pistols and 200 rounds of ammunitions, according to Larkspur police.

Police said that between 11:30 a. m. and 4 p. m. the theives broke into the house at 80 Ardmore Road by forcing two doors. Taken were three automatic pistols, two revolvers, two derringers and a flintlock pistol made in 1800, plus ammunition, $56 in cash, some old gold coins and a watch.

Report Deadline

Jan. 31 is the deadline to file the 1966 fourth quarter contribution return and report of agricultural wages, Charles J. Brady, auditor in charge of the State Department of Employment office, San Rafael, reminded farmers yesterday.

BACK FROM 18 COUNTRIES— When Mr. and Mrs. Ward H. Austin of Larkspur take a trip, it's really a trip. On their latest one they toured 18 nations of Europe in a camper —and collected the flags of all.

After 50 Years German Trip Finally Comes True On Tour

By CAROL MARSH

Ward H. Austin, former president of College of Marin, was able to reprot this week that he had at last reached Germany, 50 years after starting out.

Hea dn Mrs. Austin have just returned from an 18,000-mile campint trip, with that country a "must see" on their long list.

"I started out for Germany in the late summer of 1917," Austin said, "and it took me 50 years to get there." His "start" was as a World War I soldier.

MANY PHOTOS

The Austins, now at their home in Larkspur sorting the 1,700 pictures he took on the trip, traveled the British Isles and Europe from Scandinavia to the Mediterranean in a Volkswagen "Campmobile," a seeelp-in, cook-in trailer-truck.

They covered 21 countries in their March-to-December trip, bringing to 48 the total number of countries they have visited in the five years since Austin resigned as president of the college. Camping, Austin said, is the adult equivalent to the youth hostels in Europe. Every major city has a large, well-equipped camp ground, and the camps are used by more native Europeans than tourists.

They took delivery on their Campmobile in Rotterdam in the snow, and in the next nine months crossed the continent three times in it "without even a lfat tire."

In order to cope with driving on the left side of the road in Sweden and Great Britain, Austin pasted a "keep left!" sign onto the windshield.

But having been out of Marin for the better part of a year, Austin said he now finds "driving in San Rafael quite an experience."

On the northernmost point in their trip, the couple visited Hammerfest, Norway, 270 miles north of the Arctic Circle, with 22 hours of sunlight a day while they were there.

"You just stay up later," Austin said of the 11 p.m. sunset and 1 a.m. sunrise.

Going into Hammerfest, Austin got several slides of a reindeer which got ahead of them on the road and would not get off. "I saw the same thing in Mill Valley last week with a non-rein deer," he noted.

On an earlier trip, they had driven the Alaskan Highway, and were surprised to find northern Norway so "civilized and settled" by comparison, they said.

BUS TOUR

They took bus tourn across central Norway and Ireland, and a yacht trip of the Greek islands, one of the highlights of the tirp.

Austin said he found Inverness, Scotland, much like Tomales Bay, and noted, too, that there are more canals in Amsterdam than in Venice.

When they visited Gibralter, they had to walk across the border, as border authoritites would not let them drive. Comming back, as Spain does not allow goods brought in Gibralter to be brought into Spain, Mrs. Austin said, the border guards searched her purse "compartment by compartment."

They flew into Berlin to visit the man who stayed at their home in 1951 as an American Field Service student, Gunter Schiffke. Schiffke served as guide for their tour of West Berlin, but as a West Berliner he could not accompany them on their short trip into East Berlin, which they found "pretty grim."

THEATER TOUR

They also visited Oberammergau, Germany, where the passion play is presented once every ten years, and although this was not one of the years, Austin took a picture of his wife with the actor, in off-years a woodcutter, who plays Herod.

In France they found the French "less friendly than people anywhere else in the world," Mrs. Austin siad. "Anywhere else, if you just pull out a map you're surrounded by people wanting to help you find what you're looking for. But in France, if you don't know the word or mispronounce it, they just shrug and walk away."

"But they're not really hostile, as long as you have money," Austin added.

Their tour ended in Lisbon, Portugal, in December.

"We left Lisbon at 3:15 p.m. and arrived in New York at 3:45 p.m., after a six-hour ride," Austin said. "If they really worked at it, they could have got us to New Yark before we left Lisbon."

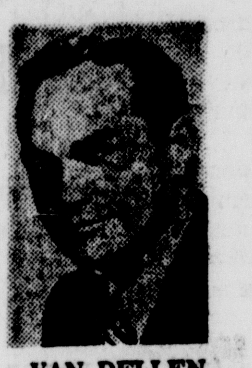
HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Friendly Dog Bites Or Not, Treat Them All With Caution



VAN DELLEN

A Brooklyn plastic surgeon has been consulted on many occasions to repair severe dog bites. In most instances the owner and victim have labeled the dog as "friendly." In talking to other plastic surgeons he found that they had similar experiences. At the risk of castigation from dog lovers, he questions whether they are friendly dogs.

Dr. Daniel Klein wrote a special article on this subject in the New York State Journal of Medicine. He is more interested in the prevention of dog bites than in how the injury should be repaired. Most of the victims he treated were bitten by city dogs. In contrast, working and sporting dogs are said to cause the largest percentage of bites; female dogs and puppies are reported to have the highest bite rate.

USING GOVERNMENT figures, Dr. Klein calculated that more than 660,000 persons are bitten annually. But this may be only a drop in the bucket because minor nips and scratches never come to the attention of the authorities and in all probability only one in 10 is reported to health agencies for investigation. In these circumstances our 660,000 becomes more than 2,000,000.

The incidence is greater during warm weather when both children and friendly dogs are out of doors. Most of those bitten are youngsters, followed by delivery boys, milkmen, and salesmen (7,000 mailmen were bitten last year). Almost 80 per cent occur in or near the home of the pet owner and the victim usually is not a stranger. Stray dogs are responsible in 12 per cent. Apparently man has not learned to live with his best friend.

ALL BITES should be washed thouroughly with soap and water. Rabies treatment depends upon the results of the examination of the animal. Laws vary in different states on liability but in many areas the owner is responsible even though the dog was frightened or molested by a child.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer question on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

TOO MANY RED CELLS

J. B. writes: What is polycythemia? Please explain the teratment and prognosis.

REPLY

Polycythemia is the opposite of anemia. This chronic blood disease is characterized by an increase in the number of red cells and hemoglobin. The blood volume is increased and the fluid is more viscid. Clots may block the blood vessels, leading to vascular complications. The treatments most frequently used are removing a pint of blood twice a week (venesection) and the use of radioactive phosphorus. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on this condition.

CHOLESTEROL LEVEL

S. K. writes: What is the significance of a low cholesterol?

REPLY

None except that the cholesterol content of the blood is low in hyperthyroidism (overactive thyroid gland), pernicious anemia, and acute liver disease. A low cholesterol level does not necessarily mean that the individual will not develop arteriosclerosis.

SHINGLES PAINFUL

J. R. Y. writes: Is shingles a serious disease?

REPLY

Not in the sense that it is fatal, but this virus infection is painful and in older persons may persist and interfere with sleep. The most serious form of shingles occurs when the eye is involved, because the scar may interfere with vision.

WEATHERBEATEN HIP

A. A. writes: What causes a dry hip socket?

REPLY

Wear and tear rather than lack of lubrication as so many persons think.

COLOR OF BLOOD

D. F. Y. writes: What is the reason for one person's blood to be lighter than others? If I happen to cut myself, I notice the blood is real light.

REPLY

The appearance of blood is deceiving which is why the physician must rely upon chemical tests rather than the older color charts. If your blood has the necessary ingredients, there is no need for concern. Leukemia means white blood and victims of this disease may notice changes along this line when the white blood count is extremely high.

TEARLESS STOIC

E. L. A. writes: What is wrong with a person who cannot shed tears in time of sorrow? As bad as this person feels, she does not cry.

REPLY

The cause is not known. These individuals are extremely stoic and the tear glands are not stimulated by the sympathetic nervous system. I assume that tears are present at other times to keep the eyeballs moist and clean.

VEGETABLES AND STONE FORMER

T. P. writes: Is it harmful for a person with kidney stones to eat vegetables?

REPLY

This depends upon the type of kidney stone present. If the person has a tendency to form oxalic acid stones, for example, he should omit from his diet vegetables such as spinach, string beans, cabbage, beets, and celery.

HERNIA IN BABY

Mrs. H. Q. writes: Will a truss cure a hernia in a month-old baby?

REPLY

Occasionally it will. However, today surgery is the preferred treatment.

Today's health hint—A sound body is the product of a sound mind. — George Bernard Shaw.

BEGINS WEDNESDAY

Five Churches To Join Annual Unity Octave In San Rafael

Five churches will participate in San Rafael's fifth annual Unity Octave to be observed starting Wednesday and continuing through Jan. 25.

This grass roots implementation of the spirit of ecumenism has been a community-wide endeavor since 1963, when the eight-day program was begun here. This year's theme is "Christians in Action."

It is during this period that Christians of many faiths come together to know one another better and to know one another's spiritual aims and achievements.

Co-chairmen of this year's octave are Mr. and Mrs. Allen Parelius of the First Methodist Church.

Working with lay representatives of the other four participating churches, they have developed a program which will begin Wednesday at 8 p.m. in St. Raphael's Catholic Church auditorium, Fifth Avenue and A Street.

After a welcome address by Parelius, there will be a demonstration of the Catholic Mass by Rev. Thomas I. Kennedy, pastor of St. Raphael's and of the Lutheran common service by Rev. Arthur Nitz of Trinity Lutheran Church.

Rev. C. Julian Bartlett, dean of Grace Cathedral in San Francisco, will be principal speaker next Saturday at 7 p.m. in St Paul's Episcopal Church, Court Street at Mission Avenue. He will be introduced by Rev. John Riley of St. Paul's.

The program will begin with a concert by the San Domenico Bell Ringers. Dinner, for which reservations should be made at one of the five churches, will be at 6:30 p.m.

An exchange of pulpits is one of the two events for Sunday, Jan. 22. That morning Rev. Riley of St. Paul's will preach at the First Presbyterian Church, 1410 Fifth Avenue; Rev. Wesley C. Baker of First Presbyterian will preach at the First Methodist, 9 Ross Valley Drive, and Rev. Philip Whitmer of First Methodist. will preach at St. Paul's.

That evening at 6 o'clock there will be a forum for high school juniors and seniors of all Christian faiths at the First Methodis Church.

Topic of the panel discussion will be "A Christian Teen-ager's Commitment in a Secular World." Rev. Miles O'Brien Riley of St. Raphael's will conduct the forum.

Clergy and lay leaders of the five churches will meet Jan. 23 at the First Presbyterian Church to plan a co-ordinated program for church-related year around activities. Rev. Nitz will be chairman.

The octave will close Jan. 25 at 9 p.m. in Angelico Hall, Dominican College, 1520 Grand Avenue.

Guest speaker will be Rev. Whitmer, whose topic will be "The Church: Is a New Model Coming Out?"

Rev. Riley will offer the opening prayer and Rev. Baker the closing prayer.

On the entertainment program will be songs by the Winifred Baker Children's Chorus, singing "The Daniel Jazz" by Herbert Chappel and the Baker Chorale singing the "Te Deum" by Zoltan Kodaly. Soloists will be Corinne Swall, Marietta Sedlock, John Gibb and Robert Reeves.

Octave committee members working with Mr. and Mrs. Parelius are Dr. and Mrs. W. T. Berner, Trinity Lutheran; Mr. and Mrs. Don Lord, Walravine Shanley, Virginia Livermore and Helen Stevens, St. Paul's Episcopal; Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Weber, St. Raphael's, and Mr. and Mrs. Ewing Bone and Mr. and Mrs. Neville Donovan, First Presbyterian.

To host the opener

Three Churches Will Unite For Ecumenical Programs

In keeping with the ecumenical program for Christian unity and the ecumenical action recommended by Vatican Council II, three San Anselmo and Ross churches will observe a week of prayer, beginning Wednesday.

Participating churches are St. John's Episcopal Church in Ross and St. Anselm's Catholic Church and First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo.

They will use a form of service sponsored by the National Council of Churches and the Catholic Bishop's Commission for Ecumenical Affairs.

Periods of prayer will be held independently by each congregation during the first part of the week. However, on the last three days they will unite for common prayer at 8 p.m. each evening.

On Monday, Jan. 23, they will meet at St. Anselm's; on Tuesday, Jan. 24, at the Presbyterian church, and on Wednesday, Jan. 25, at St. John's.

According to a joint announcement, the purpose of the meetings are "not to seek a common denominator in matters of belief, but to pray for the grace of unity, seeking the enlightment and good will that prepares the way for true unity."

Presbyterian Body To Hear Bible Expert

Dr. J. Arthurd Baird, who is presently writing a book on the New Testament at the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, will preach at the 11 a.m. service tomorrow at San Rafael's First Presbyterian Church.

Dr. Baird's subject will be "Hope Is The Light." He is a son of Dr. Jesse Hayes Baird, longtime seminary president.

He is currently on leave from his post as professor of religion at Wooster College in Ohio. He has held the post since 1954.

He is a graduate of Occidental College and the San Anselmo seminary. He obtained his doctorate from Edinburg University in Scotland.

Easter Prayer Weekend Slated

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—An International Prayer Fellowship, sponsored jointly by the Upper Room, daily devotional guide, and Scarritt College, will be held on the Easter Weekend, Friday evening March 24 through Easter Monday afternoon, March 27.

Inspirational addresses at the meetings in The Upper Room Chapel here will center on Gethsemane, The Last Supper, the Crucifixion, the Resurrection and Pentecost.

GUEST SPEAKER—Rev. Geoffrey P. Selth, minister of the Unitarian Fellowship in Sonoma County, will speak at tomorrow's 11 a.m. service at Unitarian Church of Marin in San Rafael. He will fill the pulpit while the San Rafael minister, Karel F. Botermans handles his duties in Sonoma County.

Service To Be By Seminarians

The Presbyterian Church of Santa Venetia of San Rafael will observe "Seminary Sunday" tomorrow with three San Francisco Theological Seminary students in charge of the rites.

Participating will be Byron Burch, David Horosz and John Waide, who also will be working in various church programs during the seminary's winter quarter.

Burch will deliver the sermon which he has entitled, "The Tarnished Image."

Teens To Conduct Rites Tomorrow

The Presbyteens, a high school youth group at Redwoods Presbyterian Church in Larkspur, will conduct the 9:30 and 11 a.m. services tomorrow.

The group will take care of the entire service, including ushering, special anthem, prayer and scripture reading and preaching.

30 Collegians To Help In Church Rites

Between 25 and 30 students from California Concordia College in Oakland will be the guests this weekend of Grace Lutheran Church of Novato as participants in a youth and evangelism program.

First program on the agenda is a youth meeting tonight for young members of the church from fifth grade through high school. Concordia students will present the program and the young churchmen will provide refreshments.

Following the program the visitors will spend the night as guests in homes of congregation members.

At tomorrow morning's worship service, a chancel drama will be presented by the visitors, portraying the parable of "The Pharisee and the Publican."

Activity will culminate tomorrow afternoon when the college visitors will assist in a church canvass of the community.

World Religion Day Observance

The Bah'ai Assembly of San Rafael will meet at 2 p.m. tomorrow at the Novato Community House on Machin Avenue to observe World Religion Day.

Guest speaker for the two-hour meeting wlil be Mrs. Douglas Gibson, who with her husband has just moved to Lucas Valley from St. Louis.

The meeting is one of 500 being held tomorrow throughout the nation by members of the Baha'i faith.

Third Lecture In Series Is Monday Night

The new light shed on biblical events and customs by his archeaological excavations at Ashdod in the Holy Land, is the subject of a lecture by Rev. David Noel Freedman at 8 p.m. Monday at the First Presbyterian Church in San Anselmo.

Dr. Freedman, acting dean of faculty and professor of Hebrew and Old Testament literature at San Francisco Theological Seminary, will tell of the summers he spent in Israel directing the excavation of what has proved to be the major Philistine stronghold in the Holy Land, and the significance of discoveries made there, including portions of a monument to Saigon II who captured the city in 712 B.C.

His lecture is the third in the seminary's 1966-67 popular series directed to the general public of Marin County. Others will be "The Realization of Future" by the Rev. Dieter Georgi, professor of New Testament Feb. 13, and "The Protestant Ethic and the Spirit of Revolution," by Rev. E. David Willis, associate professor of historical theology, on March 13.

All lectures are at 8 p.m. in the church's sanctuary, Kensington Road and Ross Avenue.

Church Council Head To Speak

SACRAMENTO—Dr. Arthur Flemming, president of the University of Oregon and the newly elected president of the National Council of Churches, will be the keynote speaker at the 25th annual fellowship dinner of the Northern California Council of Churches here Thursday.

At the 6:30 dinner in the Scottish Rites Temple the new president of the state Council of Churches, Rt. Rev. G. Richard Millard, suffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of California, will be installed. He will serve as the 1967 leader of the 20 denominational bodies which form the council.

Church Plans Literary Move

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI)—A new area of emphasis by the Assemblies of God has been established with the appointment of William G. Eastlake, of Springfield as the denomination's manager of literature sales.

Eastlake will be responsible for promotion and sale of Sunday school curricular materials and vacation Bible school items, including more than 60 publications with a quarterly circulation of 2.3 million.

Lutheran Leader

NEW YORK (UPI)—Dr. Henry J. Whiting, a social welfare specialist from New York, and Howard E. Holcomb, director of admissions at Gustavus Adolphus College at St. Peter, Minn., have been named to staff positions in the new Lutheran Council in the United States of America.

Terra Linda Churches Plan Unity Services

Seven Terra Linda churches will join in a week of "Prayer for Christian Unity" beginning Wednesday with an ecumenical service of worship and prayer at 8 p.m. at St. Isabella's Catholic Church.

Two other special events are scheduled during the week.

On Sunday, Jan. 22 at 7:30 p.m. Rev. Philip Farnham, assistant director of the California Migrant Ministry, will speak on "The Meaning of Delano for the Church and Society," in St. Isabella's parish center.

The concluding program will be a joint service on Wednesday, Jan. 25 at Christ Presbyterian Church at 8 p.m., featuring a panel of laymen discussing "Living Room Dialogues."

Participating churches are Aldersgate Methodist Church, Christ Presbyterian, Faith Lutheran Church, Church of the Nativity, First Congregational Church and St. Isabella's.

Pulpit Guest Tomorrow In Corte Madera

Rev. Roscoe C. Robison, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church, Providence, R.I., will be the guest preacher at tomorrow's 10:55 a.m. service at the First Baptist Church in Corte Madera.

He is presently a member of the National Board of Managers of the American Baptist Home Missions Societies and has also served on the committee of Latin American Work and the Division of Support and Interpretation.

In addition to his duties as pastor of one of the historic and strategic churches in New England, he has also served several capacities in Rhode Island as chairman of the Strategy Committee for American Baptist Churches, chairman of the Research Department of the state's Council of Churches; eastern vice president of the American Baptist Ministers National Council

He is a graduate of Washburn University in Kansas and holds two graduate degrees from Andover-Newton Theological School in Massachusetts.

The Corte Madera First Baptist Church, a community church, cordially invites the public to hear him, according to its pastor, Rev. Henry I. Fox.

Facts On New Bible Will Be Topic Of Talk

Joseph D. Gargiulo, vice principal of Novato High School and a College of Marin trustee, will speak on the new Jerusalem Bible at tomorrow's 9:40 a.m. adult inquirers class at the Novato Community Methodist Church.

The new bible includes seven books not in the King James and American Revised Standard Bibles. It was published by Doubleday in June.

Gargiulo presented his first talk on the new bible at a meeting in December.

Guests are cordially invited to attend the talk.

Witnesses Back From Conference

San Rafael's congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses have resumed their regular schedule following last weekend's convention in San Fracnisco.

According to Francis Paulson, presiding minister, more than 1,500 attended the conference.

NORMAN B. HOLMES
Lectures on Thursday

Public Lecture Set Thursday In Mill Valley

"God—Not Chance" will be the title of a public lecture by Norman B. Holmes at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Old Mill School auditorium in Mill Vallry under sponsorship of Mill Valley's First Church of Christ Scientist.

Holmes, a Christian Science teacher and practitioner in Chicago, is currently on a tour as member of the Church's Board of Lectureship.

He is a graduate of Northwestern University and served as a U.S. Naval chaplain during World War II and the Korean War.

The lecture is open to the public.

Lord's Supper To Be Observed

The Lord's Supper will be observed tomorrow at both the services at the Novato Presbyterian Church wth Rev. C. M. Croughan officiating and assisted by Dr. John J. Canoles.

The annual congregational meeting of the church will be held at 6:30 p.m. Preceding the congregational meeting a pot luck dinner will be held. Reservations are to be made with Mrs. Mike Jones. The dinner is being planned by the deasons of the church. The junior high group will serve.

Baby sitting will be available for the tiny tots beginning at 5:15 p.m. and will continue throughout dinner and the meeting.

Mission Sesquicentennial Recalls Old Hispanic Ties

AS WAVE AFTER WAVE of newcomers have swept over California since World War II, the last human links with our state's Spanish and Mexican heritage has been largely obliterated.

In this year of our Mission San Rafael's 150th birthday anniversary, we recall earlier days with nostalgia.

If you attended high school in one of the older established communities along the route of El Camino Real — the trail from one Spanish Mission to the next, extending from San Diego to Sonoma — chances were good that you would have a classmate named Yorba, Arguello, Salido, Pacheco, Vallejo, Carillo or one of the many other family names firmly established here long before the first Yankee set foot in what is now the Golden State.

In those 1920s and 1930s Mexicans, especially in Southern California, were the targets for social and economic discrimination as bad as the worst applied to Negroes in Southern States. Anybody with an Hispanic name was not highly regarded.

IF YOU COULD pierce this wall of discrimination that surrounded people who bore any of the honored names of history, the story was thrilling.

Take the Salidos. Their forebears came in 1519 with Cortez and the conquistadores who conquered Montezuma's Aztecs and plundered all Mexico. The first Salido wound up as overlord for the rich silver mines in Alamos, Sonora. How did the Salidos get to the California we know? Ultimately they became political refugees and found asylum in Arizona and Southern California.

Arguello? A proud early California family whose descendants were caretakers of Mission Capistrano in the 1920s.

Yorba? The first Yorba was a corporal in the Portola expedition sent to make the first overland exploration and colonization effort.

Corporal Yorba picked out a beautiful site for a rancho overlooking Santa Ana River canyon, in what is now Orange County.

Before World War II, Yorbas still lived on what remained of that rancho, some of them in an ancient adobe structure which dated back to the time of the Portola exploration and colonization trek in 1669.

Leo Carrillo, the late movie actor, was a native San Franciscan who bore his famous name proudly.

In Marin County, the name Pacheco still survives, as do a few others.

To repeat, as waves and waves of newcomers have swept over California since World War II, most of the last of these human links with our state's Spanish and Mexican heritage have been largely lost.

It is tragic but probably unavoidable.

CALIFORNIA'S connection with Mexico and Spain was always through what we now know as Baja California.

When the Hispanic connections were cut in 1850, as the Yankees took over California, they were severed almost completely.

For more than a century, Baja has been ignored by U.S. Californians.

The last of Baja's great chain of missions was built long before the first of our California missions were begun.

Baja's earliest missions were about two centuries old before Father Serra began his mission work in what is now our U.S. California.

Most latter-day Yankee immigrants to U.S. California are largely ignorant of these historic facts.

THE LITTLE PUBLICIZED "Commission on the Californias" authorized nearly three years ago by our State Legislature seems to be making a start toward overcoming this public apathy toward our sister Californias — the state of Baja California del Norte and the territory of Baja California del Sur — south of the border.

Our sister state to the south has formed a similar commission. The two commissions have informally and unofficially amalgamated to act as one.

Lt. Gov. Finch of the new administration in Sacramento has indicated his intention to be an active supporter and participant in the commissions' efforts to reestablish cooperative communications and contacts between the two sister California states.

The commissions plan their next meeting in early spring at the University of California at Davis.

It is to be hoped that 1967 will see the mission sesquicentennial in San Rafael renew people's interest in Marin's Hispanic heritage and that 1967 will see the Commission on the Californias focus public attention on the desirability of being neighborly with the two Californias who are our closest neighbors to the south.

It took Baja California about 200 years to wake up to the important potential of the California we know.

It has taken us about 100 years to wake up to the importance of establishing more neighborly relations with Baja California.

Let us hope we make progress more swiftly in the future.

CHILD'S SEVERED ARM RESTORED

A little girl whose arm was completely severed can now use it to wash, feed and dress herself.

When an auto collision with a speeding train near Denver, Colorado, badly injured the 4-year-old, her arm was left lying on the ground. But a state policeman saw the arm and put it in the ambulance, thinking that doctors might be able to do something with it. They did.

Eight surgeons, three pediatricians and two anesthesiologists spent six hours attempting the state's first reimplantation of a severed limb.

Sixteen months later the little girl could move her wrist and elbow and some feeling had returned to her hand. Doctors cautiously stated that the arm was "doing quite well."

Despite the heavy odds against success, the law officer's decision vitally affected the girl's future life. In a similar way, as long as we make the effort, the Lord can bring good out of a critical situation. But He expects us to try wholeheartedly.

Best Traffic Safety Idea: Cut Speeding

Editor, Independent-Journal:

This is a contribution to your "What Our Readers Say" column. SPEED-DRIVING.

Is the administration barking at the wrong tree? Why get on the automobile manufacturers for safety devices? We can have all kinds of safety devices in our cars but if the driver loses control of his driving due to speed then all these safety devices are in vain. Why not encourage slow driving instead? We can always correct ourselves if we go slow. I am all against fast driving. Going 45 mph and 50 mph is fast enough.

What's the hurry anyway? Are we in a race? America, or shall I say "Department of Motor Vehicles," please wake up. The killer is speed. Remember these old adages "haste makes waste" and "slow but sure."

I hope you could use this for your paper.

Report Of Collision Results In Protest

Editor, Independent-Journal:

In the Jan. 4 issue of your paper you printed a story captioned "Kentfield School Staffers in Collision" (or similar words).

The collision occurred at 9:40 a.m. as the three staff members were on their way from their duties at Wolfe Grade School to their next classes at Greenbrae School.

Your gross and inexcusable error in time (your article said the incident occurred at One a.m.) gave a connotation of unsavory flavor to a simple, unfortunate traffic accident.

Is it your policy to write up every accident that happens in the county? Do you list occupations and ages (every age you quoted was incorrect) of every person involved in every minor traffic mishap?

It is my hope that "Marin's Best-Seller" will take its responsibilities for honest reporting more seriously in the future.

AVANELL MUNCH
(Teacher, Wolfe Grade School)

(A teletype transmission foulup resulted in the accident being reported as having happened at 1 a.m. It was at 9:40 a.m. The Independent-Journal regrets this error. As to identification of employment, this was done because it is highly unusual for three people in the same employ to be involved in a traffic accident.—Editor)

At 56 You're Young Enough To Run For President But Not For P-TA

NEW YORK (AP) — A glance at the calendar reminds me that next month I'll be 56 years old.

What other blows can mankind take and still endure?

The prospect of being 56 inevitably inflicts philosophic thoughts on a fellow.

Reaching that age may be a hollow victory, but it is still a victory. A majority of the human beings who have teemed the earth never lived to be 56.

Once you go beyond 55 you are getting into winter territory. You have an instinctive realization that there's frost ahead. It hits you somewhere inside like the blow of a mammoth hammer.

YOU HAVE TO face up to the fact that in many ways you are definitely over the hill. This has a glad as well as a sad side.

It is pleasant to know that you are still young enough to run for the presidency, if your country should call you, but too hold to have to run for a post in the local P-TA.

There are other erosions and compensations at 56:

You no longer have to read the morale messages the boss pins up on the company bulletin board.

The doctor has a pretty definite idea what's wrong with you, and you know pretty well what's wrong with him. You enjoy exchanging symptoms.

If you donate a pint to the office blood bank, everybody tells you that you are a hero —something you've known for a long time.

ON YOUR ACTUAL birthday you get 27 get well cards and three careful pecks on the cheek by three homely secretaries.

You figure it is rather foolish to get short-winded bending over tying your shoelaces when they now sell shoes that don't need shoelaces.

Every time you wear a bow tie you feel devilish.

You decide it is easier to leave your bifocal glasses on all day than to waste your strength whipping them on and off.

It occurs to you now and and then that William McKinley and Calvin Coolidge have never been really fully appreciated.

You abandon any idea of growing a beard because you know it would come out all white.

WHEN YOU SEE a fellow go up the stairs two at a time you realize the world will never run out of fools.

It is a matter of quiet pride that you are married to a woman who doesn't wear a miniskirt.

It worries you terribly if one of your enemies falls ill. What a gap there'd be if there weren't any old enemies left to keep your spleen healthy.

You secretly agree with most of the things your wife says, but you'd rather die than admit it to her.

You can express most of your own opinions about the world with a clearcut grunt.

At 56 you lose any fear you ever had of second childhood. In your heart of hearts you realize you are still in your first childhood, that nobody ever really grows up inside, and that life is always a kindergarten — but a worthwhile one.

LBJ's State Of Union Message Differs From His Earlier Ones

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson, bouncing back from months of comparative silence, is as full of energy and ideas as ever, which would seem to wash out any guessing that he won't try for a second term in 1968.

There was a time, earlier in his presidency, when Johnson kept himself almost constantly in the public eye with speeches or pronouncements. He did an almost complete about face on that in the last months of 1966.

BUT HIS State of the Union message Tuesday night, delivered to Congress in person and taking up almost one hour and 10 minutes of national television and radio time, was like his three previous messages, starting in 1964.

It dripped with proposals and programs and promises to get on with unfinished business. In domestic affairs alone the President dipped into at least 21 different fields with recommendations made then or to be made.

Yet, there was a difference between Tuesday night's talk and the previous State of the Union messages, both in what he said and the way he said it.

GONE WAS the excessive use of facial expressions as he explored the problems and made his points. He was straightfaced as he addressed Congress.

Those who have been critical of him for the way he delivered a talk — the expressions, the eye-squinting, the gestures — would have trouble finding the same fault in this latest talk.

In short, Johnson on television Tuesday night was a different Johnson. This showed up, too, at his televised news conference Dec. 31. There is as much ginger as ever but less self-consciousness.

The new Johnson is a lot more careful and thoughtful about his public image.

FURTHER the writing technique in Tuesday night's message was better than the earlier ones in sentence structure and matter-of-factness without trimmings or over-use of short sentences.

And, full of ideas as Tuesday night's message was, it still was less controversial than some of its predecessors. Except for his suggestion to increase taxes to help pay for the war in Vietnam, there was very little to stir his listeners on racial, economic or other grounds.

Such hot issues of the past, like medicare or federal aid to education, were missing. Johnson's stress was on a better life for everybody in this country.

HIS SUGGESTIONS for improvement ranged from fighting poverty to building up better police forces to fight crime and giving the states ever more federal aid and cooperation.

But Johnson did not propose giving the states a bundle of federal tax revenue to use as they pleased, an idea that has been talked about a lot recently, particularly by Republicans.

The recommendations he made covered such a broad field of American life — backed up by his promise to send Congress special messages on a number of them — will keep him busy and in the public mind for months.

IN SHORT, the whole thrust of his talk on domestic problems was one of aggressive action by him although, by repetition, he made it plain he wouldn't be high-handed but would seek the advice and consent and approval of Congress.

He was far less specific and inclusive in the foreign field. There he generalized mostly on American help and cooperation in all the continents of the world.

BUT THE ONE place where he was very specific and emphatic was Vietnam. He didn't budge an inch on American participation in the war there.

Church Must Figh Racial Prejudice

By WHITNEY M. YOUNG JR.

The immorality of racial prejudice and discrimination presents a great challenge to the churches of America. As guardians of our ethical heritage, they must bear a greater responsibility for creating a moral climate which will help break down the barriers which imprison people in substandard living conditions for no reason other than their color.

THE PROBLEM the churches face is compounded by the prejudice of many of their congregations. Two Protestant clergymen in Pennsylvania were recently forced to leave their churches for other assignments because they were too active in the civil rights struggle.

One was subject to harassment which included threatening phone calls and attempts to force his car off the road. The other was told he should have preached more sermons on "peace of mind." Apparently some people believe sermons should be "talk to sleep by" rather than stimulating moral challenges.

This refusal to face the moral crisis of our national life is shared by too many congregations. In the South many churches actively aid segregationists, even allowing segregated schools to be set up in church buildings for the purpose of frustrating public school integration. And many ministers in all sections are content to follow their parishioner's prejudices, in defiance of the ideals of brotherhood and equality.

FORTUNATELY, the mainstream of American religious life is fully committed to these ideals. Religious leaders of all faiths have spoken out for social justice and have taken the lead in fighting for equal rights.

Last spring the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church, representing more than 3 million people, overwhelmingly approved a creedal statement affirming its obligation to work for social justice. Other leading church bodies have made similar statements.

Countless priests, nuns, ministers and rabbis have risked danger in civil rights demonstrations in the South, and some have been martyred there. Their courage and dedication are symbols of the determination of enlightened religious leaders to keep their faith relevant to the modern world and to help solve the great problems of our day.

MANY CHURCHES are active in anti-poverty programs and others are using church contacts to help insure fair employment practices by companies working for them.

Recently the National Conference of Catholic Bishops issued a Pastoral statement on Race Relations and Poverty which called for "changing the hearts of men" by instilling a "true sense of neighborliness, based upon a religiously inspired conviction that all men are equal before God and that all should be welcomed in our midst."

"Changing the hearts of men" will not be easy, but it is a task for which our churches are eminently suited. A start should be made in some of our more comfortable suburbs where racial exclusion in housing seems to be an article of faith. An effort must also be made to help those insecure, newly-arrived members of the lower-middle class, like those in Chicago who threw rocks at priests and nuns demonstrating for open housing. Their moral education has not increased as much as their incomes have.

Livermore Faces Challenges

SACRAMENTO (UPI)— California's new resources agency administrator is an outspoken "preservationist" trying to walk the tightrope between industry and the forces of conservation.

The path he chooses could make him unpopular with both —but few are quite as suited to walk it.

Norman B. Livermore Jr. of San Rafael, is a wealthy lumber company executive and a former Sierra Club director. Hei s a former High Sierra guide and an ardent hunter.

During the news conference Wednesday in which Gov. Ronald Reagan announced his appointment to the $27,500 post, Livermore plunged into the hottest conservation issues around. He took industry to task for negligent forest practices and chided the Sierra Club as being "not honest and not fair."

A newsman asked Livermore, 55, who is quitting as treasurer of Pacific Lumber Co. after 15 years, to respond to charges the lumber industry does not conform to provisions of the forest practices act.

"I frankly think the industry is vulnerable on this," Livermore said. "Now that I have left Pacific, I can give them a kick in the pants." He said an executive of his firm was chairman of the industry's Forest Practices Committee and he didn't call a meeting for three years."

But then he turned on the Sierra Club. He charged it distributed a dishonest and unfair portrayal of the plight of the redwood forests in its book, "The Last Redwoods."

Then he went on to say nobody had done more for the Sierra Club than he had, and endorsed the Redwood National Park plan of Rep. Don Clausen, R-Calif., in opposition to the club plan.

His job as agency head involves overseeing operation of the departments of fish and game, water resources, conservation and parks and recreation. For that, he gets $27,500 a year.

"I guess I will be spread pretty thin," Livermore said during an interview with United Press International. He will split his duties between the state and being treasurer of Pacific Lumber Co., San Francisco, for the next five weeks before taking the agency post on a fulltime basis in February·

Livermore, an active outdoorsman, outlined his major interests in the areas of fish and game and conservation.

"My biggest, broadest concern is for the whole wilderness concept," the High Sierra type of wilderness, he said. He wants real remote wilderness and he wants lots of it.

"I know the whole High Sierra like a book. I am a wilderness man," he said.

His background as a High Sierra guide and his love of the wilderness dictates his favorite types of hunting and fishing.

Deer hunting is his favorite, but he also is very big on ducks and quail. His fishing has been concentrated in the High Sierra, above the timberline, for golden and rainbow trout.

As Resources Agency Administrator, Livermore will be in a position of policy-making influence in the Reagan administration.

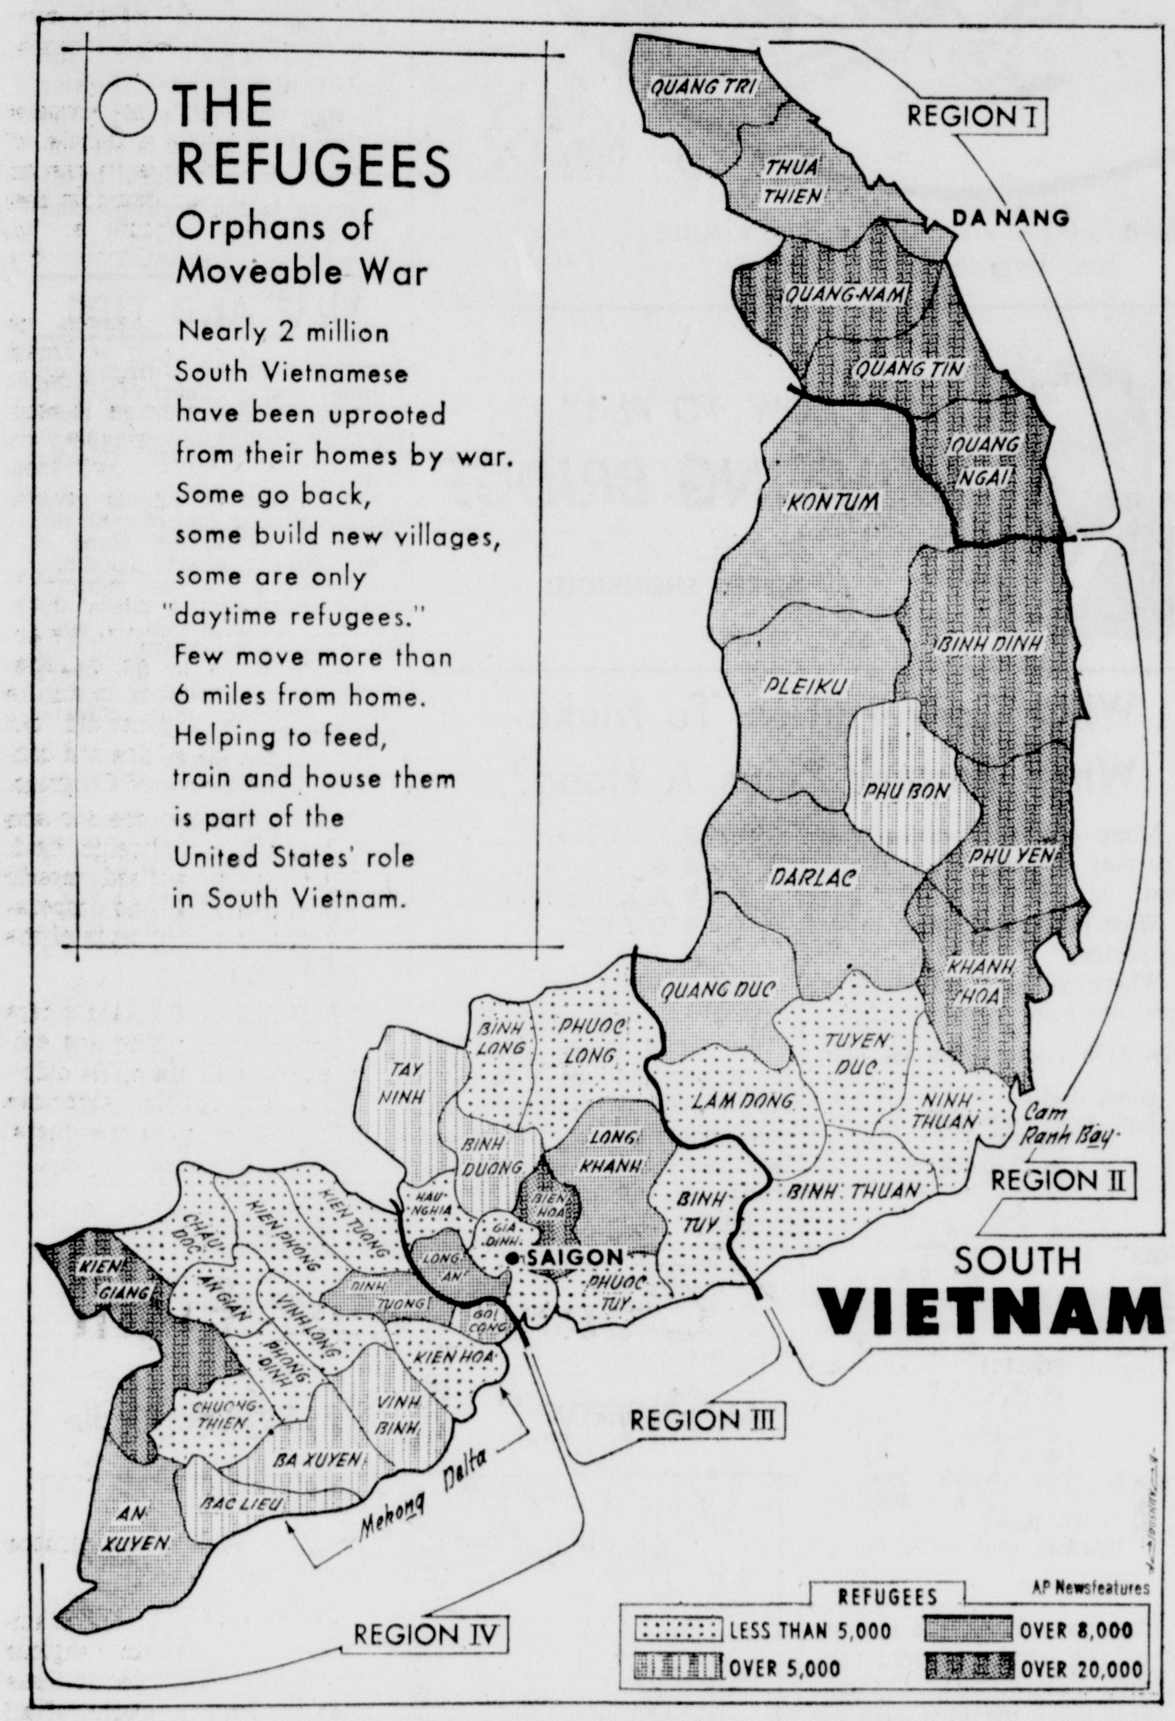
Vietnam: The Land Of The War Refugees



THE REFUGEES
Orphans of Moveable War

Nearly 2 million South Vietnamese have been uprooted from their homes by war. Some go back, some build new villages, some are only "daytime refugees." Few move more than 6 miles from home. Helping to feed, train and house them is part of the United States' role in South Vietnam.

Over One Million Homeless; Relief Aid Costs Are High

By KENNETH L. WHITING

SAIGON (AP)—More than 10 per cent of South Vietnam's 15 million people are war refugees. Another half million are expected to pour into refugees camps this year.

The flood of refugees has created problems for the Saigon government and American advisers. It has also created hardships for the Communist guerrillas.

"Whenever villagers flee, the Viet Cong are denied coolie labor to haul their supplies, and rice growers and taxpayers," said Edward L. Lawrence of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

"The refugees are people who vote with their feet. They are voting against the Viet Cong just as those who fled East Germany voted against the Communists there," he said.

The Viet Cong clearly regard refugee relief as a danger. They have attacked resettlement villages and infiltrated temporary camps.

Vietnamese statistics show there were 1,616,663 refugees in this country from January 1964 to December 1966. More than a half million of them have been returned to their villages or have resettled in 412 government-sponsored hamlets. The Saigon regime provides 280 temporary camps — most of them crowded and unsanitary — for 754,709 who are still homeless.

Vietnamese officials label them "anti-Communist refugees." They do not include the estimated 45,000 made homeless by seasonal floods in the Mekong Delta last year.

Refugees come from all classes and areas of Vietnam. They speak different dialects and have varied backgrounds. There are highland Montagnards, Khmers, ethnic Vietnamese lowlanders, survivors of the ancient Cham empire and Thai border tribesmen.

Most were driven from their homes by the climate of brutality and uncertainty which lies over Vietnam.

Some fled excessive taxation, forced labor or impressment of their young men into military service—either by the Viet Cong or the Saigon military junta. Some are politically motivated. Some fear reprisals. Most flee to escape the crossfire of war.

The refugee flow increases sharply during and just after a major battle. The heaviest concentrations of Vietnamese in temporary shelters are along the central coast stretching north from Cam Ranh Bay to Da Nang.

Bin Dinh province, with 187,755 in temporary camps, is the leading refugee concentration. A number of vicious battles were fought in Binh Dinh in the past two years and the province has been hammered by U.S. bombers.

Rural Vietnam is roughly divided into areas held by the Saigon government, that controlled by the Viet Cong and contested regions. Most refugees come from the latter.

Few refugees trek outside their home provinces. Officials say most travel less than six miles from their home villages.

Some of those uprooted are "daytime refugees," Lawrence said. They stay in government centers at night and return to their villages by daylight.

Those who flee sometimes return to bring out relatives or property. Some have dismantled and moved their homes piece by piece.

In Operation Rice Harvest," the Vietnamese army provided security while refugees moved into a contested area during the day to harvest rice. They withdrew to refugee centers at night.

The Saigon government is expected to increase the rice subsidy this year to lure refugee farmers back to their paddies.

Military action has been increasing largely in the fertile Mekong Delta where almost half of all South Vietnamese live. Refugees will increase in the delta if large scale military operations get underway—as expected—in 1967, experts said.

Temporary refugee camps grow into permanent hamlets if there is sufficinet arable land. Where farmland is scarce relief officials hope to retrain refugees to hold technical or semi-skilled jobs.

Refugee centers near Cam Ranh Bay are training Vietnamese to work in the sprawling U.S. installation. They are needed now for the war effort and officials expect they will provide a labor force when it is converted to peacetime usage.

Refugees are questioned closely when they turn themselves in. They are issued an identification card which serves as an emergency ration card. A duplicate is kept by authorities as a security check.

The homeless each get 10 piasters (about 7 cents U.S.) per day for a month. In emergencies, this payment is extended for two or three months.

The government aims to get refugees back home or resettled quickly. Those who resettle receive 5,000 piasters (about $35) per family, a six-month rice ration and 10 bags of cement and 20 sheets of aluminum to build a new house.

About $14 million in U.S. commodities will be used for refugee relief this year.

State Of The Union And Reaction

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

From Peking to Peoria, from Karachi to Kalamazoo, governments and plain citizens listened closely this week while the President of the United States delivered his annual State of the Union message.

And in a world split by conflicting ideologies and in a democratic nation where partisan politics are a way of life, almost anything he could say was bound to provoke controversy.

President Johnson, in his 75-minutes speech, spoke of many things—the funds necessary to pay for expanding Great Society and the war in Vietnam; the conduct of the war itself; the easing of the cold-war; civil rights legislation; the war against crime; the merging of the Labor and Commerce departments; and an increase in Social Security benefits.

Domestically, Johnson's proposal for a 6 per cent surcharge on both corporate and individual income taxes, drew the most critical reaction.

In the field of foreign affairs, the President drew the loudest applause when he declared that the United States would stand firm in Vietnam and maintain its pressure on the Communist foe "until he realizes that the war he started is costing him more than he can hope ever to gain."

Commission Of The Californias Will Get Close Reagan Attention

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—The Commission of the Californias is expected to get considerable attention from Gov. Ronald Reagan in the coming months.

It is a little known two-year-old commission, but highly important issues are pending before it such as culture, tourism, economics and education involving California, Mexico.

Representatives of the commission along with Gov. Hugo Cervantes del Rio of Baja California territory and Gov. Raul Sanchez Diaz of the state of Baja California and federal officials of both countries hope to meet with Reagan, Lt. Gov. Robert Finch and others early in March to determine the future of the organization.

Primarily, it will be a get acquainted meeting but accomplishments and plans will play a key role.

Reagan in December sent a letter to Southbay Daily Breeze Editor and Publisher Robert Curry, a commission member, announcing his support of the organization.

Finch will be a member of the commission and told Dr. Ernest O'Byrne, secretary general of the commission, that he would take a "very active role."

A major problem, however, will be appointment of members to the commission. Seven members are appointed by the governor, five by the Assembly speaker and five by the Senate.

The current projects were undertaken during the administration fo Gov. Edmund G. Brown and the March meeting will go a long way towards determining if the same course should be followed or if some changes will be made.

The commission was given birth in a bill introduced by then Sen. Aaron Quick, D-Calexico, in March, 1964. Brown and the late Gov. Eligio Esquivel of Baja California officially established it June 25, 1964.

In law, California has a commission and the State of Baja California also has a commission.

The territory of Baja California that part below the 28th parallel also is involved but under present state law the California commission is not charged with working with the territory.

In fact, the organizations act as one group and meet on an average of about every three months or less in a major California or Baja California city.

In less than two years the commission has established a rehabilitation and vocational training center for the deaf in Tijuana, has been instrumental in creating vocational schools in Baja California and has helped convince the Mexican Tourist Department to cut restrictions on U. S. citizens visiting Mexico by boat.

Curry last June announced his newspaper had given a $12,000 grant to establish an art center and school in La Paz, Baja California.

Much of the work of the commission was delayed or changed after Eligio Esquivel died.

An interim governor was appointed until the election of Sanchez Diaz. Some commission officials feel the same problem may occur again with the new Reagan administration.

The organization is urging construction of a highway traversing the length of Baja California to open the primitive wilderness areas to tourists.

The commission also may be called on to coordinate a bicentennial celebration in 1969 to mark the 200th anniversary of the founding of the first chain of missions begun by Father Junipero Serra.

Various suggestions are being considered at the present with the idea of an international exposition adjacent to the border the one receiving most consideration The commission has no official standing in this yet but expects to become involved soon.

As part of this upcoming celebration, the commission has urged restoration of the missions Father Serra founded, starting with the first one, the mission of San Fernando Velicata near Loreto in the Territory of Baja California.

The Mexican government has given its approval, and at the request of the commission, Mayor John Shelly of San Francisco recently put through a resolution calling for a caravan of cars to travel from mission to mission, celebrating their founding. The caravan would end at Loreto, but the problem of poor roads may hamper the plans.

Call For Mediation Service In Agricultural Labor Feuds

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — The Senate fact-finding committee on agriculture has recommended establishment of a conciliation and mediation service in the state Department of Agriculture to endeavor to resolve agricultural labor disputes.

The committee's report also recommended that legislation be enacted to require that any contract between growers and employees include a "no strike at harvest or other critical time" provision. A possible alternative to this would be the requirement that a 30 or 60-day notice of intention to strike be given an employer by the employee group.

This waiting period could be used to submit the dispute to the mediation and conciliation service.

The report was presented by Sen. Robert J. Lagomarsino, R-Ojai.

The report said the committee found a very real problem in the lack of communication between employers and employees in agriculture in the areas of union recognition, hours, wages, and working conditions. This lack of communication has been extremely costly in that it has resulted in strikes which have harmed the parties involved, as well as the consuming public.

A fourth recommendation of the committee was that the secret ballot be mandatory in any representation election. And it said that, after a bargaining agent is selected, the period of at least one year should elapse before a succeeding representation election could be held.

The committee said the mediation and conciliation service could be patterned after the proposal for such a service by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

Lagomarsino said the report was based primarily upon the voluminous testimony presented to the committee at the comprehensive and in depth hearings held at Delano and Sacramento during 1966. Two other incumbent senators, Howard Way, R-Exeter, and Jack Schrade, R-San Diego, signed the report along with Lagomarsino.

The report also was signed by former Sens. Hugh P. Donnelly, D-Turlock; Aaron Quick, D-Chula Vista; Joseph A. Rattigan, D-Santa Rosa (with reservations); Harold Sedgwick, R-Yuba City, William Symons, Jr., R-Laws; Robert D. Williams, D-Hanford; Vernon L. Sturgeon, R-Paso Robles.

"Why do we have to leave now? The second picture's just beginning!"

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Jan. 14, the 14th day of 1967 with 351 to follow.

The moon is between the new and first quarter stages; the morning stars are Mars and Jupiter; the evening stars are Saturn, Jupiter and Venus.

Philippine statesman Carlos Romulo was born on this day in 1899.

On this day in history:

In 1914, Henry Ford began making automobiles by the assembly line method.

In 1943, President Franklin Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill began a 10-day meeting in Morocco to plan Allied offensives aimed at the "unconditional surrender" of the Axis powers.

In 1959, the firing squads of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro executed 220 persons in two weeks.

In 1964, more than 140 persons died before a driving snowstorm finally ended in the east.

A thought for the day—British Prime Minister Winston Churchill said: "The only guide to a man is his conscience—the only shield to his memory is the rectitude and sincerity of his actions."

What Conversation To Make When Partner Ruins A Hand?

Many players flounder when the play of a hand comes to an end.

What is the right thing to say to partner?

Where will you find advise on this nice point of etiquette?

Imagine yourself the dummy in today's hand, watching your partner go down at four spades.

West takes the king and ace of hearts, and East signals for a continuation by playing the eight of hearts first and then the three.

HE'S STUDYING

West continues with the jack of hearts, and your partner studies the dummy very carefully.

The careful study does not deceive you, for South is wondering whether to ruff with dummy's queen or with dummy's ten of trumps.

South is calculating that the ten of spades has an even chance to shut East out.

The queen of spades will work perhaps 52 per cent of the time, since the jack will drop singleton or doubleton about that often.

EITHER WILL FAIL

You keep a straight face, knowing that either plan will fail. Finally, your partner ruffs with dummy's ten of spades.

East overruffs with the jack, and your partner eventually loses a diamond trick.

Down one.

What do you say to your partner? The correct thing is: "Please cut the cards for the next deal." Then close your teeth tightly together and look at your fingernails.

It is considered poor form to punch your partner in the nose, even though he did throw a cold hand away.

South should not ruff the jack of hearts at all.

Instead, he should throw a diamond from the dummy.

Then he can win any continuation, draw trumps and ruff his third diamond in dummy.

But keep it to yourself; maybe your partner will be equally restrained when you're the villain of the piece.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one heart.

You would like the hand better if you had two little clubs and K-J-9-8 of diamonds, but you cannot have everything your little heart desires. The hand is worth an opening bid as it stands.

SEW SIMPLE

Putting Thread By Window Will Prevent Its Breaking

By EUNICE FARMER

I've tried to get my scrapbook of columns in order just as I have suggested you do in the past. Somehow or other, I have misplaced a few of these columns and would very much like to have one complete set. If any of you have a complete set from the past seven years and would be willing to part with a few of them, please drop me a line.

MRS. W.H. says: Since so many women have complained about the quality of thread today, thought I'd pass this bit of information on to you for what it's worth (even though it sounds a little silly).

This, incidentally, is a quote from a book I read, it's not my idea. "Since thread is a fiber, it needs moisture to prevent breaking. Place your thread by an open window when it rains or there is fog." (I have also put my thread near steam of my steam iron.) It really does work, and the thread doesn't break nearly so often.

If you are a new reader of Sew Simple, perhaps you would like a copy of my leaflet "Twenty Most Frequently Asked Questions." Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal.

Mrs. Walter F. Dillemuth, La Jolla, Calif., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for the following suggestion.

This isn't exactly a sewing tip, but it's been helpful to me and to others who have to sew in a carpeted area. An amazingly quick and easy method of cleaning up those threads and bits of fabric is an ordinary hairbrush. Just brush the rug and there will be no need to drag out the vacuum. Even helps find those dropped pins that have a way of working into the pile and can be found only by barefooted children! (Thanks to your suggestion, I've found it only takes minutes to run over any carpet you've dragged your work across and it's so simple.)

DEAR EUNICE,

I love your column and you seem to hit on exactly the same problems I always have and can't find an answer to! I made a rayon crepe dress for the holidays. Every place I pressed darts and seams with the steam iron the crepe seems to have pulled up. It has almost ruined the appearance of this lovely fabric. What can I do about it now?

MRS. R.H.

DEAR MRS. R.H.:

Unfortunately, you made your first mistake by using the steam iron on crepe. Because of the krinkly weave, it should always be pressed very lightly with a dry iron. If the dress isn't already too tight, you may have your dry cleaner steam press the whole dress, however, this will cause the fabric to shrink. Before going to this extreme, try repressing these spots with a dry iron.

My best advice about pressing is this: because of the unusual combinations in today's fabrics, it's always a good idea to press a sample of the fabric with the steam iron and then with a dry iron to decide the best results. (Believe me gals, it's worth the little extra time it takes.)

DEAR EUNICE,

Some of the new resort cottons that are shown in the fashionable ready-to-wear shops are made of cotton that has a painted design. It seems that when this is pressed, the iron would stick to it. Any special pressing techniques about this? Also, the hems of these cottons don't have the conventional type hem-tape, but they are finished with lace instead. Should lace be used on all summer clothes?

MRS. H.E.

DEAR MRS. H.E.:

The cottons you are referring to are hand-screened and are completely washable. Actually, they do not recommend dry cleaning. They launder beautifully and are very popular because of the gay, unusual colors and prints.

As to the lace instead of hem tape, this is a detail used by a designer of a very expensive line of cotton dresses. I think it is very attractive and gives a very feminine look to your summer clothes. We have recommended this detail to our students, and they seem to love it. This is not going to replace hem tape, merely adds a bit of whimsy to your clothes.

Ballet Master Class Is Set

Richard Gibson, one of the Bay Area's top ballet masters, will come to Mill Valley on Jan. 21 to conduct a master class in ballet technique for students of the Pacific Dance Guild. They will gather at the Old Mill School auditorium at 10 a.m. to participate in the master class.

Gibson has just returned from New York City, where he was guest teacher for the Robert Joffrey Ballet Company, replacing Hector Zaraspe, who was in Europe giving private lessons to Rudolf Nureyev. Gibson was also guest teacher for George Balanchine at the school of American Ballet.

Well known for his choreography, he has created ballets that have attracted national attention. Formerly a member of the San Francisco Ballet, the Zachary Solov Company and the Robert Joffrey Ballet, Gibson is now director of the Peninsula Ballet Theater Company at the Dick Ford Dance Center in San Mateo.

Gibson will bring with him students from the Ballet Theater to demonstrate technique.

Mill Valley's Park School Panel Program On Thursday

Mill Valley . . . "Our Environment, What Are We Doing?" will be the topic under discussion by a panel from Marin County at a program being presented by the Park School Parent-Teacher Assn. on Thursday at 8 p.m. at the School in Mill Valley.

John Fisher-Smith, Mill Valley architect, will open the program with slides put together by SCOPE, American Institute of Architects. The panel members are Paul Zucker, planning director for Marin County; Gordon Chan, instructor in biology, College of Marin; Norman Black, Mill Valley Chamber of Commerce representative; and Mrs. Jeoffrey Morshead, director of beautification for Mill Valley. Moderator will be Thomas Skornia.

Home Consumption Food Prices Lower

Price increases for food eaten at home are lower than the national average here in the San Francisco-Oakland area, but the increase of price for food eaten away from home is higher than for the rest of the nation, reports Mrs. Frances M. Head.

Mrs. Head, home advisor for Marin County and the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of California, writes in the monthly homemaker's newsletter that prices for food eaten away from home have increased 28.9 per cent in the Bay Area while the national average increase has been 24 per cent since 1957-59.

Prices for food eaten at home and away from home are 15.8 per cent higher across the nation than they were in 1957-59 and 5.4 per cent higher than last year at the same time, she reports.

Since 1957-59 prices of food eaten at home have increased 11 per cent, and since last year are up about 5 per cent.

But, Mrs. Head noted, there have been equal or more rapid cost rises since 1957-59 in other important items that make up the consumer price index.

She cited medical care services—up 34.7 per cent; transportation services and repairs—up 25.3 per cent; footwear—up 20.4 per cent; and health and recreation—up 19.3 per cent.

From material compiled by Marie Feree, area home economist, Consumer Marketing, the food dollar is reported to cover the following costs: farmer, 31 cents; miscellaneous expenses such as rents, advertising, containers, electric, business taxes, 30 cents; labor, 28 cents; rail and trucking, 7 cents; income tax, 2 cents and corporate profits 2 cents.

Mrs. Head points out that, with one third of all housewives working, that more of their dollars now go toward pre-peeled, pre-cooked and other convenience foods.

Sullivan-McDonald Betrothal Announced At Dinner Party

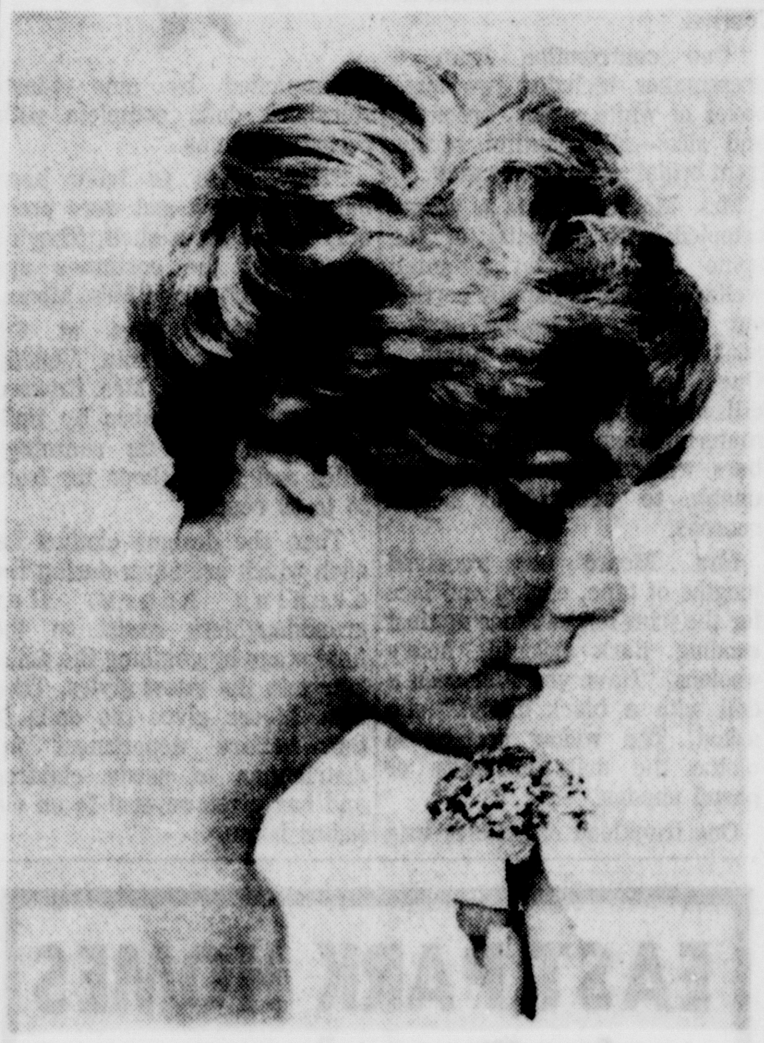
MARILYN McDONALD.

A dinner party at San Francisco's Olympic Club was the setting for the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lennox MacDonald of the betrothal of their daughter, Marilyn, to Barry James Sullivan, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Sullivan of San Rafael.

The couple will be married at the Santa Barbara home of the bride's parents on Jan. 28.

The future bride is a graduate of the University of Southern California, where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority and Phi Beta Kappa. She studied anthropology at Oxford University in England.

Her fiance is also a graduate of the University of Southern California and is associated with the University of California Press in Berkeley. He is the grandson of Mrs. Erwin Nicol of Alameda.



FAWN LOOK

Just as women's hair was growing to lengths, per 1966 fashion dictum, there's a strong return to the short coiffure. Adrian, national hairstyles director for Charles of the Ritz, creates this look called "The Fawn"—a razor cut of wispy ringlets moving forward toward the face.

MRS. WILLY BRANDT, wife of West Germany's new vice chancellor and foreign minister will have added social duties. She is shown in her Berlin home.

MRS. BRANDT

Woman On The Go In Berlin Is Wife Of Vice Chancellor

BERLIN, Germany (GF)—Her family's decision to continue living in Berlin will make Rut Brandt, attractive wife of Willy Brandt, Bonn's new vice chancellor and foreign minister, a woman on the go: It will often be necessary for her to travel to the capital on the Rhine to maintain protocol at political and social functions. Yet Mrs. Brandt, 46, doesn't mind it too much at all. For she joins her popular husband and Berlin's until recently ruling mayor in being pleased about his appointment to two key federal posts at once.

Friendliness, charm and elegance are Mrs. Brandt's most frequently cited marks. Norwegian born, she is the second youngest of four daughters who were raised by their mother alone after the early death of their father. She was thus introduced to rugged life while very young and the upsets didn't stop there. During World War II, she worked with the underground movement in Norway, once made a dramatic flight across the border to Sweden, and her first husband was killed in the war.

IN 1947, she came to Berlin as an employee of the Norwegian Military Mission and met Willy Brandt, who had also been in Norway during the war and had afterwards returned to Berlin as a foreign correspondent for Scandinavian newspapers.

Although accustomed to hardships, Mrs. Brandt recalls that she was deeply shaken by the ruins and misery when she arrived in the divided city and that it took nearly a year before she could laugh without feeling a deep sense of guilt. She quickly learned German by taking walks and getting acquainted with Berliners on her way and by picking up every bit of the language she could when out shopping.

She also got to know those unique traits that make Berliners Berliners—their crisp, witty dialect, practical behavior, their readiness to help and their legendary love for animals.

In 1949, she married Willy Brandt and decided to remain in Germany. She soon became a popular and well-liked figure outside the city and Germany during foreign trips, in which she talked up the problems of Berlin and Berliners. She admits that, back in those days, she was shy about being in the public spotlight. Today, receptions and state visits no longer bother her, but she enjoys most leading a private life.

CURRENTLY, the Brandts' three sons — 17-year-old Peter, Lars, 15, and Mathias, 5 — demand most of her attention and energies. The children have been raised very liberally and this has required much understanding and many insights from Mrs. Brandt, who has also charged herself with holding the reins and maintaining peace in the family. Not only father, but sons are interested in politics and there have often been sharp divergences of opinion, which have required Mother to be mediator.

When Mrs. Brandt does get a few minutes alone at the family's rented villa in Berlin's Grunewald district, she turns to one of her favorite pursuits: the fine arts.

THE SUBURBAN SCENE

Tour Is Attracting Interest In Marin

By MOLLY MARIN

The scheduled KQED tour of Oriental art centers is attracting much interest on the part of Marin docents for the Avery Brundage Collection at the De Young Museum. Clarence Shangraw, assistant curator for the Brundage display, will conduct the tour. Mrs. Richard Hahn of Belvedere will be a group leader. Forty will make the tour May 13-June 23 with the itinerary to include Japan, Korea, Taiwan and Hong Kong. Earlier hopes of including art museums behind the Bamboo Curtain on China's mainland appear very dim at this point according to Mrs. Hahn and Elsie La Voy, tour coordinator.

GUESTS of the Walter J. Taits of San Rafael at tonight's Marin Cotillion Winter Fantasy Ball at the Meadow Club will be Messrs. and Mesdames Willard Hall, Chris Ketjen, Robert Edgar, John Lewis, Jean Ticoulat, Lloyd Fournier, John Haley, John Carbone, David Witt, Wesley Gunmenson, Miss Lovey Wolf and Clifford Hall. The Joseph Lampertis have invited Messrs. and Mesdames Chris Madera, Jerry Hendricks, George Burton and stanley Knolles.

THE WILLIAM Brantmans entertained at a black tie dinner party for 12 friends from the city at their Tiburon home last night.

WHEN THE Tiburon Peninsula Chamber of Commerce had an opportunity to nominate two localites for KABL Citizen of The Year award, whom did they choose? Two women. Mrs. Alfred Azevedo will represent Tiburon and Mrs. E. Gould Ingram, Belvedere.

CAROL SUE TANENBAUM of Brooklyn, N.Y., who will become the bride of Harley M. Leete III of Belvedere in New York on Jan. 22, visited Mr. and Mrs. Harley Leete Jr. during the winter vacation. The Leete family will attend the wedding in the East. Gurdon S. Leete, younger brother of the future bridegroom, will be best man.

Dollmaker Is Tickled Over Results From Story In I-J

"I receive boxes of materials and scraps almost every day and am tickled to death about it," reports Mrs. Dolores Moore, the shut-in whose story of her personal contribution of dolls to welfare was printed in the Dec. 20 issue of the Independent-Journal.

"One contribution from a dressmaker included two huge boxes of white satins, brocades and silks—all beautiful scraps from bridal gowns," she said.

Mrs. Moore, who is a widow crippled with arthritis of the spine and lives on a small welfare check, is happily sorting out bundles of sewing scraps sent to her by Marin families. One organizatoin, a senior citizens group, offered to donate materials, explaining that members wished to sew but were unable to because of health reasons.

Mrs. Moore has received lengths of tape, edging and lace for the trim but cautions against sending dark colored, heavy woolens. "Have you ever seen a doll with a black dress?" she asked. The widow prefers to clothe the dolls in white or pastel shades.

One trunkload of articles was accompanied by nine 4-inch storybook dolls complete with period costumes.

"They seem to have been quite expensive and were probably stored on a shelf. They're dusty and the costumes are threadbare," added Mrs. Moore.

Mrs. Moore lives at 610 Gallerita Way, Santa Venetia with her daughter, Mrs. Edward Grieswell, who assists by finding used dolls at rummage sales and thrift shops for from 35 to 60 cents.

Then she designs clothes for each which are sewn during the evening hours. Her granddaughters assist in the final stage by combing the dolls' hair into the latest styles. Then Mrs. Moore gives the dolls to the welfare department for distribution to needy children and has given several to an old ladies home.

Sausalitans Hurt As Car Strikes Bridge

Four Sausalito residents were injured — one seriously — when their car hit a concrete abutment on the southern approach to the Golden Gate Bridge last night, California Highway Patrol reported.

The car driver was sales engineer Garrett D. Hodgson, 37, of 64 Alexander Avenue, who suffered a cut forehead and left leg.

Passengers were Hodgson's wife, Mary, 38, who suffered face cuts and possible concussion; Alfred D. Belsey, 54, of 205 Second Street, who was treated at Marin General Hospital for minor cuts to the forehead; and his wife, Helen K. Belsey, 51.

Mrs. Belsey was hospitalized at Marin general with a neck concussion and fractures and cuts to the right arm. Her condition today was reported fair.

The Hodgson couple was released after treatment at Harbor Emergency Hospital in San Francisco. The highway patrol said Hodgson was apparently blinded by the headlights of an oncoming car.

Would-Be Span Leaper Rescued

A depressed San Francisco man was taken off the Golden Gate Bridge yesterday by California Highway Patrol officers, who feared he might decide to jump.

Robert Charles Matheisl, 31, foreman for a San Francisco construction company, was seen shortly after noon walking on the east side of the bridge.

Highway Patrolman John F. Allison said Matheisl was scuffing his feet along the bridge walk, his head bowed and eyes downcast. Allison said Matheisl appeared very depressed when, taken to the toll plaza office he said everything had "gone wrong" and that he went out on the bridge to "think about jumping." Matheisl was taken to San Francisco General Hospital for observation.

Tryouts Are Set

Homestead Players will hold tryouts for two plays by Eugene Ionesco Tuesday and Friday at 8 p.m. in Brown's Hall, Mill Valley. The two one-act plays, "The Bald Soprano" and "The Lesson," are scheduled for late March. Director will be Bill Hughes of Sausalito.

College Of Marin Announces Spring Night Course List

The College of Marin has announced a schedule of 115 credit and 98 non-credit evening classes for the spring semester.

The schedule includes 20 new credit courses at Novato High college in Kentfield, and 10 new credti courses at Novato High School. Ten new non-credit courses are offered, but the total of 98 non-credit courses is down from last spring's offering of 108.

The evening classes start Feb. 6. Brochures on the courses are available at the college.

New non-credit courses at the college include blueprint reading on Monday nights; beginning aviation ground school Monday or Wednesday nights; travel agency and tourist industry training and health and heart care (taught by doctors) on Tuesday nights, intermediate shorthand and income tax preparation on Wednesday; history and appreciation of wine, and reform and revolution in Egypt, on Thursday.

A non-credit course in organization, management and leadership is offered Tuesday nights at Terra Linda High School, and a course on apprentice barbering on Thursday nights at Novato High School.

New credit evening courses offered at the Kentfield campus include business law, communications, semiconductor circuit analysis, history of the Far East and personal and social adjustment on Monday nights; economics, United States history, history of philosophy, traffic control and reading improvement, Tuesdays; data processing applications, Wednesdays; plane geometry and criminal law, Thursdays.

Also at Kentfield, beginning photography will be offered Monday and Wednesday nights, intermediate shorthand Monday and Thursday nights, fire fighting tactics and strategy Thursday or Friday nights, protection equipment and systems, Tuesday or Wednesday nights, elementary German and intermediate Spanish, Tuesday and Thursday nights.

New evening credit courses at Novato High School include introductory philosophy on Monday nights, accounting on Monday and Wednesday nights, contemporary novel and marriage and family, Tuesday nights; economics, elementary physiography, western civilization and elementary algebra, Wednesdays and cultural anthropology and business mathematics, Thursdays.

Students may register by mail through Friday, or in person from 7 to 8:30 p.m. on Feb. 2 at the Kentfield campus for credit courses.

Students can register for non-credit courses during the next two weeks, or on the first night of class.

Council Due Land Report For Street

The San Rafael City Council Monday night will hear a report on efforts to acquire rights-of-way for connecting Francisco Boulevard and Irwin Streets.

The two streets were left disconnected by construction of improvements to the interchange at the south end of the Highway 101 viaduct.

City Manager Dan E. Andersen will report on preliminary negotiations with Shamrock Materials Inc. and the Rice Estate, through whose properties the right-of-way would pass.

Other items on the 8 p.m. agenda at city hall include a long-standing appeal from a planning commission veto on further sewer connections in Peacock Gap Unit Six and opening bids on two hydraulic cushion flap gates for the Francisco Boulevard pumping station.

The council will take up uniform rezoning of three parcels at 171-177 Woodland Avenues, approval of a final map for Las Colindas Unit Ten subdivision, a report on erosion control in Seaview Heights Unit Two and the leasing of a pistol range by the San Rafael Sanitation District to the city and county.

Teachers Ask Place On Screening Board

Mill Valley Teachers Assn. last night asked the school district board to let them place a representative on the committee to screen candidates for the job of district superintendent.

"There seemed to be favorable reaction" to the suggestion by teacher representative James Martin, according to Supt. G. R. McConnell, who will leave the district June 30.

McConnell said the board will consider this and a list of qualifications a new superintendent must have when the board meets at 8 p.m. Monday.

Also postponed to Monday night was selection of the entire screening committee. McConnell said the board was reluctant to decide on members of the screening committee last night.

Purpose of last night's meeting was to discuss standards to be met by McConnell's successor with Supt. Virgil S. Hollis of Marin County Schools, Richard Koon of the University of California and Erwin Johnson of Stanford University.

Koon and Johnson were chosen to help set these standards by the deans of the schools of education at their universities, but have not yet been appointed to the screening committee itself, McConnell said.

Upshot of the two and a half hour meeting was appointment of board chairman William L. Clark and trustee M. James Norton to a subcommittee to draw a list of criteria and present it for board approval Monday night, according to McConnell.

McConnell said a large part of the discussion centered on the relative importance of a superintendent who spends most of his time on the instructional program, compared to one who spends his time overseeing the general activities of the district.

Leased Land Agreement For Library

Sausalito City Mgr. George W. Patterson yesterday disclosed that agreement was reached Thursday evening on terms to permit the city to reacquire leased land which is part of the site for the proposed new library.

The agreement means the city can meet the deadline Monday to apply for federal funds to pay one-third of the cost of the site. The rest of the site is still in city control.

Patterson said he attempted to notify the Independent-Journal before the special city council meeting at which the agreement was approved. The meeting was called at the last moment, he said, after negotiations were completed between the city and lessees of the site.

Under the terms of the agreement, the city could exercise an option for $20,000 to reacquire 8,342 square feet leased by the city to Madden and Lewis northeast of Vina Del Mar plaza until the year 2002. The site is sub-leased to Mac-Marin, operator of the Spinnaker Restaurant.

The option to buy the leasehold interest would not be exercised, Patterson explained, if the city's application for state and federal funds totaling $148,906 were not approved. Action on the application is expected within two months, Head Librarian Kay Berteau estimated.

Addition of the land cost brought the total cost of the library to $446,716, she said.

Also agreed upon at the special council meeting, Patterson said, was a landscape easement on 4,000 square feet of the leased sandspit at no cost to the city.

Councilmen voted 4-0 on the agreement, Patterson reported. Councilmen Jan Paul Dyk was absent.

A $250,000 bond election will be held March 7 to finance the remainder of the library cost.

Auto Collision Cause Reported

A three-car collision Thursday, in which one driver incurred minor injuries, was caused by a mechanical failure on one car, the California Highway Patrol reported yesterday.

The patrol reported that cars driven by Wayne Duncan Telford, 17, of 31 Gregg Place, Novato, and Joseph James Anselmo, 39, of 120 Merim Street, San Rafael, slowed for traffic at 4 p.m., but a fluid line burst on the brake of a car driven by Ernest Jay Belding, 49, of Auburn, and his car struck the rear of Anselmo's pushing it into Telford's car. Belding told the patrol he would see his own doctor.

Youth Contest Winners Listed

Winners in the youth leadership contest sponsored by San Rafael Elks Lodge 1108 were announced today by Frank Ench, exalter ruler.

They are Michael J. Giacomini of Olema, a senior at Marin Catholic High School and Gretchen Walford of 418 Oakdale Avenue, Corte Madera, a senior at Redwood High School.

Prizewinners each received savings bonds from the lodge and their entries have been forwarded for state, and possibly national, contests.

The leadership contest, sponsored annually by the Elks for high school students, judges the students not on scholarship, but on their accomplishments in leadership, citizenship, initiative and community activities.

Six Marinites In Marine Reserves

Six Marin men have been inducted into the Marine Corps Reserve at the San Rafael training center, and will begin six months' active duty within three months.

They are Robert E. Barcewski of 716 Prince Royal Drive; Robert M. Simpton of 445 Vista Grande, and Kit P. Thomas of 49 Serra Way, all San Rafael; Walter P. Kosta of 8 Laurel Avenue, San Anselmo; Vance C. Montgomery of 180 Toyon Drive, Fairfax, and Peter I Teller of 150 Shady Lane, Ross.

First Meeting For New Scout Troop

First meeting for Marin's newest Boy Scout Troop, No. 65 will be held Jan. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in the San Anselmo American Legion Log Cabin, when the troop's first hike will be planned.

The executive committee includes Ronald R. Blanque, Fred E. McQueen, Ralph Lewis, Konstantin G. Zaharoff and Ramond A. Blanquie, chairman. Boys wishing to join the troop may call Blanquie.

County Inmate Back In Jail

A 40-year-old work-furlough fugitive from county jail since April 8, 1965, was arraigned in Marin Municipal Court yesterday afternoon on felony complaint of the failure to return.

He is Owen K. Perry, of Martiinez. Perry, arrested on a drunk charge in Contra Costa County, was returned to Marin County yesterday by sheriff's officers. He was serving a year in jail here for forgery when he departed, officers said.

Judge Hadden W. Roth scheduled plea entry for 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Literary Courses

A nine-week course in poem and play writing will be offered by Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Department. The class will meet from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the Community and Youth Center. Date of the first meeting has not been set. Teacher will be Norman Moser of Mill Valley.

Green Bay Solid Favorite In Super Classic

By MIKE RATHET

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Green Bay Packers and Kansas City Chiefs meet tomorrow in the long-awaited, much-ballyhooed Super Bowl, a game that likely will establish—to almost everyone except the coaches involved—whether the National or American football league is superior.

While fan interest for this first meeting between the 47-year-old NFL and seven-year-old AFL centers around the superiority question, neither Green Bay Coach Vince Lombardi nor Kansas City Coach Hank Stram was viewing it exactly that way.

"It's a big football game," said Lombardi, "but winning or losing won't mean the end of the world as far as the Packers are concerned — or Kansas City either."

"Superiority of one league over the other will be hard to determine in one game," Stram said. "But it will give people a better picture than they've had.

"With the public it probably will 'prove' that."

What the game ultimately will prove remains a question, but there's little doubt that the viewing public will be the largest in the history of any sporting event despite the fact there probably will be empty seats in 93,000-seat Los Angeles Coliseum when the game gets underway at 1:05, PST.

But, with both NBC and CBS televising and broadcasting the game nationally, the largest audience in sports history is virtually guaranteed.

Also guaranteed is the largest payoff in the history of pro team sports with $15,000 going to each member of the winning team and $7,500 to each loser.

The oddsmakers have made the Packers almost a two-touchdown favorite to grab the pot of gold, along with the enormous prestige of winning this first battle for supremacy between the longtime rival leagues who suddenly grasped hands as one big, happy family last June.

Harmony, as a matter of fact, has been the key word at the Super Bowl site and the various factions have meticulously compromised on all variations of the playing rules.

Since the footballs used in the two leagues vary slightly — the AFL ball is supposed to be easier to pass; the NFL ball easier to kick—the Chiefs will use the American League ball when they are on offense and the Packers will use the National League ball when they are.

There will be three officials from each league, sudden death will be in effect if the two teams are tied at the end of regulation time and the leagues have agreed to use the NFL one-point conversion rule instead of the AFL's two-point conversion option.

The battle itself, however, will not be fought at the conference table but by the players involved and in only two instances is there the possibility that the usual starting line-ups will be altered.

Lombardi has hinted that running back Paul Hornung, his onetime Golden Boy, may see action at the halfback spot while there still remains some question about the status of Fred Arbanas, Kansas City's all-league tight end who suffered a slight shoulder separation in the AFL title game.

Elijah Pitts is expected to start in the Green Bay backfield along with fullback Jim Taylor, flanker Boyd Dowler and quarterback Bart Starr, the unerring aerialist who completed 62 per cent of his passes as the Packers rolled to a 12-2 regular season record.

Starr also has top receivers, besides Dowler, in split end Carroll Dale and tight end Marv Fleming, but the big weapon for the Packers usually is their rigid defense.

The Green Bay front four of Willie Davis, Ron Kostelnik, Henry Jordan and Lionel Aldridge is a veteran unit, linebackers Dave Robinson, Ray Nitschke and Lee Roy Caffey all are quick and strong and Herb Adderley and Willie Wood are exceptional defensive backs.

Tackling that defense will be a Kansas City offense that pulled the Chiefs to an 11-2-1 record and revolves around Len Dawson's passes to Arbanas, Otis Taylor and Chris Burford and the running of rookie Mike Garrett and fullback Curt McClinton.

If Arbanas is unable to start or has to be pulled out during the game, Reg Carolan or Aaron Brown, a rooike who has worked mostly at a defensive tackle spot, will move in at tight end.

While the Packers have experience in their offensive line and defensive unit, the Chiefs have a heavy edge in the weight department.

On the offensive line are such heavyweights as 292-pound tackle Jim Tyrer and 267-pound guard Curt Merz while Buck Buchanan, 6-foot-7, 287-pound tackle, is the No. 1 behemoth on the defensive front four.

As for the linebackers and defensive backs, Bobby Bell was an all-league choice at his outside linebacking post while Johnny Robinson grabbed a spot at safety.

The Packers went through a short workout at the Coliseum today after moving into Los Angeles from their Santa Barbara training quarters. The Chiefs remained at their Long Beach site and did not work out.

Drake Grad Tells Of Pressures Of Tomorrow's Super Bowl Game

REG CAROLAN

COUNTDOWN—"My stomach is in a knot. I don't know how much longer I can take it. We started getting keyed up three weeks ago, before the AFL championship, and it's been building up ever since. Honestly, I'm so excited I feel like I'm going to burst."

Reg Carolan, all 6-foot-6, 238 pounds of him, was at the other end of the line last night, trying to relax in his Santa Monica hotel room, when I buzzed him on the prospects for tomorrow's Super Duper Bowl game in Los Angeles.

ONE OF the most gifted all-around athletes ever to come out of Marin County, Carolan is reserve tight end for the AFL's Kansas City Chiefs and figures to see considerable action against the Green Bay Packers.

"No, I don't think I'll start, but I'm certain I'll see some action," he said over the long-distance horn. Injured first string Fred Arbanas, Carolan added, has been practicing the last two days and is expected to start with an assist from a Novocain injection in his aching shoulder.

"FRED IS a tough and great competitor," Carolan praised, "and I just hope he doesn't hurt himself further Sunday. But I'm ready whenever they need me."

Reg, an articulate and gregarious redhead, was ready two weeks ago when Arbanas was injured in the first quarter of the AFL title game with Buffalo. The king-sized Marin Countian played three-quarters as the Chiefs romped, 31-7.

DURING THE regular season, however, he was used sparingly, catching only 7 passes for 154 yards and 3 TDs.

Asked about the odds favoring the Packs, Carolan admitted: "The press down here doesn't give us much of a chance and we're about a two TD underdog, but I prefer it that way. The players are 'high' and we have confidence in our ability, but we also realize we're up against an excellent football team and an image as well. I know many of the Packers personally and they're just human beings like the rest of us, but they have that 'unbeatables' image.

"WE'RE A lot bigger than the Packers—about 16 pounds per man in the line—but execution is important. The team that clicks will win. We have everything to gain as underdogs and they have a lot to lose. And I'm not only referring to the money. Heck, Uncle Sam will get his share of that."

Reg said he has played before such crowds as 83,000 in the 1962 College All-Star Game and 70,000 against the Jets in New York, but the television audience of an estimated 60 million viewers, the monetary prizes ($15,000 per winner, $7,500 per loser) and the all-around immensity of the first-ever world professional football championship really packs a wallop.

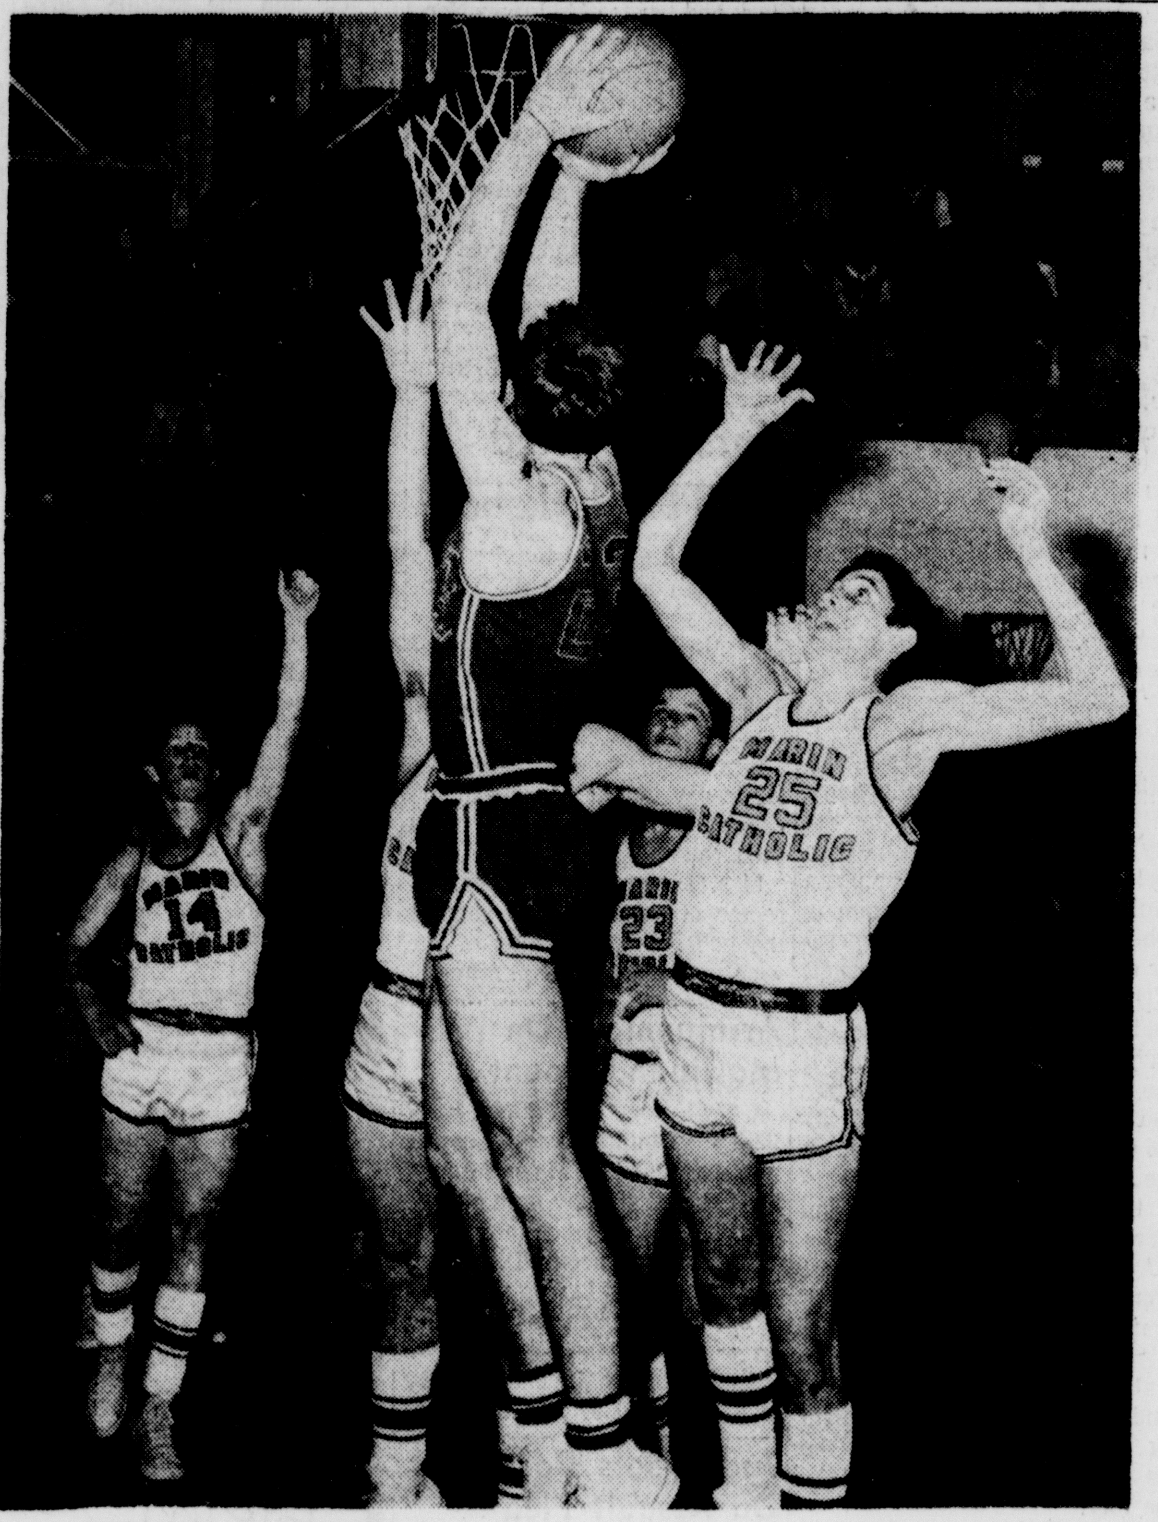
THE DRAKE High School and University of Idaho graduate continued enthusiastically: "My wife, Judy, is coming in from Kansas City. My mom and dad (Ethel and Howell Carolan) are flying down from Lake Tahoe and two of my old schoolboy buddies, Dr. Gary Boero and Bill Purcell, are coming from Marin County.

"I also have received a good luck telegram from my high school coach, Bob Troppmann. He really taught me a lot about football."

CAROLAN SAID he and his wife would return to Kansas City next week to collect their belongings, then head home to Marin. He'll be apartment-hunting here in a couple of weeks and hopes to resume his springtime profession of substitute teaching at College of Marin and the Tam District high schools.

Win or lose tomorrow, Carolan will qualify for a special teaching credential in finances.

Watch for him on your screens. He wears No. 80.



TOO HIGH, TOO FAR—Tamalpais center Pat Schafer is practically surrounded by four Marin Catholic defenders but the 6-3 Indian star has too much height and jump as he dumps in two points to contribute to a 55-38 Tam win at Marin Catholic. Surrounding Schafer are Harry Matsinger (14), Ches Bornia (25) and Rick Garms (23).

BRUINS BEAT BEARS

Stanford, UCLA Triumph; Showdown On TV Tonight

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

If there's to be a race among the Pacific-8 Conference basketball entries, it will develop tonight when the league's two unbeaten teams —UCLA and Stanford — collide in the Bruins' Pauley Pavilion. (The game will be televised to Northern California by KTVU, Channnel 2, at 8 o'clock.)

UCLA, which beat California, 96-78, last night for its third straight league victory, is 11-0 for the season, ranked No. 1 nationally and expected to romp through the Pacific-8.

Stanford, which beat Southern California, 67-58, last night for its third straight league victory, is 8-4 and unranked nationally, but appears to be the only Pacific-8 team good enough to challenge UCLA.

A UCLA triumph may well end any threat to the Bruins' title aspirations in only the second week of conference competition.

In what looks like a seven-team battle for second place, Oregon State edged Washington State, 63-61, and Washington slipped by Oregon, 78-74.

Lew Alcindor, the 7-foot-1 sophomore center who makes UCLA a prohibitive title favorite, led the Bruins' win with 26 points and strong rebounding.

In the Bruins' supporting cast were Lynn Shackelford with 21 points, Lucius Allen with 18 and Mike Warren with 14.

Russ Critchfield played an outstanding game for the Bears, netting 25 points, and Charley Perkins added 22, but UCLA overcame a strong Cal effort with a rush in the last 12 minutes.

UCLA led only 63-58, but Alcindor assumed control of the rebounding, and Warren and Shackelford started scoring to turn a close game into a rout.

Stanford stayed apace of the lead with its best defensive effort of the season and some strong outside shooting.

Center Rick Baker dominated both backboards for the Indians, the tenacious defense kept the pressure on the Trojans, and well-balanced scoring compiled the edge.

Don Griffin totaled 14 points for Stanford, and Art Harris and Mal McElwain each added 13. USC's Steve Jennings was the game's high-point man with 16.

Catholics Thrashed By Indians

By RALPH CHATOIAN

Marin Catholic basketball fans now know why Marin Athletic League basketball coaches have picked Tamalpais to win the championship.

The Indians left no doubt of their superiority over the Wildcats—last night at least—by coasting to a 55-38 triumph in the Marin Catholic gym before 650 fans.

It was 14-2 at the end of the first quarter, the Wildcats mustering only one bucket, missing three free throws and a half dozen shots from the floor. By halftime it was 24-14, then 42-20 at the three-quarter mark.

The Indians were getting great things from center Pat Schafer and forward Floyd Jackson, both in point production and rebounding.

QUICK DEFENSE

Tam's quick-moving defense, coupled with some missed "sure" shots by the Wildcats, left the Indians in front throughout the game. With four cagers usually hitting double figures for Marin Catholic, it went to the other extreme this time, none doing 10 or better. Paul McCarthy and Harry Matsinger led the team with eight points each.

Schafer had a terrific third quarter when Tam really pulled away, making three shots from the floor and four of five free throws. He worked his way in front of Marin Catholic defenders to get most of his points from under the basket.

Novato Is Overrun By Pirates

By ROB HARVEY

In a display of might and finesse, Drake High's cage team overpowered Novato's Hornets last night to notch its third Marin County Athletic League victory in as many tries.

The Hornets, playing before a home crowd of some 975 interested spectators, never had a chance in the decisive 66-47 defeat at the hands of the experienced, defending MCAL champs.

With Jerry Sprout, the Pirates' tough, 6-foot-6 center bolstering the league's No. 1 defense by blocking no less than half a dozen shots, Drake's ball-hawking cagers established a 20-5 bulge at the end of the first quarter and sailed to a 45-15 halftime lead.

LOOKS EASY

They made it look easy, even though head mentor Carl "Red" Brown substituted freely after 4:52 remained in the second period.

Meanwhile, when they were not throwing the ball away or kicking it around, Novato, now winless in three MCAL outings, fought back behind Harold Fain, who paced his team with 12 markers, all from the field.

Win For Redwood

Although the Redwood High varsity and class B teams suffered their first Marin Athletic League losses against San Rafael last night, the frosh and junior varsity teams kept their records unblemished with victories.

The jayvees nicked the San Rafael juniors 36-35, and the frosh ripped their San Rafael counterparts, 45-26 as Jerry Piro scored 18 pooints.

San Rafael Surprises The Giants

By GARY TISCHLER

San Rafael High's small but pesky Bulldogs harrassed Redwood into a nervous wreck in the first half, then refused to collapse under pressure and pulled out a 54-49 victory to hand the Giants their first Marin County Athletic League loss at San Rafael last night.

The Bulldogs threw a zone at the Giants in the first half, cut them off nearly at mid-court and forced Redwood's usually calm guard Andre Horn into his worst two quarters of basketball to sweep to a nine-point halftime lead at 25-16.

Horn threw the ball away five times, and missed six shots in the first half. And as Horn went, so did the Giants. Redwood, after leading 11-7 at the first period mark, fell apart as the Giants managed only five points in the second quarter while San Rafael was getting 18.

BULLDOGS RALLY

Horn, like a basketball defender of lost causes, revived in the second half and pulled the Giants from the depths of an 11-point deficit to a 45-44 lead with 4:10 left on a 25-footer from the top of the key. The Giants led for the last time on a slithering, twisting drive by Jack Fitzhenry, 48-47, with 1:51 left but the Bulldogs, like avowed teatotalers at a New Year's Party, stayed calm and swept back into the lead on a bursting drive by Mike Donahoo, two free throws by Rich Schau, a daring jumper by Roger Widmer and a pair of free throws by Donahoo after the issue was settled.

Terra Linda Wins Upset

Terra Linda High's cage team played its best game of the season last night en route to a 66-64 non-league triumph over visiting, highly touted Salesian of Richmond. Fred Smith topped all scorers with a fine 26-point performance for the winners.

The Trojans, employing a pesky press and zone defense, broke a 35-35 halftime deadlock behind Smith's marksmanship, the outstanding all-around play of center Bruce Kilby, and the clutch performance of Tom McCart, who came off the bench to bag two quickies when Terra Linda fell 6 points behind in the third stanza.

How Packers And Chiefs Match Up

By MIKE RATHET

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Here's the way the National League champion Green Bay Packers and American League champion Kansas City Chiegfs match up for Sunday's Super Bowl football game:

OFFENSE

Split End

Packers — No. 84, Carroll Dale — a 6-2, 200-pound, 7-year veteran from VPI. Probably is Green Bay's best deep receiver, a cutie in the Del Shofner mold. Caught 37 passes for 876 yards and 7 TDs.

Chiefs — No. 88, Chris Burford — A 6-3 210-pound, 7-year veteran from Stanford. A stylish receiver but dos not have exceptional speed. Caught 58 passes for 758 yards and 8 TDs.

Left Tackle

Packers — No. 76, Bob Skoronski — a 6-3, 250-pound, 9-year veteran from Indiana.⅝ Strong and a good blocker.

Chiefs — No. 77, Jim Tyrer — A 6-6, 292-pound, 6-year veteran from Ohio State. An exceptional blocker and an all-AFL selection.

Left Guard

Packers — No. 63, Fuzzy Thurston — A 6-1, 245-pound, 9-year veteran from Valparaiso. A solid pass protector equally proficient at pulling to lead running play.

Chiefs — No. 17, Ed Budde, — A 6-5, 260-pound, 4-year veteran from Michigan State. Outstanding on rushing plays and an all-AFL selection.

Center

Packers — No. 50, Bill Curry — A 6-2, 235-pound, 2-year veteran from Georgia Tech. Good blocker, but only in his first year as a starter.

Chiefs — No. 66, Wayne Frazier — A 6-3, 245-pound, 3-year veteran from Auburn. Also in his first full year, but has learned his trade.

Right Guard

Packers — No. 64, Jerry Kramer — A 6-3, 245-pound, 9-year veteran from Idaho. Exceptional on Green Bay's patented power sweep and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 64, Curt Merz — A 6-4, 267-pound, 7-year veteran from Iowa. Is as strong as they come, a good pass protector and an all-AFL selection.

Right Tackle

Packers — No. 75, Forrest Gregg — A 6-4, 250-pound, 10-year veteran from Southern Methodis. Potent blocker on power sweep, good pass protector and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 73, Dave Hill — A 6-5, 254-pound, 4-year veteran from Auburn. Improving rapidly. Better on pass plays than rushing play.

Tight End

Packers — No. 81, Marv Fleming — A 6-4, 235-pound, 4-year veteran from Utah. Still developing as a receiver but caught 31 passes for 361 yards and 2 TDs.

Chiefs — No. 84, Fred Arbanas — A 6-3, 240-pound 5-year veteran from Michigan State. A fine blocker who has overcome the handicap of loss of sight in one eye. Caught 22 passes for 305 yards and 4 TDs and was an all-AFL selection.

Quarterback

Packers — No. 15, Bart Starr — A 6-1, 200-pound, 11-year veteran from Alabama. Probably had his best year with 156 completions, a .622 completion percentage, 2,257 yards gained, 14 TDs and just 3 interceptions. An all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 16, Len Dawson — A 6-0 190-pound, 10-year veteran from Purdue. Also had his best year with 159 completions, a .560 percentage, 2,527 yards, 26 TDs and 10 interceptions. An all-AFL selection.

Running Back

Packers — No. 22, Elijah Pitts — A 6-1, 205-pound, 6-year veteran from Philander Smith. Replaced Paul Horning — and played like him. Gained 393 yards on ground for a 3.4 average and 7 TDs; caught 26 passes for 460 yards.

Chiefs — No. 21, Mike Garret — A rookie from Southern Califor- 190-pound rookie from Southern California. Size has been no handicap because of his tremendous balance. Gained 801 yards rushing for 5.4 average and 6 TDs; caught 12 passes for 175 yards.

Fullback

Packers — No. 31, Jim Taylor — A 6-0, 215-pound, 9-year veteran from LSU. Good short yardage runner who used consistently as a receiver this year. Gained 705 yards rushing for 3.5 average and 4 TDs; caught 41 passes for 331 yards.

Chiefs — No. 32, Curt McClinton — A 6-3, 227-pound 5-year veteran from Kansas. A capable runner also used as key blocking back. Gained 540 yards rushing for 3.8 average and 4 TDs.

Packers —No. 86, Boyd Dowler — A 6-5, 225-pound, 8-year veteran from Colorado. Not overly fast, but has sure hands and is tough on sideline patterns. Caught 29 passes for 392 yards but didn't score.

Chiefs — No. 89, Otis Taylor — A 6-2, 211-pound, 2-year veteran from Prairie View. Has been described as a Lance Alworth with better size. Caught 58 passes for 1,297 yards and 8 TDs and was an all-AFL selection.

DEFENSE

Left End

Packers —No. 87, Willie Davis — A 6-3, 245-pound, 9-year veteran from Grambling. Probably the quickest end in the league, smart, reacts well and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 75, Jerry Mays — A 6-4, 252-pound, 6-year veteran from Southern Methodist. A quick, exceptional pass rusher and an all-AFL selection.

Left Tackle

Packers — No. 77, Ron Kostelnik — A 6-4, 260-pound, 6-year veteran from Cincinnati. A strongboy who bowls people over.

Chiefs — No. 58, Andy Rice — A 6-3, 266-pound rookie from Texas Southern. Good, but still learning the trade.

Right Tackle

Packers — No. 74, Henry Jordan — A 6-3, 250-pound, 10-year veteran from Virginia. Strength is his biggest asset. Forms a solid duo with Kostelnik.

Chiefs — No. 86, Buck Buchanan — A 6-7, 287-pound, 4-year veteran from Grambling. Strong pass rusher with good mobility for his size and an all-AFL selection.

Right End

Packers — No. 82, Lionel Aldridge — A 6-4, 245-pound, 4-year veteran from Utah State. Not as quick as Davis, but strong.

Chiefs — No. 85, Chuck Hurston — A 6-6, 230-pound, 2-year veteran from Auburn. Fast, uses speed well. Still learning.

Left Linebacker

Packers — No. 89, Dave Robinson — A 6-3, 245-pound, 4-year veteran from Penn State. Very quick and strong and has long arms that make him an outstanding pass protector.

Chiefs — No. 78, Bobby Bell — A 6-4, 228-pound, 4-year veteran from Minnesota. Outstanding speed, good strength, can stop both pass and rush and was an all-AFL selection.

Middle Linebacker

Packers — No. 66, Ray Nitschke — A 6-3, 240-pound, 9-year veteran from Illinois. Strong, hard tackler who is also quick enough to go back on pass and was an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 69, Sherrill Headrick — A 6-2, 240-pound 8-year veteran from Texas Christian. Tough is the word. Could be

Right Linebacker

Packers — No. 66, Lee Roy Caffey — A 6-3, 250-pound, 4-year veteran from Texas A&M. Rangy, good tackler and pass protector and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 55, E. J. Holub — A 6-4, 236-pound, 6-year veteran from Texas Tech. Not exceptionally fast or strong, but has great desire.

Left Cornerback

Packers — No. 26, Herb Adderley — A 6-0, 210-pound, 6-year veteran from Michigan State. Quick, the gambler on defense and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 24, Fred Williamson — A 6-3, 209-pound, 7-year veteran from Northwestern. Cantankerous, quck and a big gambler.

Left Safety

Packers — No. 40, Tom Brown — A 6-1, 190-pound 3-year veteran from Maryland. Good reactions but only in his second full year and still developing.

Chiefs — No. 20, Bobby Hunt — A 6-1, 193-pound, 5-year veteran from Auburn. Good reactions and mobility and an all-AFL selection.

Right Safety

Packers — No. 24, Willie Wood — A 5-10, 190-pound, 7-year veteran from Southern California. The free safety, roams very well, covers a lot of ground. A defensive leader and an all-NFL selection.

Chiefs — No. 42, Johnny Robinson — a 6-1, 205-pound, 7-year veteran from Louisiana State. Strong, clever at diagnosing plays and an all-AFL selection.

Right Cornerback

Packers — No. 21, Bob Jeter — a 6-1, 205-pound, 4-year veteran from Iowa. Quick, a gambler who will step inside quite a bit in interception bids.

Chiefs — No. 22, Willie Mitchell — a 6-1, 185-pound, 3-year veteran from Tennessee A&I. Has speed and quickness, but still is learning.

Kickers

Packers — No. 34, Don Chandler handles punts, kickoffs and place-kicking for Green Bay. Had off year with only 12 of 28 field goals made.

Chiefs — No. 44, Jerrell Wilson, handles punts; No. 17, Fletcher Smith handles kickoffs and No. 15, Mike Mercer handles field goals. Mercer made 20 of 26 attempts.

Litchfield Eyes Eighth Straight

Litchfield's of San Rafael, sitting pretty with a 7-0 record and a two-game lead, takes on its nearest competitor while shooting for its eighth straight win in the San Francisco Triple A Winter Baseball League tomorrow.

Litchfield's meets Ellis Brooks Chevrolet at 11:30 a.m. at Golden Gate Park's Graham Diamond. Litchfield's won their first meeting, 7-4.

The high-riding league leaders will bring a solid .356 batting average into the fray with Ron Gasper at .607 leading the way.

Mrs. Kett Almost Scores Real One

The gals were playing their hole-in-one contest on the 15th green Thursday at the Marin Country Club links in Novato and Mrs. L. T. Kett won, almost with a real one.

As the women gasped, Mrs. Kett's ball rolled within two inches of the cup—one and three-quarters inches to be exact. In low gross competition, Mrs. Thomas Kegwin won a playoff with Mrs. Charles Godak after each shot an 88.

Winners were:

Class A — Mesdames Charles Godak, 88-14—74; John McVey, 91-15—76; Gordon Davenport, 92-15—77.

Class B — Mmes. John Grey, 93-17—76; Don Roberts, 93-17—76; George Tripps, 97-18—79.

Class C—Mmes. C. R. Johnson 96-21—75; V. C. Redman, 97-20—

Warriors And Barry Throttled

DETROIT (AP)—Rick Barry looks tired but the National Basketball Assn.'s leading scorer must keep playing this weekend for the fatigued San Francisco Warriors.

Barry got only 15 points last night at San Jose as the Warriors lost 119-117 to the New York Knicks. Barry, who had pushed through 41 points the previous night, got only one field goal in the first quarter and one field goal in the second half.

For Barry and center Nate Thurmond, it was the fourth game in as many nights because they played last Tuesday in the NBA All-Star Game in San Francisco.

And the two workhorses who ran one-two in the voting for the all-star most valuable player will make it six contests in six nights with games tonight at Detroit and tomorrow in St. Louis.

The Knicks and Warriors traded the lead frequently before New York went ahead for good at 113-112 with 2:24 to go. The Warriors got to within 117-115 in the last minute before Howard Komives iced it for New York with a 20-foot jumper.

Dick Barnett scored 30 points for the Knicks and topped scorers and Jeff Mullins paced the Warriors with 28.

Dick Van Arsdale guarded Barry and held him to his lowest point total of the season.

TRACK AND FIELD

Prep In Spotlight At Oakland Sunday

OAKLAND (AP) — Another high school star threatens the best in the world's track and field class, this time in the long jump.

Gerry Lindgren and Jim Ryun already have enhanced the teenaged ranks and now watch Jerry Proctor, a senior at Pasadena, Muir High School.

In practice, Proctor has been measured past the 27-foot mark and Ralph Boston, former Olympic champion and world record holder, knows it.

Boston will concentrate on the long jump and has withdrawn from the hurdles for tomorrow night's invitational indoor meet, inaugurating track at the new Oakland Coliseum.

Boston won the All-American title a week ago at San Francisco with a leap of 25-2½ and still holds the American record at 26-6¼ compared with the 27-0 world mark claimed by Russia's Igor Ter-Ovanesyan.

The Athens meet, second of the season on the West coast, includes John Rambo, the Long Beach high jumper who equalled the American record a week ago at 7 feet 3 inches. Neal Steinhauer of Oregon, new claimant to the indoor shot put record at 66-6¾, won't compete in this Sunday meet.

Seven high jumpers who have cleared seven feet and six pole vaulters who have topped 16 feet are on the entry list as the Oakland meet commands depth in each event.

The new Fastrac process has been used on the wooden track which could aid times and distances.

World indoor record holder Art Walker of Los Angeles established his triple jump mark on this synthetic track last year in Albuquerque.

He aims to better his 54-9½, a limit imposed partially because at the AAU meet in New Mexico, a longer leap could have put him on the running track.

Preliminaries in the pole vault open the program at 6:30 with running events starting a half hour later. The long jump starts at 6:40 with Boston, the 1960 Olympic champion facing the challenge of the prep Proctor.

Sprinter Charley Greene heads the field for the 60 with a challenge from Darel Newman, the former Fresno State star. The mile run could also produce a talent now coming into its own.

Joe Lynch, former Georgetown University runner, has been working out at Santa Monica in Southern California under the coaching of Hungarian Mikhail Igloi who thinks he can do a 3:56.

So far, the best for Lynch has been 4:06 but Igloi's judgment is based on the training of such a star as Jim Beatty, formerly the premier American miler.

Famed Globetrotters At Richmond Arena Monday

For the first time in their 41-year history, the Harlem Globetrotters have a new coach.

Inman Jackson, who is no newcomer to the Trotter ranks, will mastermind the famous magicians' comical capers and legitimate play when they play the New York Nationals at Richmond Auditorium next Monday and at the Cow Palace in San Francisco Jan. 20.He took over the head coaching reins when founder and owner-coach Abe Saperstein died of a heart attack last year.

Saperstein often credited "Big Jack" as the person responsible for the clever ball handling, which gained the Trotters fame in all of the 104 countries where they have performed. He joined the remarkable show team as a player when it was first organized by Saperstein in 1927.

When his playing days were over in the 40s, he stayed with the Trotters as an assistant coach to impart his trick ball handling knowledge to youngsters such as the hilarious Meadowlark Lemon, the current Clown Prince of the Court. One of his prize proteges is Fred Neal, current sensational dribbler with the Trotters who always stops the show with his ball-bouncing routine.

Brookline Quint Wins San Rafael Recreation Game

Brookline Electric picked up where it left off in the first half of the season and the Christmas tournament by rapping Mill Valley Boys Club, 76-66, in an A Division game of the San Rafael Recreation Department Adult Basketball League Thursday night.

Ron O'Connell led a trio of double figure scorers for the winners with 20 points. Ken Anderson had 14 and Steve Bryant had 12.

Brad Busch topped Mill Valley with 23 points, followed by Steve Anderson with 21 and Jim Tupper with 12.

In another A Division game, Paradise Pharmacy downed San Rafael Teachers, 64-53, despite a 31-point out put by San Rafael High basketball coach Mike Diaz. The winners were topped by Jeff Chapman's 24 points and Jim Wiley's 16.

In a pair of B Division games, McGraw Hill routed Native Sons, 62-38, and Stop N Go Market nicked Marin's Marines, 63-54. Terry Thomas had 17 for McGraw Hill. Don Hanson with 18, Joe Hebel with 13 and Bob Brackett with 12 led Stop N Go while Jim Blomguisi was high for the Marines with 15 points.

A Tie In San Diego Golf Open

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Bob Goalby and Randy Glover, shooting 10-under-par golf for 36 holes, topped a trimmed down field of 79 players going into the third and next-to-last round of the $66,000 San Diego Open today.

The 35-year-old Goalby, a native of Belleville, Ill., who now plays out Palm Springs, finished with a late rush in yesterday's second round to shoot a seven-under-par 64 on the Stardust Country Club. Par is 35-36—71.

With his opening round 68, this gave him a 36-hole total of 132 and put him into a tie with Glover who had rounds of 68-64.

Three strokes back at the halfway mark were 48-year-old Tommy Bolt, Sarasota, Fla., and newcomer Chris Blocker, Jal, N.M. Bolt had rounds of 67-68 and Blocker 68-67 for 135.

Still in contention for top prize of $13,200 with 136 totals were Art Wall, Honesdale, Pa., 71-65; Bobby Nichols, the 1964 national PGA champion from Louisville, Ky., 66-70; and Ronnie Reif, San Bernardino club pro 68-68.

Dick Lotz, Hayward and Dave Hill, Evergreen, Colo., marked the halfway point with scores of 137. Lotz had 72-65 and Hill 69-68.

Among casualties who failed to make the cut because they had scores of more than 148 were such prominent golf names as: George Knudson, Toronto, Canada, 73-72—145; E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, St. Louis, Mo., 70-75—145; Mike Souchak, Birmingham, Mich., 77-69—146; Johnny Pott, Golf Hills, Miss., 73-73—146; George Bayer, Incline Village, Nev., 73-73—146, and Phil Rogers, La Jolla, 70-74—144.

Defending champion Billy Casper, golf's biggest official money-winner in 1966 with $121,644, made the cut with a score of 71-70—141, nine strokes back of the leaders.

Seals Romp To Fifth Straight Win

SAN DIEGO (AP)—The California Seals look forward this weekend to cementing their hold on second place in the Western Hockey League. They'll play two games, the first tonight against the last-place San Diego Gulls.

The Seals swamped the Gulls 7-0 last night in Oakland for their fifth straight victory and moved into a second-place tie with Vancouver. They're still 15 points behind first-place Portland, however.

Back-up goalie Jean Guy Morissette scored his first shutout of the season by kicking out 33 Gull attempts.

Danny Belisle and George Swarbrick each had a two-goal night. Also scoring for the Seals were Bob Kabel, Doug Senior and Wayne Maxner.

It was the fourth time the Seals had beaten the Gulls in as many games.

Sizzling Tars Fell Redwoods

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

EUREKA — College of Marin raced off to a 15-0 lead against big, lumbering College of the Redwoods last night, then waltzed to an 81-58 Golden Valley Conference victory behind a devastating full-court press and another salvo of red-hot shooting by its trio of guards.

The Tars threw up a thieving full-court press that left Redwood without a point for the first five minutes of play. By the time the big boys from Eureka got on the board, it was already over.

The Tars led by 18 at halftime, 42-24.

Russ Smith paced the Tar victory with his second straight sizzling shooting performance. The former Redwood High School ace ripped in 10 of 17 shots and added two free throws for 22 points. He got big help from dependable Bill Pandiani with 17 points, Terry Overlid with 12 and Tom Stetson with 10. Everybody but Tar coach Cal Riemcke played for the Mariners.

The Tars held a 32-29 rebound edge over the taller opposition with 5-9 Pandiani getting nine and 5-8 Bob Phillips eight.

Six-four Mike Lovelace of Redwoods topped all scorers with 27 points, nearly half the home team total, but he was the only Redwoods player in double figures.

The victory brought the Tars to the .500 level for the season at 9-9 and gave them a 3-1 Golden Valley Conference mark. They meet Redwoods again tonight at 8:00 here.

The Movie Houses Borrow From TV

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Much has been written about how the movie companies supply movies to television. Less publicized is the fact that television is also providing features for theaters.

This is nothing new.

The film companies tried to cash in on the immense success of stars and programs in the new medium. Only one was a success. "Dragnet" was expanded to feature length and it grossed five million dollars, a whopping figure in 1954.

OTHER EFFORTS failed.

Warner Bros. starred Milton Berle, then Mr. Television, in "Always Leave Them Laughing," but he didn't. Features were made of "Our Miss Brooks," "The Lone Ranger," "The Goldbergs," etc., all with scant success.

Lucille Ball and Dezi Arnaz scored in "The Long, Long Trailer" at the peak of their television fame, though they did not play their "I Love Lucy" roles. Another film with the pair, "Forever Darling," was a failure.

NOW THE studios are taking another flier at mining film subjects from television.

The most successful venture has been MGM's conversion of segments of "The Man From UNCLE" into big-screen attractions. The popularity of stars Robert Vaughn and David McCallum has helped push the features to greater income than some of the studio's regular movies.

20th Century-Fox followed suit with a release of the first three segments of the defunct television series, "Blue Light," which starred Robert Goulet. They were released under the title, "I Deal in Danger."

Fox also attempted a feature-length version of the freak hit, "Batman," but it failed to create bat-millions at the box-office.

NOR DID Universal score impressively with its feature, "Munsters Go Home," filmed after the series had been canceled.

Columbia aimed its cartoon feature, "The Man Called Flintstone," at the kiddie market with middling results.

With rare exceptions, these movies seldom score a bonanza at the nation's theaters. But they help fill the bottom half of double features. Theater men find feature products so scarce nowadays, they'll consider anything—even if it has played on television.

An American Artist In Europe

Bruce Lauritzen's Short Stay Stretched Into Six Years

By DON KEOWN

Artist Bruce Lauritzen went to Europe, intending to stay only six months.

It was to be six years, however, before Lauritzen was to return to America and Marin County four months ago.

His European stay, Lauritzen, now a Larkspur resident, says, was invaluable. "I would advise every young American artist to make such a trip," he says. "He shouldn't go there to make a lucrative living, but rather to learn. We all learn by exposing ourselves to different environments.

"THEN, TOO, in Europe, he will encounter the very finest in art schools and instructors, as well as the opportunity to mingle in art circles."

Lauritzen, born in San Francisco in 1934, demonstrated an early talent for art. At 10 he was admitted to adult drawing and painting classes at the College of Marin. He earned a scholarship to the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, where he received his Bachelor of Arts Degree in 1954.

He then went to work as an art director and designer for television in San Francisco.

HE STUDIED life drawing and painting at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco. In 1958, he became an instructor of design at the Academy of Arts in San Francisco.

In the meantime he was doing extensive work in portraiture, stage design, photography, experimental painting and writing.

He went to Europe at the start of 1961 for what he thought would be a relatively short tour for sketching, painting and photography.

HIS FIRST year was spent in London where he was employed as creative director for an advertising agency.

"London was becoming a very active art center then, and is even more so now," he says. "It is one of the world's great art centers. New York is THE world art center, Los Angeles the art buying center and Paris the leader for international work. But London is a close second to Paris for cultural activities. It caters to a young group."

From London, Lauritzen went to Milan, Italy, to manage the art department of an advertising agency there.

MILAN WAS to remain his headquarters for nearly five years, although he traveled extensively in Western Europe and North Africa, always sketching and painting.

Eventually, he resigned his position with the advertising agency to work full time as an editorial illustrator, fashion designer and painter on a free lance basis.

His first one-man show was held in Milan at the Pater Gallery in February of 1965. His second took place in Rome at the Qantas Australian Center in December of the same year.

MILAN BOASTS the advantage of proximity to both Rome and Florence, Lauritzen points out.

But the city itself is an important art center, "more serious, in some respects, than either Rome or Florence."

What is there about Europe that lures the young American artists?

"It is an intangible thing," Lauritzen replies. "There just seems to be more color in Europe. And everyone is so art conscious.

"THERE ARE more aesthetics in your surroundings. You become aware that there is art existing all around you. It opens your eyes. You tend to study things and people more, and to try to understand them. And the architecture . . ."

The elevator man, the ditch digger, the taxi-cab driver can all carry on intelligent, even learned, conversations about art, Lauritzen notes.

"In art knowledge, we are far behind them," he says.

LAURITZEN SAYS that he made a special effort to "travel" in Italian art circles. "I learned to speak Italian pretty fluently, and developed Italian friends. And I believe I learned to understand their mentality. For people are not the same everywhere."

In Italy, Lauritzen also acquired a wife. He was married in St. Moritz, Switzerland, to Anita June Sutherlin, an American girl he had known in this country and who was also traveling in Europe.

His wife, the artist says, "has been a great help and inspiration to me."

BUT SUPPORTING himself as he was with his art work and various jobs, Lauritzen did not find life in Europe always easy.

"While I was in Milan, the area was experiencing an economic recession," he relates. "Buying power for art had gone way down.

"I would say that, generally, there is a more limited market in Europe than in the United States for art. Americans just have more money. There is a strong middle class moving up between the very rich and the very poor that should ultimately provide a good buying class for art works. But now the many museums and galleries serve the masses as an outlet."

THE FINANCIAL difficulties of American artists in Europe were increased by the United States government decision to curtail spending abroad to halt the outward flow of dollars.

"They started with the arts," he says, "so that there was very little money available in grants and support for American artists painting or studying abroad."

It is therefore, a source of special satisfaction for Lauritzen that he managed to support himself and his wife in Milan, despite adverse conditions.

WHY, THEN, did he decide to return to the United States?

"In the first place, my family is here," he answers. His mother, Mrs. Nan Lauritzen, is a San Rafael resident.

"Then, too," he continues, "I felt a need to mingle with my own 'mentality', my own people, again.

"There was also the desire for a place where I felt I would have a better opportunity of working and deriving an income from my art. Here, I find I can live off my painting endeavors.

"FINALLY, THERE is this marvelous climate. You miss it, after you have been gone so long."

Pomeroy Galleries of San Francisco is showing his work.

Lauritzen says, however, that he hopes to return to Europe from time to time.

As for any long stays abroad in the future, that remains to be seen.

"FIRST I WANT to feel out the situation here," he says.

Of his work, he says: "My source of subject matter can be anything, anywhere, or simply a glimmer of a thought pattern reflecting a moment in time.

"Invariably, however, the interpretation or construction of forms comes from within to reflect my impression of the 'character or atmosphere' of the subject, rather than the involvement of its physical content.

"IN CERTAIN instances, the subject is virtually eliminated, giving way to a simpler and purer poetic statement—less confused by subjective content."

He adds that three elements go into his paintings—mind, matter and spirit—and says that "color, although essential, is secondary to the structure of my paintings."

And he concludes: "I don't pretend to think that I am revolutionizing the art world. I only wish to continue exploring myself and my surroundings, and to improve along the way."

VISITORS TO THE Pater Gallery in Milan, Italy, view with interest the work of Bruce Lauritzen as exhibited at the American artist's first one-man show. Europeans, says Lauritzen, are highly knowledgeable on the subject of contemporary art. And Milan, where Laurritzen lived for five years, is a serious art center.

NURSING STUDENT and March of Dimes scholarship holder Nancy Cox has already had considerable practical experience working in hospitals and with the handicapped. At left, as an observer and assistant in therapy at the Ross General Hospital's psychiatric department for three months, she visited with a patient. In background are Dr. William Dickersen, head of psychiatric services, and Carolyn Kinney, charge nurse. At right, as a nurses' aide at Marin General Hospital, she assists an ambulatory patient. Nancy Cox Prepares For Nursing Career

March Of Dimes Scholarships Help An Honor Student From Marin

Marinites generally are well aware of the good uses to which the more than $30,000 that will be raised in their county this month by the March of Dimes campaign will be put. They know that most of the money raised to fight birth defects will be spent for research and in direct help to babies and children handicapped by birth defects.

THEY ARE familiar with such examples as the recent grant from the Marin Chapter of the National Foundation to the Marindale School for the purchase of electric typewriters and attachments that will enable physically-handicapped youngsters to master typing skills.

They or members of their families may have been among the newlyweds and young parents who have received some of the thousands of educational folders and booklets made possible by the March of Dimes.

But there is yet another kind of expenditure that has been less publicized: The awarding of March of Dimes grant scholarships in medicine to both graduate and undergraduate students and to qualified nursing students.

A CASE IN point is Nancy Kathleen Cox, daughter of Mrs. Betty Cox of 965 Magnolia Avenue, Larkspur, and a former honor student at Dominican Upper School.

Nancy received two Health Careers Award scholarships from March of Dimes to enable her to pursue her goal of a career in nursing.

Now a junior at San Francisco State, Nancy decided midway through high school to make a career of nursing.

Her objective has not yet been achieved. But already she has had a wealth of experience in hospitals and work with the sick.

IT BEGAN with two years of volunteer work as a "candy striper" at St. Francis Hospital in San Francisco.

In her junior year at Dominican (now San Domenico), Nancy devoted one day a week to helping handicapped children at Marindale School. Despite her devotion to that work, she still graduated from Dominican with honors.

During her freshman and sophomore years at San Francisco State, Nancy worked part-time at the campus audio visual center making teaching aids and nursing charts. It was paid work closely associated with her artwork hobby.

LAST FALL, along with half a dozen other college students, Nancy served for three months at Ross General Hospital, which acts as an extended campus for both San Francisco State College and the University of California.

There, for three days of each week, Nancy and her fellow students observed procedures in Ross General's model psychiatric department and participated in certain phases of the therapy.

Last summer, and even during her Christmas vacation last month, found Nancy back in hospital work, serving full-time at Marin General Hospital as a nurses' aide.

AS PART OF her present study course at San Francisco State, she is doing medical-surgical laboratory work at Presbyterian Medical Center, San Francisco, and maintaining a 3.5 or better grade average.

Behind it all, says Nancy, is the fact that "I have always liked people, and I have always been fascinated by medicine."

Nancy Cox's interest in the particular field of birth defects was heightened last year when Dr. Virginia Apgar, world-famed pediatrician and medical research director for the National Foundation March of Dimes, visited San Rafael to speak at the annual March of Dimes dinner.

THE YOUNG coed and aspiring nurse had an opportunity to meet and talk with Dr. Apgar, and calls it "an inspiring experience."

March of Dimes officials in Marin cite Nancy Cox as typical of the young people being encouraged and trained to participate directly in the fight against birth defects, a crippling disease that annually affects 250,000 newborn babies each year.

Several hundred volunteer workers in Marin are currently soliciting the financial support of Marinites for March of Dimes.

One result of a successful outcome of their efforts will be the recruitment of more dedicated young people like Nancy Cox to the cause of ridding America of one of its most terrible health menaces.

NANCY COX walks on the San Francisco State College campus with fellow students Larry Kruezyonski of South San Francisco and Jacquie Harvey, right, of Piedmont, enroute to a class. Nancy, an honor student at Dominican Upper School, is now in her junior year at San Francisco State College, and with the help of two March of Dimes scholarships, is well on her way to a career in nursing.

Novato's Community House Still Serves As Gathering Place

Renovation Readies Building For Its Part In A Civic Celebration

By THERON NEWELL

The three-day observance of the seventh anniversary of Novato's incorporation next Friday, Saturday and Sunday was the direct result of the renovation of the Community House.

Spurred by Mrs. Bea Carpenter, volunteer labor completely changed the interior of the old building to a mid-Victorian period decor.

The momentum of all of this work carried on until the group wanted to do something to show off the Community House and seized on the seventh birthday of the City of Novato as cause for a celebration.

THIS OLD structure is unique among community buildings in Marin County. For years it was the central gathering place of the residents of the area.

The Community House is the outgrowth of a program of the Presbyterian Church and the citizens of Novato.

Dr. Warren Wilson, head of the Board of National Missions, pushed a program to constuct community buildings to be used for church functions and also as a general meeting place in small communities.

THE PRESBYTERIAN Church was the only Protestant church in Novato at the time and it was up to its pastor to carry out this program. That man was Rev. Charles Christensen. At that time, the church was located directly east of the site proposed for the Community House. He worked on the idea, soliciting funds and talking up the project.

Alton Lerch, Novato historian and past president of the Marin County Historical Society, has recorded the events of that time from the files of the San Rafael Independent, Marin Journal and Novato Advance.

By July 15, 1922, $12,056 had been pledged and the Board of National Missions of the Presbyterian Church contributed another $9,000 toward the building.

ON SEPT. 16 of that year, the Benicia Presbytery pledged an additional $750 toward the building.

Walter H. Parker was the architect chosen for the job. However, the original bid on the construction of the building was $30,000. This necessitated a revision of the plans so that the cost could be reduced to $19,000.

The contract was awarded to Charles F. Schuetz of San Francisco on Nov. 18, 1922. Then on Dec. 7, seven lots were obtained by the church, providing an area 140 by 175 feet for the building.

BY JAN. 6, 1923, the foundation was laid and the framing began. On the same date a $375 gift was received from a Mr. Brooks in Washington in memory of his mother who died in California.

By April the building was taking shape and the Red Cross proposed monthly baby clinics in the building. On May 5, the contract for painting it was awarded to A. Quandt and Sons of San Francisco.

With the building nearing completion, an organization was formed to run the Community House with Reverend Christensen as its first president. Other officers were William E. Cole, vice president; C. E. Carlile, secretary, and Mrs. J. A. Stutt, treasurer.

THE DIRECTORS were Robert Trumbull, later county supervisor and Golden Gate bridge director; his sister, Mrs. R. S. Brown; Miss Lulu Sutton, a teacher in Novato for 40 years; George D. Morrison, local banker and director of the North Marin County Water District; John P. Geary, and Mrs. George Owens.

The building was dedicated on April 11, 1923, but the official opening was not held until Aug. 28. In the meantime, A. J. Cain, owner of the Novato Utilities Co., started showing movies there on July 7.

Among the first films shown were "The Man from Hell's River," starring the original Rin Tin Tin; "Daddy" with Jackie Coogan; "The Young Diana" with Marion Davies.

ON AUG. 18, 1923, the notice of completion was recorded for the Community House. A crowd estimated at 700 attended the grand opening program on Aug. 28.

The building served as a center for community life with the first little theater group formed in 1923 with 80 members. The first benefit for the Community House was held May 31, 1924.

Other groups including the garden and book clubs and others were added to the original little theater company.

IN 1924 THE men of the community decided that the building needed better access, so 14 of them constructed De Long Avenue from Machin Avenue to

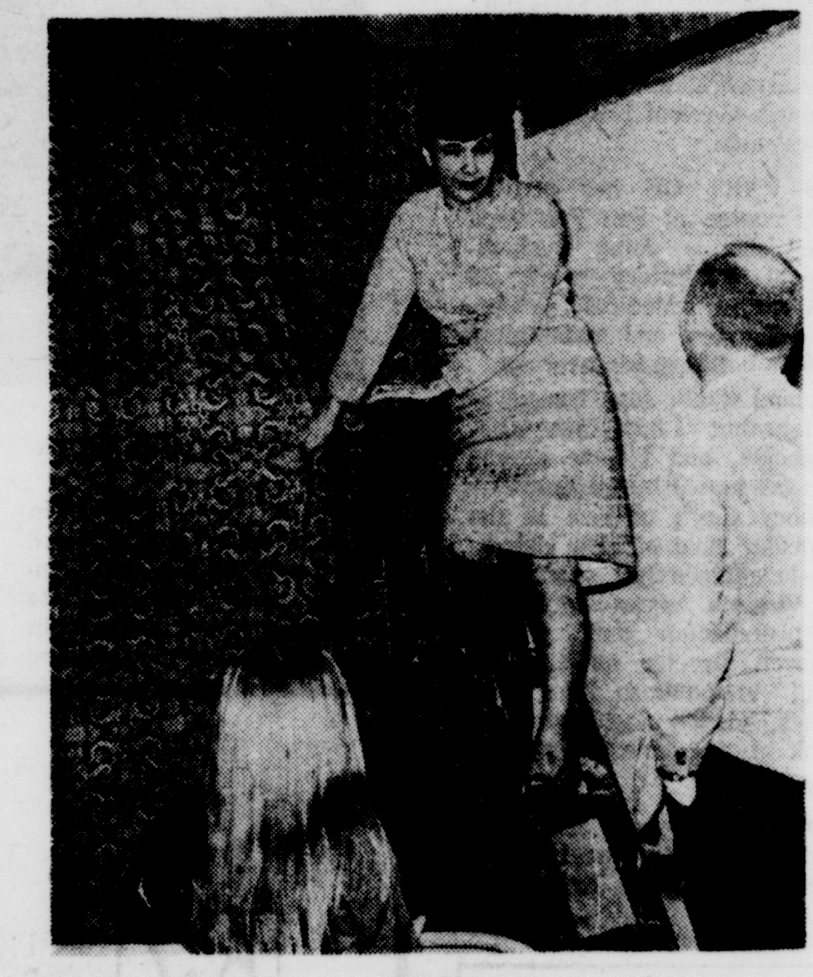
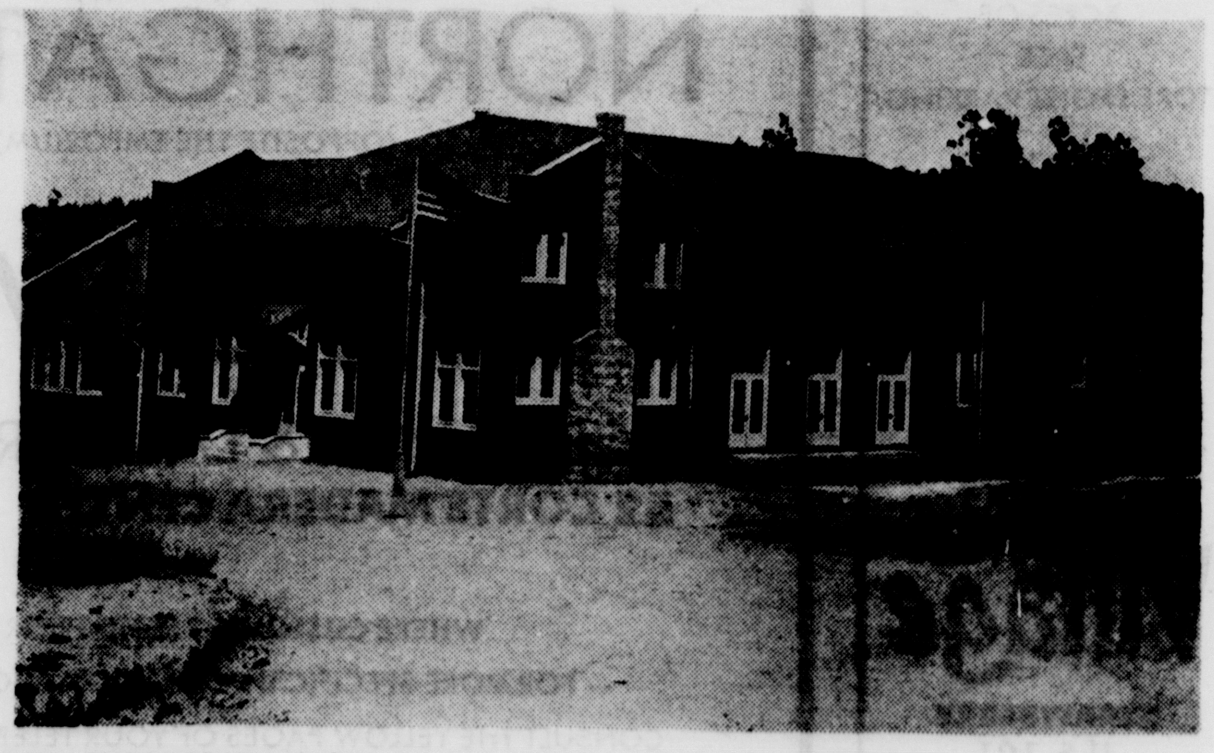
THE COMMUNITY HOUSE has served Novato well as a gathering place and as a scene for civic, cultural and social activities, since it was completed in 1923. Next Friday, Saturday and Sunday, newly renovated, it will be the focal point of a celebration in observance of the seventh anniversary of Novato's incorporation. (Independent-Journal photo)



IT WAS A labor of love for Bea Carpenter as she directed and worked on renovation of the Novato Community House. At the last minute she was still making and hanging the drapes in the council chambers.



THIS PHOTOGRAPH belonging to Alton Lerch shows how the Novato Community House looked in its early days, complete with parked Model T Ford. There were no sidewalks in front of the building in those days, and De Long Avenue had been newly constructed from Machin to Highway 101.

WITH THE NOVATO Community House officially completed the first part of August, 1923, the dedication was held on Aug. 28 with more than 700 attending. Note the balcony with its projection booth in the rear. This was later torn out and an apartment for a caretaker constructed there.

Story Of The Community House

the state highway, now U. S. Highway 101.

Novato Community Inc. was formed in 1947 to take over the control of the building, with a provision that if the city were to incorporate the building would be turned over to the city.

That same year, the balcony was torn out and an apartment for a caretaker was constructed upstairs.

AFTER THE city was incorporated in 1960, Alfred Bowman initiated a taxpayer's suit to have the building turned over to the new city government. The city council joined Bowman and, in a court trial, Superior Court Judge Richard M. Sims Jr. awarded the building to the city which has controlled it since.

The Garden Club, Book Club and Bridge Club sections of the Community Club withdrew, leaving the Fling Section to assume the duties of the community club, which it has done.

With the City of Novato in charge of the Community House, it held its city council meetings there. Soon it acquired the Presbyterian Church properties which were adjacent and turned them into the present city hall complex.

WITH THE addition of the George Morrison house to the police station, the Community House stood out apart, unpainted and badly in need of repair.

Then the city council voted $10,000 for the renovation.

Edward W. Adams, parks and recreation director, supervised the roof repairs and repairs to the structure of the building. The volunteers followed the plans of Mrs. Carpenter and renovated the interior.

NOW THE community house, in the words of many old timers, looks better than it ever has before.

Visitors will be able to judge for themselves at next weekend's big celebration.

THROUGHOUT THE years, the Novato Community House has been the center of community activity in Novato. The first group to form after its completion was the little theater group. Down through the years it furnished entertainment to the community as shown in this 1930 picture of the group performance of a mock wedding. (Photos courtesy of Alton Lerch)

The Forts Along Marin's Shoreline

Their History Has Been A Colorful One

By GEORGE VANDEGRIFT

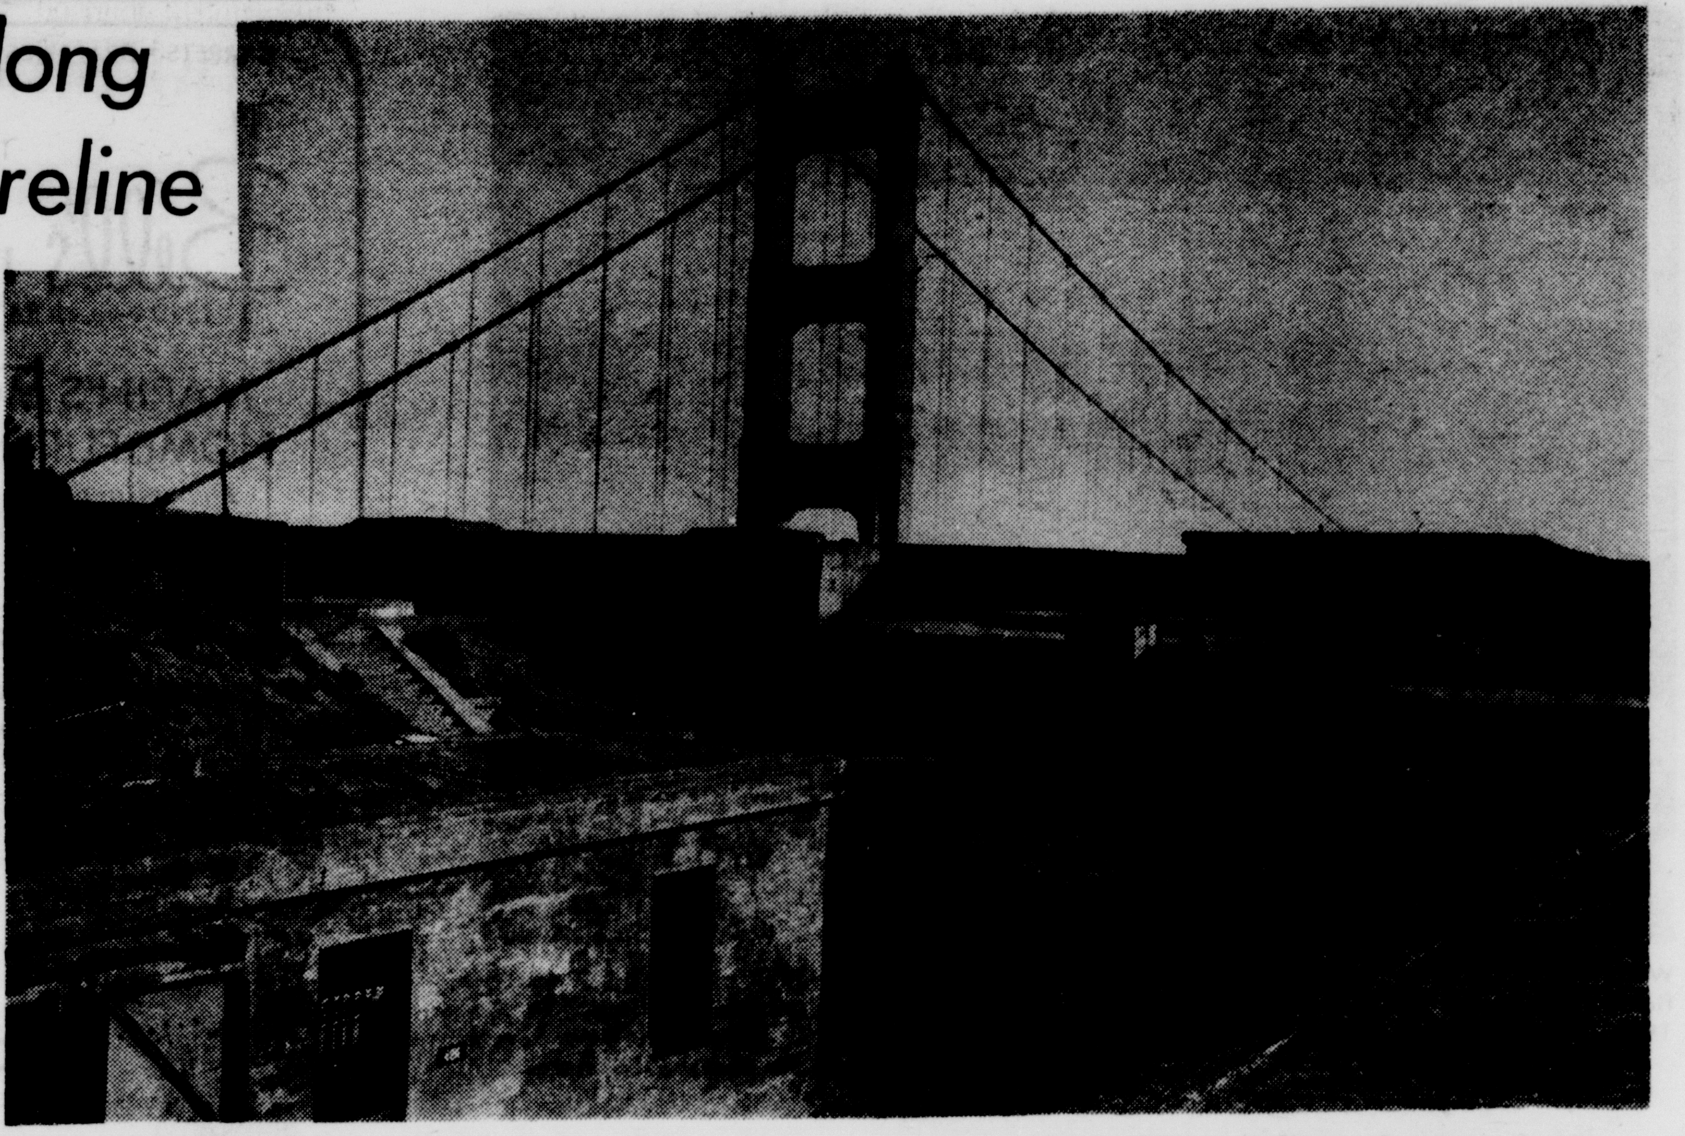
In 1850, by executive order of President Millard Fillmore, a 1,300-acre strip of land stretching from Cavallo Point to Tennessee Cove on the Marin County side of the Golden Gate was established as Lime Point Military Reservation.

Three Army posts occupy this tract today—Forts Baker, Barry and Cronkhite.

Here, trim, modern structures stand side by side with crumbling remnants of the past to tell the story of a century of change in defensive armament from smooth-bore cannon to supersonic guided missiles.

FROM POST Civil War days until after World War II more than 20 batteries have been quartered on Marin's Lime Point reservation.

Armed with cannon ranging in calibre from a puny three inches to a massive 16, they have constituted an iron link in a defensive chain reaching from Point Reyes to south of Half Moon Bay. Their mission: To protect the Golden Gate from attack by sea.



HISTORIC BATTERY SPENCER on Marin's shoreline is shown as it looks today, with the Golden Gate Bridge looming to the south. The original battery was completed in 1897, but additional breastworks were added after the turn of the century. (U.S. Army photos)

At the turn of the century when seacoast ordnance was still far from its peak potential, a writer in the Monthly Overland said San Francisco's Golden Gate was "the most scientifically and completely protected harbor on the Atlantic or Pacific seaboard."

AS AN EXAMPLE of the defenses of that day, a battery of 12-inch barbette mounted cannon was emplaced on Lime Point Ridge near where the northern tower of the Golden Gate Bridge stands today. These guns replaced larger but more primitive 15-inch Rodman cannon and 13-inch mortars.

At 496 feet above sea level they were said to be the highest located artillery pieces in the world except for a battery at Gibraltar.

In modern times air space, not sea approaches, is of primary concern, and so today Fort Baker, the oldest of Marin's three former coast artillery forts, is the headquarters of a command whose mission is the protection of the entire West Coast Guard attack from the air.

THE NAME OF this command is 6th Region, United States Army Air Defense Command. It is part of the nationwide Army Air Defense Command (ARADCOM), headquartered at Colorado Springs, Colo.

ARADCOM deploys Nike Hercules guided missiles at sites throughout the country as the Army component of the unified United States-Canadian North American Air Defense Command. Three such Nike sites are located in Marin County, at Fort Barry, Fort Cronkhite and San Rafael.

Just as today's supersonic missiles and sophisticated radars at Forts Baker and Cronkhite point up the striking change in weaponry during the past 100 years, so does the very physical location of 6th Region's headquarters illustrate the fascinating mingling of the old and the new in this quiet corner of Marin.

THE HEADQUARTERS is housed in a building centered in the U of a typical parade ground of bygone days, laid out in 1868 but little used by today's missilemen.

This nerve center of modern air defense is also but a stone's cast away from the remains of Batteries Duncan and Cavallo that date back to 1874. These batteries, just south of Sausalito, were armed with clumsy eight-inch muzzle-loaders and helped guard the inner harbor as adjuncts to Fort Point on the San Francisco side of the Golden Gate.

Although Lime Point Military Reservation was established in 1850, little was built there for almost two decades because of the failure of the federal government to acquire the land.

ON THE EVE of the Civil War, the only installation on the Marin tract was a light station erected in 1855 on the western cliffs where the Golden Gate meets the Pacific. Located about a quarter mile north of the present Bonita Lighthouse, it fired a warning cannon every half-hour

THESE ARE REMAINS of Fort Baker's Battery Duncan where one of two eight-inch cannon once guarded the inner Golden Gate. Nearby now is the building housing headquarters 6th Region, U. S. Army Air Defense Command.

Present And Past Stand Side By Side At Army Posts

during foggy weather.

Soon after it was built, a retired Army artillery sergeant, apparently looking for a soft berth, eagerly undertook the task of tending the station. He soon quit, however. Fog, he complained, kept him sleepless for days on end, firing his cannon every 30 minutes. Besides, he added, he got lonesome.

During the war years 1861 to 1865, most defensive structures at the Golden Gate were of a makeshift and emergency nature.

AT THE START of the Civil War, Fort Point was near completion, batteries were emplaced on Alcatraz and at several other sites in the Bay Area, but construction of the buildings, roads, breastworks and bunkers for Lime Point batteries did not begin until 1868. It was not until then that the long hassle over ownership ended and procurement of the tract effected.

The much disputed land was part of the original Richardson Rancho Saucelito Grant of 1828 and the conflict over its ownership reached the United States Congress where charges and counter-charges of graft and corruption were hurled about with great abandon but little immediate effect.

Until 1904, Forts Barry and Baker were units of the Lime Point Reservation. Final division of the tract came in 1937 when Fort Cronkhite was established at its northwestern limits. Today the forts are sub-posts of the Presidio of San Francisco.

FORTS BAKER, Barry and Cronkhite, with their vestiges of the past and modern installations standing side by side, not only present an intriguing comparison between the old and the new, they also offer a sort of stratified military archeology of coast artillery fortifications by era.

When gun ranges were extremely limited, battery emplacements were sited well within the harbor entrance. Batteries Duncan and Cavallo, mentioned earlier, are examples. They represent the era between post Civil War days and the 1890s.

When wooden ships and smooth-bore cannon were succeeded by vessels of steel with more destructive armament, defensive coast artillery kept pace. This was during the intermediate era, about 1890 to World War I, when rifled guns increased in range to about 10 miles.

EMPLACEMENTS then stood at the very entrance of the Golden Gate.

The aforementioned 15-inch battery atop Lime Point Ridge represents this era. Traces of its brick emplacements still remain among the concrete breastworks of Battery Spencer. The latter, armed with two 12-inch barbette-mounted rifles, was finished in 1897 and remained until the early 1940s.

Battery Kirby is another example of intermediate armament. Begun in 1872 and improved in 1898, it employed two 12-inch disappearing rifles. Remnants of its breastworks and magazines can be seen at Kirby Beach, a small cove almost directly beneath the northern tower of the Golden Gate Bridge.

ANOTHER VIEW OF Battery Duncan as it looks today shows how remnants of this eight-inch battery stand on a hillside just within the limits of Fort Baker and some two miles south of Sausalito. It is just one of many relics of past military eras to be found in Marin's shoreline forts.

From Primitive Cannon To The Guided Missile

during that conflict and shipped overseas. These included five-inch guns from Battery Wagner, eight-inch guns from Battery Duncan, and 12-inch mortars from Battery Alexander.

These pieces were the "late" intermediate era and their breastworks and magazines still stand today, cheek by jowl with sleek, modern Nike missile sites.

Fort Cronkhite is a prime example of the final period of American shore fortifications, an era spanning the years between the two World Wars. Gun ranges had jumped to 20 to 25 miles. Cronkhite's Battery Townsley with its two huge 16-inch Navy rifles was situated far outside the Golden Gate from where it could launch 2,250-pound projectiles well out to sea.

BUILT ENTIRELY of steel and concrete, Battery Townsley was regarded in 1940 as impregnable to land, sea and air attack. It was the first "modern" coast artillery battery on the continent completely underground and one of the earliest to use radars and computers.

Today some of Battery Townsley's bunkers are used for storage purposes by nearby Nike missile sites.

Armament at the Marin fortifications during World War II also included anti-motor torpedo boat batteries, or AMTBs. There were 40-millimeter guns at Point Bonita and 90mm AMTBs at Gravelley Beach, closer to the bridge, and pedestal-mounted three-inchers at Kirby Beach.

ALSO AT THIS time, Army mine layers were berthed at Fort Baker and barrage balloon hangars operated at Fort Barry.

The close of World War II saw the end of the proud and tradition-steeped Coast Artillery Corps.

With the growth of air power, the importance of fixed coast defenses based on heavy guns waned. Mighty Battery Townsley's classic 16-inchers were fired for the last time in February, 1948, and a few months later the blowtorches and wreckers moved in to dismantle the last of the Golden Gate's harbor defense batteries.

TWO YEARS OF comparative quiet followed for Marin's forts and then with the Korean War a different type of armament appeared—90mm and 120mm anti-aircraft batteries.

Although improved they were of fast-fading World War II vintage and were short-lived. Their phasing out started in 1954 and a new era arrived, the era of the air defense guided missile.

Just as coast artillery armament had kept pace with the increased capabilities of sea-launched attacks, so did air defense keep abreast of the mounting potency of aircraft.

THE DEVELOPMENT of high-speed aircraft during the closing months of World War II resulted in the creation of a new system of Army air defense a decade later. This was Nike, an electronic system in which a supersonic missile is controlled ad guided from take-off to target by ground based equipment. It was named for the Greek goddess of victory.

The 1953 advent of the first of the Nike family, the Nike Ajax, meant far more than just a difference in "hardware." It marked a sweeping change in the very basic concept of air defense weapon deployment.

What occurred was that Army air defense weapons suddenly broke away from the concept of fixed or limited defense of the immediate area to an entirely new and "flexible" defense by missiles deployed near the defended area but capable of destroying targets at long range—before enemy aircraft reached a bomb-released line.

INITIALLY, Nike Ajax sites in Marin, and at other locations defending the Bay Area, were temporary, above-ground emplacements.

The first such site became operational at Fort Cronkhite on June 1, 1954. Soon after, another temporary Ajax battery was activated at Fort Barry.

By the summer of 1955, permanent sites with underground missile storage pits, elevators and other refinements were completed at both Marin forts.

FORT BARRY, which as late as 1943 still had two 12-inch disappearing cannon emplacement at Battery Mendell, scored a "first" in the history of local air defense. The first Nike Hercules battery to protect the Bay Area became operational there on Jan. 15, 1959. Hercules, the second generation Nike missile, possesses a greater destructive and performance capability than its predecessor, the Nike Ajax

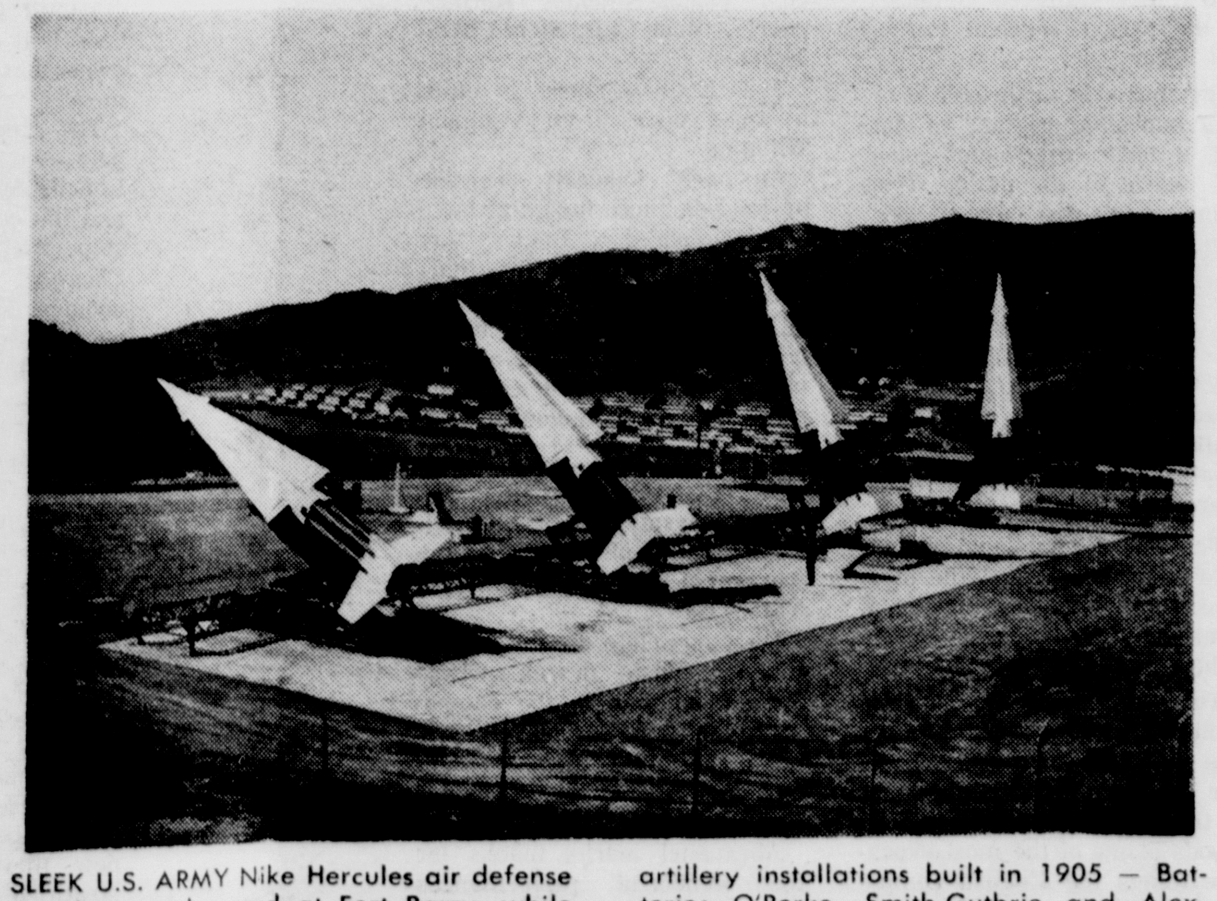
The next Marin County Hercules unit was San Rafael's, operational two months after the Barry site. Fort Cronkhite's Ajax went to Hercules on Sept. 29, 1959.

Today Marin County's old Lime Point Military Reservation is one of more than 30 complexes in the United States armed with Nike Hercules missiles.

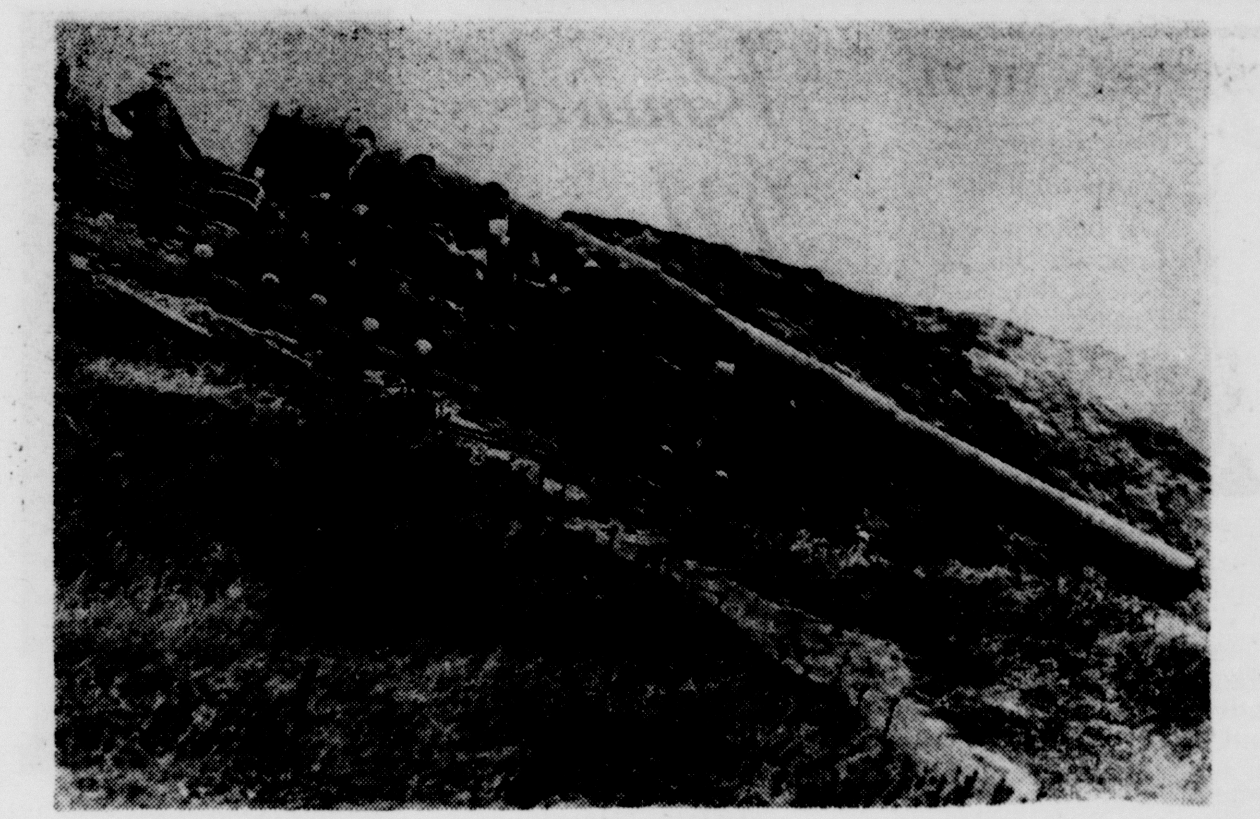
THE NIKE Hercules will range more than 75 miles.

Hercules not only has a conventional warhead, but can utilize a nuclear warhead to wipe out entire flights of aircrafts. It can destroy any known aircraft and any aerodynamically supported missile. It can intercept any known type of aircraft at altitudes below 1,000 feet or up to and beyond 150,000 feet, more than 28 miles high.

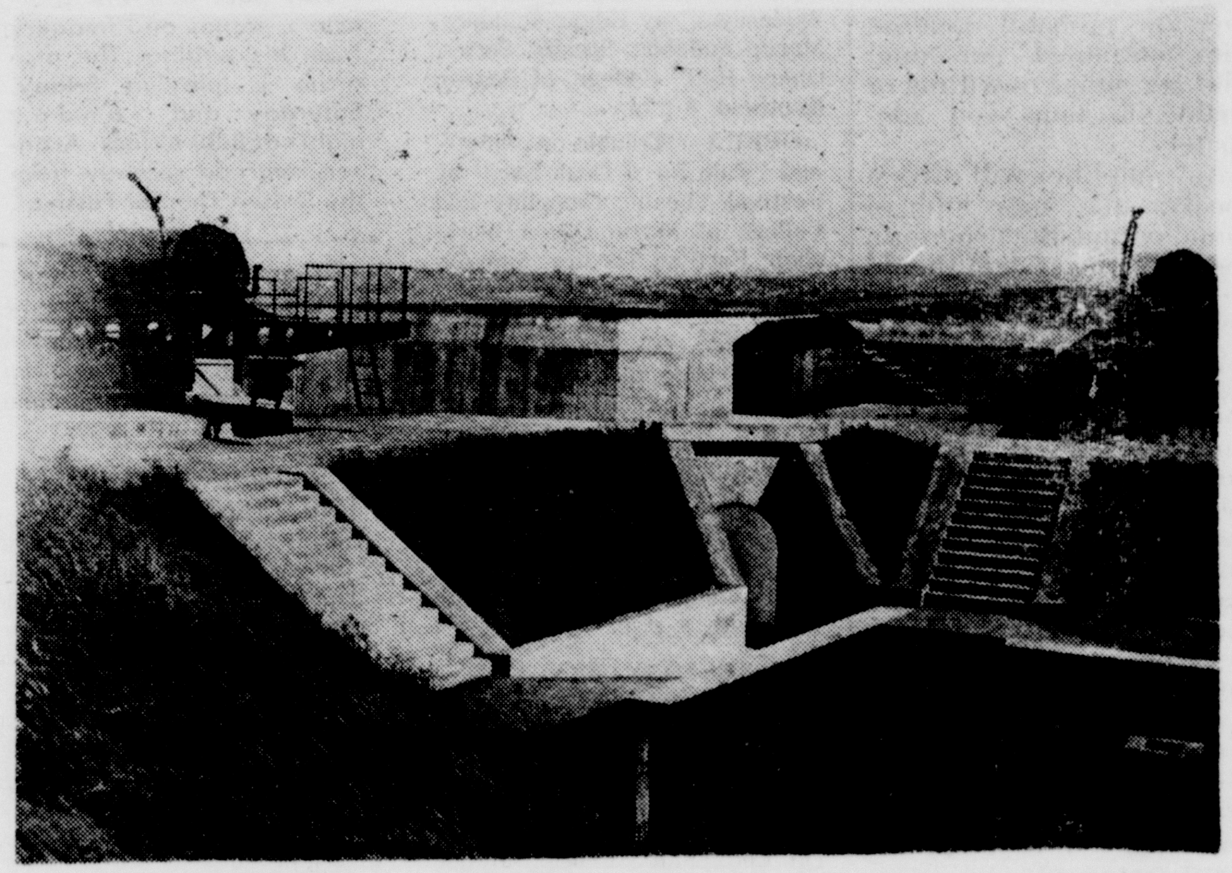
Nike Hercules missiles are a far cry indeed from the primitive cannon that protected the Golden Gate some 100 years ago.



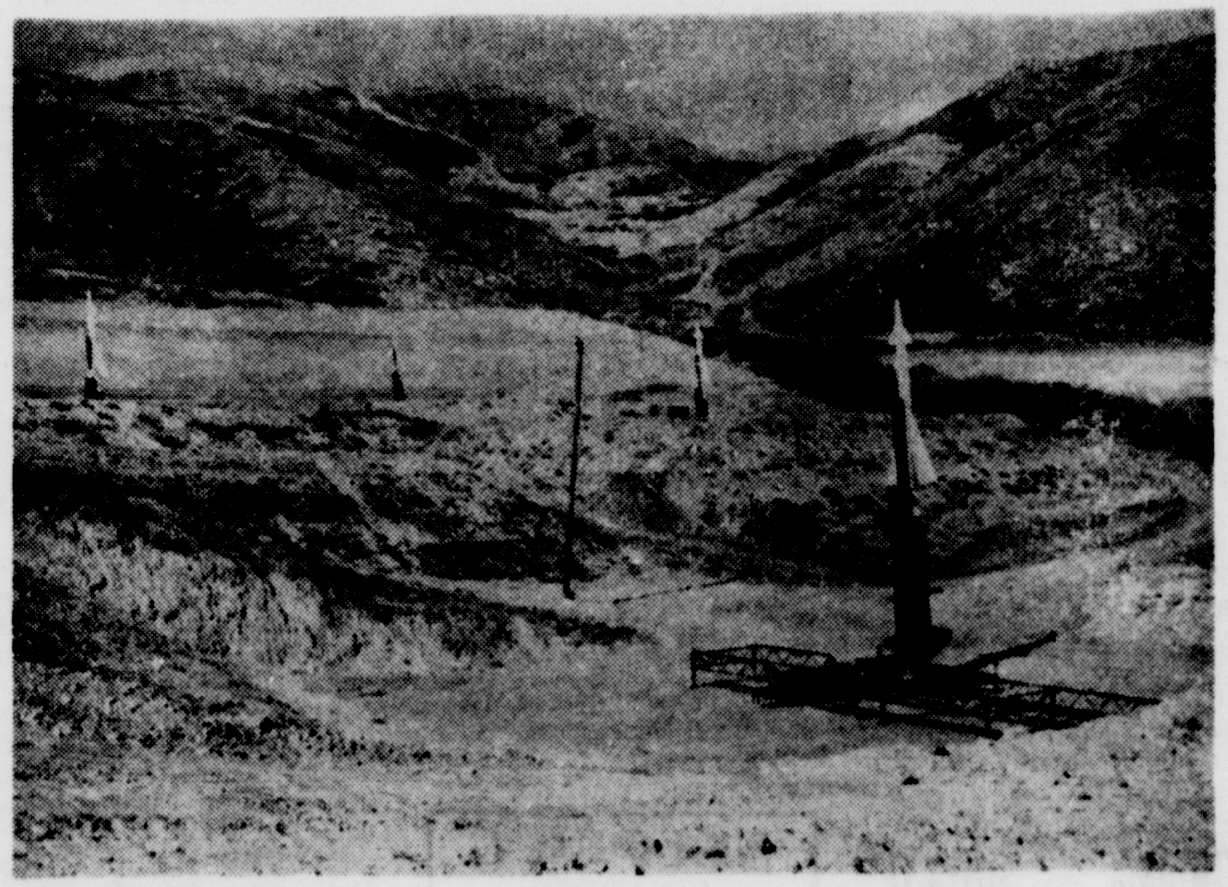
SLEEK U.S. ARMY Nike Hercules air defense missiles stand guard at Fort Barry, while nearby are the remains of three seacoast artillery installations built in 1905 — Batteries O'Rorke, Smith-Guthrie and Alexander.



THIS 50-TON ordnance piece was being dragged uphill in 1904 for emplacement by civilian contractors at Fort Barry's Battery Mendell. The gun barrel had been brought from San Francisco by a barge that landed at Point Bonita.



IN THE EARLY 1900s, near where the north tower of the Golden Gate Bridge stands today, the breastworks and 12-inch guns of Battery Spencer at Lime Point Bluff, Fort Baker, stood guard against enemy attack.



TEMPORARY SITES for the first members of the Nike family of Army air defense missiles, the Nike Ajax, became operational at Forts Barry and Cronkhite in 1954. By the summer of 1955, these had given way to permanent sites with underground missile pits, elevators and other refinements.

It bears repeating. Long after the sweetness of the discount purchase has wilted away, the bitterness of the poor service and wrong choice of components remains. Ponder these words! Remember, that the purchase of a home music system is a purchase intended to give many years of relaxation and enjoyment. Remember also that the average music lover is not a radio technician or engineer, and is not expected to speak in technical terms of Db's, tracking angles, compliance or flat response, when all he really wants is to hear music without distortion. This is where the job of a trained sound specialist is most important. In a discount store you are probably dealing with untrained personnel who are either unwilling or unable to help you adequately.

Any amplifier will drive a speaker into some form of sound output. But to perform correctly, the system should be well balanced, as would be one outlined by an experienced audio specialist. In a quality Hi-Fi store, the specialist will demonstrate various balanced possibilities. The listener will have the opportunity to compare these systems with laboratory standards. The goal is to provide the consumer with the best balanced component music system for his budget. Further, before delivery to the customer's home the system is assembled, bench tested with laboratory standard equipment and adjusted to meet the manufacturer's specifications; thus, assuring maximum performance of each unit. Should the need for service occur after installation, the customer can either have a technician come to his home, or bring the unit to the store that sold it for prompt service.

A discount house as a rule does not have service facilities, so you have to take the component to a factory service agency (generally an independently owned repair shop under contract with many manufacturers to repair their units for $3.00 or $4.00 regardless of the problem and usually crowded with repairs.) Often times the cost difference between a purchase from a quality Hi-Fi Stereo store and a discount store is used up in trying to obtain satisfactory performance. Can you honestly afford the gamble, or would you rather know that what you have chosen is the best for you?

GULL

Svelte vulture—

Like a careless pinwheel
Wheeling, feeling, sea-spent,
He floats down, cloud-sent—
To light, haughty-eyed, upon my orange peel.

God kissing carrion, from celestial doors,
Loosed by Diana from Olympian dells,
He preys on garbage, picks at rotting horseshoe shells—
Then squawks, flaps, slaps water, skims, and soars

To realms azure.

Outside, the disembodied caw caw caw
of a crow
bludgeons the stillness.
Now in the cities
the slow traffic rumble quickens
and soon faceless people
everywhere
will arise from rumpled sheets
and put on clothing

And most important will be the masks
for without these they cannot face
the world
or themselves.
I, too, must arise and
adjust my mask.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

On the Vanguard labels:

BOYCE: Eight Symphonies—Isolisti di Zagreb/Antonio Janigro conducting—Bach Guild Stereo BGS-70668:

Boyce has been called England's most talented composer in the period between Purcell and Elgar.

His music is forthright, energetic and quite original. In fact, few of these symphonies sound like music of the middle 1700s—they seem of a later period.

The stereodisc effectively replaces the previously fine mono set on Westminster directed by Karl Haas.

VAUGHAN WILLIAMS: A London Symyphony (No. 2) — Halle Orchestra/Sir John Barbirolli — Vanguard Everyman Stereo SRV-134SD:

This bargain sub-label of Vanguard has had one of the most consistently excellent series of releases in the concert music field.

This is probably the Vaughan Williams to own, and certainly this particular version is the one to own. This sound-picture of the captial in all its various moods is one of the most evocative things the English composer has written. It almost justifies the label sometimes attached to Vaughan Williams of an impressionist composer.

Fine Stereo.

PURCELL: The Fantasias for three to seven viols (complete) — The Concentus Musicus, Vienna/Nikolaus Harnoncourt — Bach Guild Stereo BGS-70676:

This English music is quite a world apart from Vaughan Williams.

An early scholarly exercise by Purcell, these fantasias have been compared to Bach's "Art of Fugue." This writer finds both works equally difficult to sit through, but early music buffs will appreciate the careful playing of the Viennese group on its viols and the good stereophonics.

HONEGGER: JUDITH — Netania Davrath/Blanche Christ-Lake City Symphonic Choir/Utah Abravanel — Vanguard Stereo VSD-71139:

First complete discing of this Biblical music drama, whose form is similar to the composer's earlier "King David." Netania Davrath is a perfect Judith, and Mrs. Milhaud provides a clear narration.

Abravanel merits thanks for the wonderful performances coming out of Salt Lake City lately.

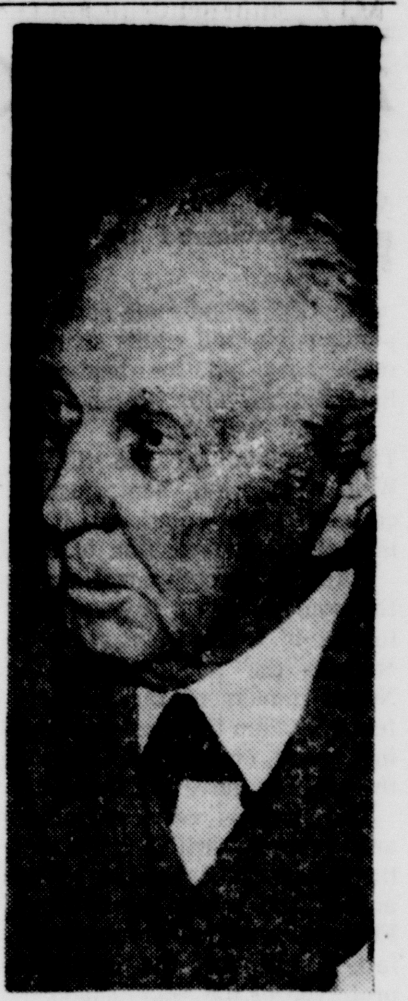
Pencil In Hands Of The Infinite

By DON KEOWN

FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT: His Life, His Work, His Words, by Olgivanna Lloyd Wright, Horizon Press, 224 pages, $7.50.

NO ROOM IN THE ARK by Alan Moorehead, abridged edition, Harper & Row, 166 pages, $3.95.



FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT
A working genius

Marinites feel a proprietary interest in anything having to do with the late Frank Lloyd Wright because he left his highly individualistic mark among us in the form of the imposing Marin County Civic Center administration building.

We note with pride that the largest single illustration in the new book "Frank Lloyd Wright: His Life, His Work, His Words" is a striking double-page photograph of that edifice.

The book is by Wright's widow and colleague Olgivanna Lloyd Wright. Her emphasis is less upon her late husband's life or biography than it is upon his work and thinking.

For the most part, she chooses to let him speak for himself. With full access to his papers, she produces long and frequent quotations in which Wright discoursed not only upon architecture but upon the arts and living generally.

Wright saw himself as "a pencil in the hands of the Infinite." His "organic architecture," as he called it, represented a move toward freedom. It rejected the basic box-like form that had so long shackled American building design, and it capitalized upon the cantilever principle made possible by steel to an unprecedented extent.

It was, in Wright's view, "the architecture of democracy." He was out to liberate us from "the sense of enclosure." The remarkable collection of illustrations assembled for the book, both photos and drawings, demonstrate just how remarkably well he succeeded. There is a characteristic feeling of freedom and airiness about any structure planned by Wright or his proteges that is instantly recognizable.

The reader receives detailed descriptions of the Wright processes in the development of some of his best-known projects, particularly the early hallmark ones.

There is also considerable insight into Wright as a teacher of young people. He was a believer in broad study, not in specialization. And he had an almost astonishing ability to reach, challenge and inspire the young.

If Mrs. Wright tells us very little about Wright's biography — principally she dwells on his Welsh roots and their lifelong influence —, there are other books to fill that void. And she does reveal a great deal about his personality. As his wife, she was, naturally, an unstinting admirer of the man. Thus there is a propensity to overlook or rationalize the tendency toward conceit and arrogance sometimes reflected in his own words. But there is little doubt that in anyone's eyes, Frank Lloyd Wright was an extraordinary human being as well as working genius. His interests were vast, and he subscribed wholeheartedly to the theory that "beauty is the highest form of morality."

At the back of the book there is a table of chronology of events in Wright's life, and his own listing of his principal architectural innovations.

To understanding of how and why this man created such a lasting and revolutionary impact upon American architecture, the book makes an impressive contribution.

HARPER & ROW has published a new abridged edition of journalist-author Alan Moorehead's excellent "No Room in the Ark."

The book remains as fresh and engrossing a picture of African wildlife today as it was when it was first published in the late 1950s. The abridgement, by Moorehead's wife, retains most of the value and flavor of the full text and allows for quicker reading, although few would regret the time invested in the original, longer version.

Moorehead has a great gift for observing, and then transfering these observations to written description.

Visiting Africa's last great game preserves, he viewed and recorded the habits of the dwindling herds with an absence of cloying sentimentality, but with a probing curiosity that makes for an enthralling experience for his reader who finds himself almost literally accompanying Moorehead into the wilds and bush.

At close range you witness the day-to-day life of the lion, the leopard, the elephant, the giraffe, the crocodile and lesser but equally fascinating wildlife. For Moorehead, the single most exciting experience of his African tours came in the rare sighting of a gorilla, and that makes for an especially brilliant chapter.

Moorehead can paint for his readers, too, an equally compelling portrait of the people and the geography of Africa.

He is no romanticist, and always honest. Of the pygmy: ". . . if you've seen one, you've seen them all."

Seldom does he sermonize on the need for conservation. But his reporting makes this unnecessary. It points out dramatically the stake that mankind has in the reversal of past tends toward the eradication of other living things.

He does tell us that it is too late to save the 90 per cent of Africa's one-time animal population that has been exterminated forever. But he foresaw, as of the time he was writing the book, some hope for the remaining 10 per cent. "It may even be," he wrote, "that the human instinct to kill all the other living things on earth will wear itself out at last."

Unfortunately, further progress in that respect, since Moorehead voiced his qualified optimism, has been little if not nil.

There's a small portfolio of truly remarkable animal photographs in the book.

Those who do not own the book in its original edition would do well to avail themselves of the opportunity presented by this new version. It is a rare and altogether enjoyable reading experience, intended primarily for young readers but well-suited to all ages.

DANDY FOR television fans who dote on old and not-so-old movies, but who like to be a bit selective in the ones they view, is the new $1 Bantam Books paperback "TV Key Movie Guide" edited by Steven H. Scheuer.

It lists in alphabetical order more than 6,900 films that have been sold to television, along with their stars, the plots, the year of filming and their national origins. There is even a rating system, based on from one to four stars.

Many newspapers make use of the "TV Key" reports on their television pages.

"THE SECRETS of San Domenico," the excellent and attractive looseleaf cookbook put out by San Domenico School for Girls, was a quick sellout at that institution's annual charity bazaar.

Now more copies have been printed, and are available through the San Domenico Book Store at $3 a copy.

The Service League, a group of 30 school mothers, compiled the book. They wheedled from parents, students, nuns and friends of San Domenico some 500 treasured recipes, many of them in the "family secret" category. The result is an unusually well balanced presentation of dishes of the kind that not only sound good but also lend themselves to practical preparation.

"THE FAMILY Circus," one of the most popular of the comic cartoons appearing regularly in the Independent - Journal, is available now in book form from the Judson Press, Valley Forge, Pa. "Sunday with the Family Circus" contains 91 of Bil Keane's best drawings. The price is $1.

FAWCETT has published in its Premier Masterwork paperback series Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist" with introduction by Steven Marcus (95 cents).

A SECOND edition of "Northwestern Pacific Railroad," the fast-selling illustrated history by Fred A. Stindt and Guy L. Dunscomb, has been published and is selling for $12.50. The book has been expanded with an additional 16 pages, 29 more historical photographs and an added chapter on the disastrous 1964 Eel River flood.

That flame-bearded artist John Jericho reluctantly leaves his studio again to help solve a puzzle of death and intrigue.

The reason: the brilliant young artist Tommy Nolan, who everyone says has been speaking for the younger generation, is dead — and it isn't suicide as the police believe, but murder.

Nolan's paintings were to be used as a backdrop for a big television show starring the singer Zelda Rankin, who daily must fight her way past hordes of admirers. At night, she, her kookie husband and kookier lover and assorted others play, drink, and sing.

The use of Nolan's pictures was subject of a fight at one of those parties. Then Nolan dies, Jericho wants to know why.

This is Hugh Pentecost as his best. He brings New York and the behind-scenes television world alive with a lively story of intrigue and murder.

"I Thought Manufacturers No Longer Used Ornaments That Melt"

American producers of ornamental trim, beads, sequins, etc. have learned over the years that polystyrene plastic ornaments will dissolve in drycleaning. Unfortunately, foreign imports are not so carefully manufactured. Garments bearing French, Italian or Hong Kong labels are most likely to be decorated with perishable ornaments. Drycleaners have been warned to watch for garments with these labels and to be careful of any with plastic ornamental trim.

If you should attempt to spot-clean such a garment at home and let the cleaning fluid contact the beads or sequins, look out! They may disappear. Your drycleaner knows how to test plastic ornaments for melting. If he finds they may melt, he'll remove them before cleaning and, properly, make a charge for removing and replacing them. In instances where the trim cannot be removed he may refuse to clean the garment.

American manufacturers are much more customer-conscious than foreign manufacturers. The free enterprise system where the customer is king has taught them that.

Mammoth And Moving

FIVE SMOOTH STONES by Ann Fairbairn, Crown, 756 pages. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

The first grand-scale novel exploiting the civil rights struggle makes its bid for best-seller lists and the wide screen.

It may well be the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the Sixties. Written at white heat, just as corn-filled and emotional, it too is a flaming exposition of evil.

If this mammoth novel makes the grade, which it is very likely to do, it will surely serve to educate the public about the Negro movement far more effectively than the most penetrating essay or treatise. This is the stuff to move the masses.

The story is very, very long and teeming with characters, throughout subordinated to the action and quite perfunctory. First we meet the beloved grandfather, L'il Joe, the inevitable prototype of the "old-fashioned" Negro who, with the help of a Danish professor, brings up the boy David, instilling in him a deep respect for his heritage, at the same time he teaches him how to survive in the depression-stricken white world.

David leaves New Orleans for a northern college where he excels (he is of course very handsome and, palatably, "light milk chocolate in color") and also falls in love with Sara, a white — whom I'm afraid he calls "Smallest," and who refuses to believe the world has no place for their marriage.

This is just the main thread in a book overflowing with subplots and scenes set all over the United States and Europe. New groups of people, new situations are introduced constantly, as the lovers suffer and part. At last David, now a promising Boston lawyer, is offered the chance to serve as a diplomat to a new African country.

It is at this point that the book takes fire. David, inflamed by L'il Joe's murder, refuses his chance for a future with Sara and resolutely turns back to the South to join in the fight for equality.

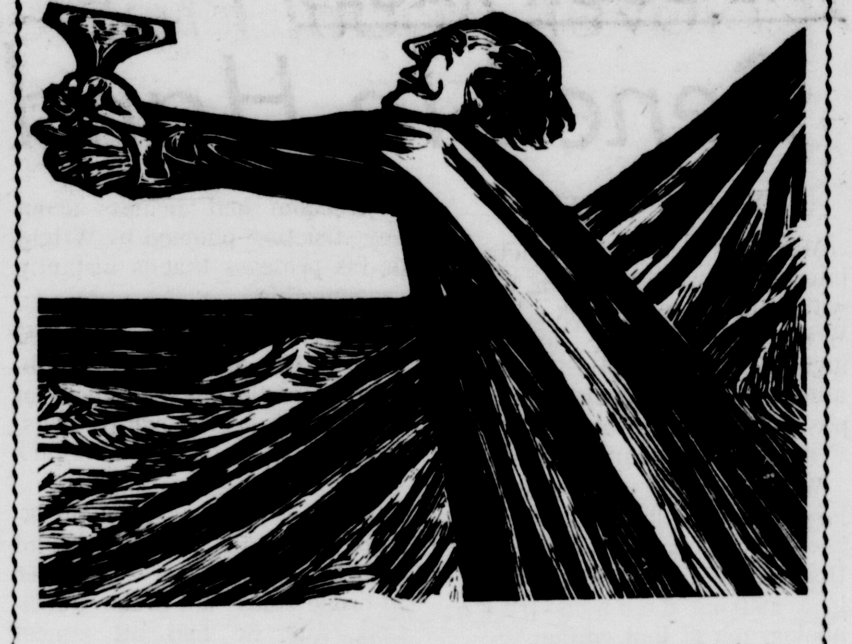
And now hosts of new people fill the stage: The militants, the "Martin Luther Kings," and the often two-edged white liberals who swarm into the South. There is the strategy and interaction, the bickering behind the lines of CORE, NAACP and SNCC (under different names). Swiftly we come to know the political set-ups, the leading personalities, black and white, of several backwater Southern communities.

Someone from another planet might believe the passionate accounts of children spat on, beset by police dogs, herded en masse into jail, are luridly overdone. But we know better. We saw it all, and no doubt will see more, right on our own television screens.

As it is manifestly impossible to overstate the jungle conditions of the South, as well as the insults and injustices Negroes are subject to in the rest of the country, Miss Fairbairn cannot be faulted for giving full rein to her emotions, and the melodrama soars.

The unabashed sentimentality of this strong call for justice is not to everyone's taste. But one must give full credit to the writer who is able to organize this colossus, with its myriad characters, its panorama of scenes and most of all the sizzling action of the last half of the book.

It is rare for a book to qualify as great popular entertainment and deliver a message at the same time. Miss Fairbairn has succeeded brilliantly and deserves the rich reward she will no doubt reap.



A WOODCUT entitled "Ode to Joy" by Ernst Barlach is among the illustrations included in "Barlach," art critic Alfred Werner's biography and pictorial study of the great German artist of the 20th Century.

A Fascinating Place And Time

THE ANCIENT WORLD by Giovanni Garbini, McGraw-Hill, 176 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Patricia Perry.

The geographical area we call the Ancient Middle East stretches from Egypt to Persia and south to the Arabian Peninsula, and it was in this area that the most ancient civilizations created by man were to develop.

Man's artistic creations produced during an immense time span, from the seventh millennium settlement of Jericho to the period of Greek supremacy in the 5th Century B. C., are covered in this book; it's broken into three sections, Mesopotamia with the fascinating Sumerian civilization, the peripheral areas, an immense arc of highlands stretching from Persia to Turkey and embracing Syria, Palestine and the Arabian Peninsula, and thirdly, Egypt, the civilization of the Nile Valley.

Now forget all your preconceptions about archeological finds being dry and dusty, about dull accounts of ruins and digs. This handsomely illustrated volume—102 of the 200 in full color—is a pleasure and a joy. If you have some Christmas gift money left over, rush right out and buy it. It's the kind of book you'll browse through for years, perhaps never finishing the text, but gloating over the statues and bronzes, the wall paintings and pottery, created by artists and craftsmen three, four, five, six thousand years ago.

And how fascinating and mysterious it is. Look at the ceiling painting with birds, butterflies and locusts painted in the tomb of Khonsu at Thebes in 1425 B.C.; the delicate wings in blues and browns look so much like a 19th Century Impressionist's work.

Look with wonder at the magnificent golden head of a bull decorating the front of a lyre unearthed from the royal cemetery at Ur, a creation of a metalworker who worked with love and skill in the period 2600 to 2400 B.C.

Garbini, professor at the Institute of Near Eastern Studies, University of Rome, has written the text in a highly readable style. Don't be misled, though, you won't plough through dynasties and the rise and fall of entire civilizations in an evening's browsing. Nor does Professor Garbini write down to the reader.

He cautions: "For us art involves aesthetic appreciation as well as a consideration of its social, political or religious functions."

This is the second in a McGraw-Hill series called "Landmarks of the World's Art." Other volumes will include "The Classical World," "Man and the Renaissance" and the "Age of Baroque." Let's hope they'll be as great a bargain as this.

A Primer About Painting For The Timid Beginner

THE PAINTING OF PICTURES by Arthur Zaidenberg, World, 140 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

Artist and instructor Arthur Zaidenberg has aimed this book at the person who would like to paint but who is timid about beginning.

It is written at the most basic level, and is aimed at getting the novice involved and started along the right path.

Thus, it opens with a discussion of why pictures are painted, followed by a dissertation on the selection of materials and equipment. (Oils, says Zaidenberg, are the best medium for the beginner.)

Zaidenberg urges an experimental approach allowing the beginner to develop his own style. But he provides some loose guidelines for the experimentation, and supports his explanations with illustrations that are both his own drawings and the work of master painters—some of these color plates.

It could serve as a "review course" for the more experienced artist, as well as an elementary text for the novice.

BIRDS IN OUR LIVES edited by Alfred Stefferud and Arnold L. Nelson, Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, 561 pages, $9. Reviewed by Don Keown.

A study of the whole, wide relationship of birds to mankind and other life upon this earth is a major undertaking.

The Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, a U.S. Department of Interior agency, has tackled that ambitious project. With the help of numerous individuals concerned with and versed in wildlife resources, it has produced in "Birds in Our Lives," a large, well-written, generously-illustrated and comprehensive volume on the subject.

John S. Gottschalk, director of the publishing bureau, says the objective is "the broadening of the public's understanding of the importance of birdlife and of natural world to all of us." In his foreword, Secretary of Interior Stewart Udall describes the focus as the part played by birds "in the web of life."

Sixty-one different writers have contributed material upon topics in which they are recognized authorities. Included are some of the country's foremost ornithologists, representatives of other related sciences, spokesmen for conservation and field sports educators, federal agency chiefs and consultants, etc. All worked under the editorship of Alfred Stefferud and Arnold L. Nelson.

Their scope includes a panoramic view of birdlife, a study of its relationship to literate and other facets of man's culture, their place in sports and recreation, their role in nature's general scheme, the part they have played in science, their husbandry, such controversial topics as pesticides, hunting, pollution and flyway intrusion, problems such as crop foraging and aircraft and utility dangers and damage, and discussion of what people are doing and should do to secure the future of the birds and their benefits.

"We, all of us, must be the responsible stewards of birds in our lives," says John S. Gottschalk in his piece.

It is a handsome book. While some may lament the absence of color illustrations, the 372 black and white photographs and 80 wash drawings that are included have been well chosen and superbly reproduced.

In Marin, Audubon stronghold that it is, the book should enjoy an especially warm reception. It is not, however, a book restricted to any one group, but should be of interest to everyone titillated by those winged creatures that are from any standpoint among the most marvelous of God's creations.

"Birds in Our Lives" is available for $9 from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington D.C., 20402.

Biblical Story By Wibberley

THE CENTURION by Leonard Wibberley, William Morrow and Co., 251 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

Subtitled "A novel of the ministry and passion of Christ," the book treats the events of the Book of Matthew as current history of the time when the Romans ruled Judea.

The author of "Mouse on the Moon," and many other books, both fiction and non-fiction, former Independent-Journal editor Wibberley uses effectively a quiet, straightforward style to describe the drama of the coming of the Messiah proclaimed King of the Jews.

"The Centurion" of the title, the Roman Longinus, is the person through whom the story is told, and whose unhappy lot it is to carry out the crucifixion.

Reviews Of New Reading

A Novel About Problems Of Adolescence

THE LAST PICTURE SHOW by Larry McMurtry, Dial Press, 280 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Gary Tischler.

This is a growing up sexually novel.

That makes it almost too bad, because McMurtry, author of "Leaving Cheyenne" which was made into an excellent film, "Hud," has so many things going for him as a writer.

He can evoke an achingly real sense of place and atmosphere, in this case, the dreary, windswept landscapes surrounding a small Northern Texas town. The sense of desolation, of drying up, of being nowhere felt by the adolescents in the novel is a lingering one.

His style is straightforward, without literary blandishments. He goes for an emotional effect, but what he accomplishes is curiously half-baked.

The subject, after all is an old one: Young high school-age adolescents caught in the tug of war of leaving the things of youth behind, trying to become adults, desiring and wanting sex as a thing and an experience but afraid of its responsibilities.

McMurtry adds nothing new to the subject. His adolescents debate the subject, engage in it frequently, feel pangs and sweat over it.

The two principal problems are that he purports to say that these particular adolescents are representative of today's youth. They are no more representative than the town is.

Two of the main characters, Duane, the fullback on the perennially losing football team, and Jacy, the rich girl, have about as much depth as tissue paper.

They have an aimless poor boy - rich girl romance which comes down to a tedious will-she-or-won't-she battle. Neither really cares once it happens. Nor do they care very much about anything that happens to them.

McMurtry has more success with his older people and with one of the youngsters, Duane's best friend Sonny. The portrait of the he-man football coach, his withering wife and her affair with Sonny is sharply, beautifully drawn. And Sam, the proprietor of the town pool hall, is perhaps the most sympathetic character, an old man still young who sees his own youth reflected in the confused activities of his customers.

Anatomy, Nutrition Linked By Experts

YOUR BODY: Its Anatomy and Nutrition by Dr. S. William Kalb and Dr. Christian A. Hovde, C. S. Hammond & Co., 150 pages. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

This book is the result of the teamwork of a Seton Hall University professor of anatomy and a Newark, N.J., physician and nutritionist who at one time headed the American College of Nutrition.

It breaks down into two sections, the first dealing with the human anatomy, the second with nutrition and its relationship to the well-being of the body.

Included are the expected discussions of the special problems of the obese, the underweight, children, the aged, expectant mothers, etc.

"Your Body," however, has a number of unusual features.

Among these are the illustrations that include a full set of anatomical sketches by Ronald Keller in color, a glossary of medical terms, weight tables, menu planning advice and a separate booklet listing the caloric values of the more popular foods.

It is a concise book, quickly read and easily referred to in the future. Yet it seems to cover its subjects with unusual clarity.

Some Lessons For The New Emerging Countries Of Asia

THE PHILIPPINES: YESTERDAY AND TODAY by Delia and Ferdinand Kuhn, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 248 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

This work, one of a series on contemporary civilizations, is particularly timely in view of the Vietnam war and the emergence of Southeast Asian countries.

The authors admit that their work is an introductory rather than a comprehensive study, but it might well contain some lessons for other new countries in Southeast Asia which had been under foreign rule for many years.

The Philippines, first under the rule of Spain and then the United States, won its independence in 1949, only to find the changeover no easy task.

The blending together of political, economic, social and religious institutions and people of diverse ancestry while taking on the role of a new nation is not an easy path.

The Philippines, an Asian land long ruled by Westerners, can never be wholly Asian or wholly Western, the authors contend, but it can take the best from both worlds.

The Ligurian Riviera

The Travel Page

The subject is roses.

Roses, carnations, oleanders and camellias, and for that matter almost every form of temporate zone and subtropical blossoming—all to be found in Italy's northern province of Liguria.

The Ligurian Riviera forms a taut bow, from Ventimiglia, which is virtually a stone's throw from Monte Carlo and Menton, to La Spezia, "the city of poets" at the end of the arc.

IN THIS region so favored by nature, the date palm mingles with the umbrella pine and flowers abound in such profusion as to create a flower market within the land of flowers.

The Italian Riviera owes its abundance of blossoms to a most happy situation and configuration of land.

High mountain ranges, the Maritime Alps and the Apennines, fringe its seacoast and shelter it from northerly winds at every quarter. The volcanic soil, moreover, is singularly adapted to rich vegetation and, what with soil and climate in combination, there are no barren spots in Liguria.

A BLUE SKY and a bluer sea, a warm sun and a warm people, have created an ideal winter and summer playground.

Actually there are two Ligurian Rivieras, the Riviera di Levante (East) and the Riviera di Ponente (West), with Genoa, the birthplace of Columbus, as the dividing line.

The Riviera di Levante is best known to Americans because of the familiar names of Portofino, Rapallo, Santa Margherita and La Spezia, where people from this country have long holidayed.

PORTOFINO gained fame, moreover, because the Duke and Duchess of Windsor honeymooned there; it was favored, too, by Clark Gable and other Hollywood stars who sought rest and relaxation from their Roman holidays.

To the West, San Remo is known internationally; it is luxurious and glittering, boasting an elegant casino, race tracks, fine ships, splendid villas, 280 hotels and an 18-hole golf course.

From Ventimiglia on, through San Remo to Genoa, elegant resorts are strung like pearls along the entire coast, almost abutting one upon the other. They are too numerous for detailed description, but Ventimiglia is a pleasant little town, ancient-modern, famed for its prehistoric caves, its 11th Century churches, Roman ruins, an excellent archeological museum, and, of course, flower markets.

BORDIGHERA is similarly known for its gardens and flower markets, and in general is a center for subtropical growths—it supplies the palm leaves for the Vatican observance of Palm Sunday. Ospedaletti is noted for its roses and carnations.

Spotorno has superior climate from April through October, and is much favored by sun-famished Germans, Austrians, Belgians, and even French tourists.

To stroll in its back country hills is to walk in a profusion of flowers, past Roman ruins, medieval churches and historic fortresses.

ALASSIO (favorite spot of artists and writers, including Ernest Hemingway) is nearby, and boasts a velvety sand beach where one can bathe from March to October, scuba-dive and sail to one's heart's content.

Lately Alassio, Spotorno and other neighboring seaside resorts have begun to draw American tourists in increasing number. A major attraction is the 18-hole, par 72, Garlenda golf course, newest and one of the best appointed in Italy; famed by green hills, it is irrigated by a huge artificial reservoir, so that the fairways are green in all seasons. The course was laid out in 1965 on land that formed part of the estate of the Marquis of Balestrino, whose ancient castle overlooks the fourth hole, and it is within a short drive of the seacoast.

Liguria shares with so many other regions of Italy the virtue that its holiday resorts are never more than a few hours away from some great center of art and culture, or metropolitan excitement. The center of course, is Genoa, bearing the same relation to the seaside resorts as Long Island, for example, does to New York City.

GENOA IS well worth an extended visit. It is an elegant and aristocratic city as well as a bustling seaport, and its Via Balbi is lined with palaces. It once rivaled Venice as the queen of the Mediterranean, and, in addition to the Great Navigator, Columbus, gave birth to the most famous fiddler of all times, Paganini, and to the great doge, Andrea Doria.

All in all, the Ligurian Riviera is one long sweep of holiday pleasure. Prices are surprisingly reasonable and the region has decided for the tourist season of 1967 to maintain the same rates that have been in effect since 1964.

GARLENDA ON the Ligurian Riviera boasts not only a modern 18-hole golf course, but, within those grounds, a medieval chapel, the Church of San Rocco di Gadlenda.

Sightseers Are Attracted By California's Man-Made Wonder

Higher than the Washington Monument with enough concrete to build a three-foot walkway around the world at the equator, California's own Shasta Dam on the Sacramento River never ceases to amaze the visiting tourist as it works hard to control the water from Shasta Lake.

When full, the 35-mile long Shasta Lake, formed by the Sacramento, McCloud and Pitt rivers, according to the National Automobile Club, contains enough water to cover the entire state of Connecticut to a depth of one-and-a-half feet.

SO MUCH water, in fact, that during its unharnessed days it caused millions of dollars' worth of damage.

Formerly flowing uncontrolled into the Pacific Ocean, this water mercilessly flooded valley farmlands, towns and cities, transforming these once productive areas into desolate wastelands. Now Shasta Dam harnesses this destructive force and stores part of it for irrigation during the dry season.

Not only useful but a wonder to see, this magnificently proportioned dam rises 602 feet above bedrock in the river canyon, making it the highest overflow-type dam in the world.

TO MAKE room for this, the second tallest and largest concrete structure in our country, 37 miles of Southern Pacific's main line railroad, which wound through the Sacramento River Canyon, were relocated in 1938, as were 21 miles of Highway 99.

Equally amazing proved the method of transporting and placing the enormous amounts of concrete. During the three-and-a half years of its actual construction, which began in 1939, over 12 million tons of sand and gravel passed over mountains and valleys on a conveyor belt that stretched along for 9.6 miles. On one day in August, 1941, the concreting plant worked efficiently enough to place 11,700,090 yards of concrete in designated spots.

Part of the 170-million dollar Central Valley Irrigation Project, Shasta Dam, completed in 1945, cost a total of 12 million dollars. In 1949, Shasta Power Plant went into full operation.

MUCH EXCITEMENT and astonishment filled the air when visitors to Shasta Dam spotted a waterfall three times higher than Niagara Falls. Five times since the dam's completion this miracle of nature appeared and five times people marveled at the beauty of it. Each time excess rainfall and snow blended to form the waterfall, rushing down the 500-foot spillway.

So far more than two-million visitors have viewed Shasta Dam, experiencing a feeling of pride in our very capable engineers, capable enough to build such a powerful control of ravaging natural forces.

Why not see for yourself the man-made wonder that is Shasta Dam?

The Versatile Viburnum

Gardening Page

If variety is the spice of life, gardeners can find it in the viburnum family.

This versatile group of shrubs, both evergreen and deciduous, offers a dozen or more garden forms and the Marinite who doesn't try at least one or two of them is missing out.

All the viburnums are showy and a good percentage of them produce intensely fragrant flowers. These latter are apt to be in bloom any time from late fall to late spring, depending on variety. And when they are, your garden can be a very nice place, indeed.

THE PERFUME of the fragrant viburnums is a beautiful thing in itself and worth planting for its own sake.

There is a native American viburnum, but the varieties of interest to Californians come either from Asia or Europe. They are not particular about soil, though a loamy, well drained soil, is usually recommended. Drainage is more important than the type of soil you have—drainage and water.

Viburnums don't need as much water as camellias and azaleas, but they should not be left without it during our long, dry summers.

ONE OF THE nicest viburnums to meet for the first time is the evergreen, Sweet Viburnum.

As the name suggests, its white flowers are fragrant. They are carried in late spring, to be followed in summer by clusters of red fruit that later turns black. The foliage is dark green and has a leathery quality which makes a high, wide and handsome background for the garden setting.

Another fine evergreen member of the family is the Leather Leaf Viburnum.

IT IS NOT as tall as the Sweet Viburnum, but still a handsome shrub for borders and backgrounds. Its white blooms are earlier than the above, coming in April and May and are only slightly less fragrant. The fruit clusters turn black faster than do those of the Sweet Viburnum, also.

Leather Leaf Viburnum derives its name from the leathery, wrinkled leaves, which are deep green on top and light- colored and felt-like on the underside.

One of the all-time favorite viburnums is the Laurestinus Viburnum, a medium to large shrub with shiny, deep green foliage and flat heads of pinkish-white flowers in winter. A smaller, more compact form of Laurestinus has recently been introduced and should be even more popular than the parent.

AMONG DECIDUOUS viburnums the Burkwood Viburnum is probably the the most widely grown in California.

Along the coast, this is almost an evergreen, holding some of its handsome, dark green leaves through the winter and shedding the rest for only the shortest time. Flowers are pinkish-white and fragrant, filling the garden with their sweetness in late winter.

The second most popular of deciduous viburnums is the Carlesi Viburnum, also called Korean Allspice.

This is a shrub of considerable refinement, three or four feet high and spreading somewhat more than that. Its deep green foliage turns to shades of red in fall, giving one even more reason for planting it—as if the intensely fragrant spring blooms weren't reason enough.

SO MUCH FOR the fragrant viburnums. There are also members of the family which have no fragrance, and of them, two, at least, deserve special mention. Both are commonly called "Snowballs" and both are deciduous.

First of these is the Common Snowball or Eastern Snowball, a medium to large shrub producing literally masses of round, white blooms. The foliage of this one turns to crimson in fall, one of our best fall-color producers.

The second Snowball is the Japanese Snowball, also with round clusters of white blooms, though there are slightly tinted with green.

Both Snowballs are highly recommended and deserve a place in your garden.

BOTANICAL NOTE: The Sweet Viburnum is offered as Virbunum odoratissimum; Leather Leaf Viburnum is Viburnum rhytidophyllum; Laurestinus is Viburnum tinus; Burkwood Viburnum is Viburnum Burkwoodii; Carlesi Viburnum is Viburnum carlesi; Eastern Snowball is Viburnum apulis sterile; Japanese Snowball is Viburnum tomentosum sterile.

PROVIDING A pleasant contrast with the brick background is this Sandankwa Viburnum, one of the evergreen members of a very versatile family of shrubs. Fragrant pinkish flowers are borne in clusters during the early summer on this all-around shrub. (Photo courtesy of California Assn. of Nurserymen)

Let's Plant A Rose—And Let's Do It Right

During the next few weeks, while the dormant planting season is in full swing, many will be planting a rose for the first time.

If you are one of the many, a word of advice from the California Assn. of Nurserymen might come in handy at this time.

THERE IS A natural reticence which all of us have to overcome when trying something new and the feeling is not reduced when you encounter your first dormant rose.

"That's a rose?" you ask, as your nurseryman offers up what looks like a loose bundle of sticks. You wonder how such a device can grow into the most beautiful of all flowering shrubs.

What your nurseryman sells you is a rose bush with the top cut back and the bareroots dangling. It doesn't look like much, but if you take reasonable care in planting it, your rewards will be plenty.

FIRST, BETWEEN purchase and planting your rose should be kept moist—or at least the roots should. Immediate planting is preferred, but if there's to be a delay, simply bury the roots in a convenient place in moist soil.

Remember that roses like sun—at least half a day's sun and preferably more. Choose any well-drained garden bed that meets the sun requirements and dig holes that are 18 inches to two feet deep by about 18 inches in diameter.

The soil at planting time should be workable—that is, not too wet. Mound some of it in the center of the hole, forming a cone of loose soil so that when the bare roots of the rose are spread out over it, the rose will be at the proper planting level.

PROPER LEVEL is arrived at by locating the bud union (ask your nurseryman to show you this) just above final soil level.

Before setting the rose in, trim off broken roots, if there are any, back to sound wood. Then, holding the rose with one hand, gradually fill in around the roots, firming the soil to eliminate any air pockets. When you've filled and firmed, water thoroughly and your rose is planted.

Do not fertilize until after the plant starts to grow.

To Prevent Damage To Your Tree

By checking your shade trees for weak branch crotches, you may be able to prevent mutilation or destruction of a valuable tree.

Most tree branches develop and grow more or less horizontally from the trunk with a upward sweep as they increase in length. Normally the angle between the branch and the trunk is wide, and the crotch is shaped somewhat like the letter U. These branch crotches are strong and rarely split even in severe storms.

In contrast, sometimes branches grow upright from the point of development, almost parallel with the central stem and often compete with it for leadership. The angle at the crotch of the branch and main stem is narrow and the crotch is V-shaped.

Such crotches are weak and are likely to split during storms.

Recommendations of the National Arborist Assn. are that V-shaped branch crotches be strengthened artificially. This may be done by installing one or more sections of tree screw-rod at the crotch and placing a system of supporting cables in the upper part of the tree's crown. A competent arborist should be employed to do this work.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Plant shade trees now while bareroot stock is available. Your nurseryman will recommend a variety.

✓ For gardens that need redesigning, January and February are good months to transplant shrubbery and to plant new varieties.

✓ Spray peach trees and nectarines with a dormant spray to prevent leaf curl. See your nurseryman for the proper spray material.

✓ Many hardy perennials such as Shasta daisies, phlox and perennial asters may be divided now.

✓ Gladiolas are available for planting or soon will be in most areas. Dust the corms with an insecticide before planting to avoid later trouble from thrips. For the biggest and best blooms, plant top grade bulbs.

BRIGHT IDEAS

Abstracts On The Ceiling Enliven The Living Room

By JOE JONES

It's not as crazy as you think!

For many years the Impressionists, the Abstraconists, the Nonobjectives ainted and starved — objects of derision and scorn. And although people laughed (and some still do), these painters had a great influence on design in America.

It has been felt in many fields—textiles, advertising, inistrial design and architecture.

If you live in a "modern" ome or apartment, you, too, can lean on these men to enhance your interiors with paint. You can be a Kandinsky or a Mondrian.

With a little planning, a roller, masking tape and nondrip paint, you can make your living room a modern work of art.

The ceiling is the center of interest in this case. Forget the walls—paint them a neutral gray or white. Go to a int shop and buy a Mondrian or Kandinsky print and this is your inspiration. Simplify it and paint it on your ceiling. Or better still, create your own abstract design and you'll be even more proud of yourself.

Use bright, clean colors and you'll be amazed at the dramatic effects you will achieve.

Plan carefully what you are doing beforehand. With a ruler and pencil lay out the areas to be painted and mark them for color. Mask carefully. Paint carefully.

You will have a work of art all your own.

When You Decorate, Why Not Be Different?

Handyman's Pages

What better place to be different than in your own home?

Feel like painting one wall a different color than the others? Go ahead and do it.

Feel like mixing traditional with contemporary furniture? Go ahead and do it.

Feel like arranging the paintings on your wall in a careless fashion rather than an orderly arrangement? Go ahead and do it.

IF ANY OR all of these things satisfies you, never mind whether you think it's correct. Because decorating standards, once unreasonibly rigid, are flexible enough to permit almost anything you want these days.

There is a growing recognition that it is far more important to satisfy the desires of the occupants of a home than to meet set requirements, which change over the years anyhow.

There was a time when you would have been thought something of a "kook" if you had painted one wall of your living room a different color than the others. Not now. It's an accepted way of creating a pleasing effect.

BUT ACCEPTED or not, you should try it—or almost anything else—if you feel so inclined.

If you can't find the courage to put a vibrant color on one wall of an otherwise sedate living room, experiment with one of the other rooms—the kitchen, the family room, one of the bedrooms, even the bathroom.

What's the worst that can happen? You won't like it? Nobody can stop you from repainting it, either another color or the original color.

STILL ANOTHER way to get a single different wall is to use a different type of material.

A paneled wall, using random-width wood panels or plywood or plastic-surfaced hardboard, can dress up a room whose three other walls are painted plaster or wallboard. A wall of laminated plastic, the kind you ordinarily find on coffee tables and other furniture, creates an individual and pleasant effect.

We have even seen a single wall of a recreation room finished with ordinary resilient floor tiles.

ANOTHER SUCH room had three walls of birch-faced plywood sheets and one wall of striated plywood squares. The latter were stained a dark color to lend a remarkably effective contrast to the light tone of the birch.

The next time you decide to redecorate or refinish a room, spend a little time visiting your local lumber yard or buillding supply material. Look over the wide variety of materials now available and, if one of them strikes your fancy, consider using it on a single wall. It's one way to start you thinking in the right direction.

Sure, it may cost you a little extra money. Know anything good that doesn't?

When A Louver Door Is Needed

Certain rooms seem to call for connecting doors. For example, the bedroom and dressing room, and the kitchen and dining area.

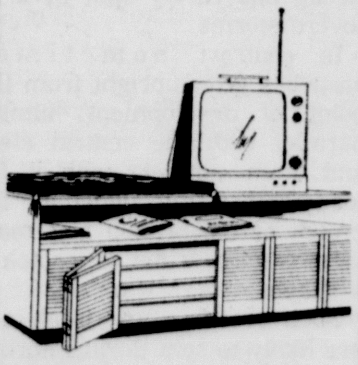
Pretty, practical louver doors are often the answer.

As connecting doors, louvers have two special assets: a slim, classic look that makes them equally appropriate for contemporary or traditional decor—such as a modern kitchen on one side and a formal dining room on the other; and a slat design that offers both privacy and a sense of "openness." This maintains the separateness of the rooms while tying them together.

Modern louver doors of ponderosa pine are available in stock sizes and in several styles. There are full louvers and partial louvers—those which have louvers in the top half and a closed wood panel on the bottom.

A popular type of connecting unit is the folding louver door. These fold back against themselves when opened, and require practically no floor clearance. They are used in areas which cannot easily accommodate the swing of a regulation door.

Louvers are also used as closet and wardrobe doors. The free flow of air between the louvers helps keep clothes fresh and protects them from mildew.



EXTRA seating, shelves for magazines and big books, enclosed space for table leaves and pads are all built into this stand for the portable TV. Unit is just a box and can be made of pine with inexpensive louvered shutters for doors along base.

IF PROPERLY DONE

Yes, Lacquer Can Be Brushed On

Prediction:

The following information about the application of lacquer with a brush will bring some disagreement from professional wood finishers who believe that lacquer can be applied properly only with a sprayer.

It happens every time.

THIS IS THE advance reply:

A good lacquer finish can be obtained with a brush if a "brushing" lacquer is used: if it is thinned at least 50 per cent with lacquer thinner; if it is applied with broad strokes; if no attempt is made to go over the same area twice; if several thin coats rather than one or two thick coats are put on; and if a little practicing is done first on scrap wood until the knack is acquired.

Each of those points is important. But none is more important than the advice not to go over the same area twice. That's because lacquer dries so quickly.

IN FACT, the drying begins the moment the lacquer is applied. Thus, you can not go back and brush out a section you thought did not come out exactly right — even if you do it within a few seconds after the application. Try it and you'll get a botched-up result, caused by the action of the new lacquer on the coat that so quickly has begun to set.

To avoid trouble, brush quickly and surely, with no attempt to return to any area. The next coat will take care of a tiny spot you may have missed, because each application sinks into the previous one rather than resting on it.

A very light sanding between coats is our recommendation, although there is one school of thought (in wood finishing, there is always more than one school of thought) which believes that only the last coat of lacquer should be sanded.

THE FAST-DRYING qualities which make the above precautions necessary have their good points. Lacquer does not pick up dust as much as does varnish, for instance. Also, several coats can be applied in a single day.

While on the subject of lacquer and varnish, the latter can be applied over the former, but the former can not be applied over the latter.

Never mind trying to figure that out. It merely means that you can apply varnish over lacquer, but you can not apply lacquer over varnish.

THE THINNER used in lacquer has a tendency to lift the varnish, much in the same manner as varnish remover.

Because lacquer is volatile as well as noxious, it should be applied only in an area where there is plenty of ventilation and no open flame.

Handsome Panel

Handsome way to handle a pass-through between kitchen and dining room is to panel the wall in a finely grained softwood, then make a matching pull-down door to close off the opening when not in use. Door should fit exactly into paneling so joints don't show, push up inside wall when pass-through is needed.

LUXURIOUS LOOKING but mighty practical is this master bathroom featuring storage tailored for every need, from hairpins to super-size towels. Cabinetwork also keys color scheme with carpet, while curtains pick up the orange-golds of the solid, edge-glued Douglas fir. Idea is acceptable to many homes.

The Bathroom Pampers With Practicality

Of all the rooms in the house, it's the bath which has changed most in recent years.

As a matter of fact, it wasn't so long ago when the bathroom wasn't even in the house.

Today it's practically a palace in its own right. It may have music piped in to accompany the shower-stall baritone. There may be a fully equipped writing desk alongside the tub for those who like to catch up on correspondence while they soak. There may even be a sun-flooded patio built at one end.

THE AVERAGE modern bath, however, is designed mostly to pamper with practicality—the sensible luxuries.

There's storage, for instance. The more, the better—and best are the built-ins which are custom-tailored to provide for specific needs and space requirements.

As in the kitchen, standard under-counter cupboards are giving way to drawers which slide their contents out to the user without requiring a headstand or deep knee bend. There should be big drawers for big things, little drawers for little things, and some deep enough to take tall cans of hair spray and bottles of hand lotion.

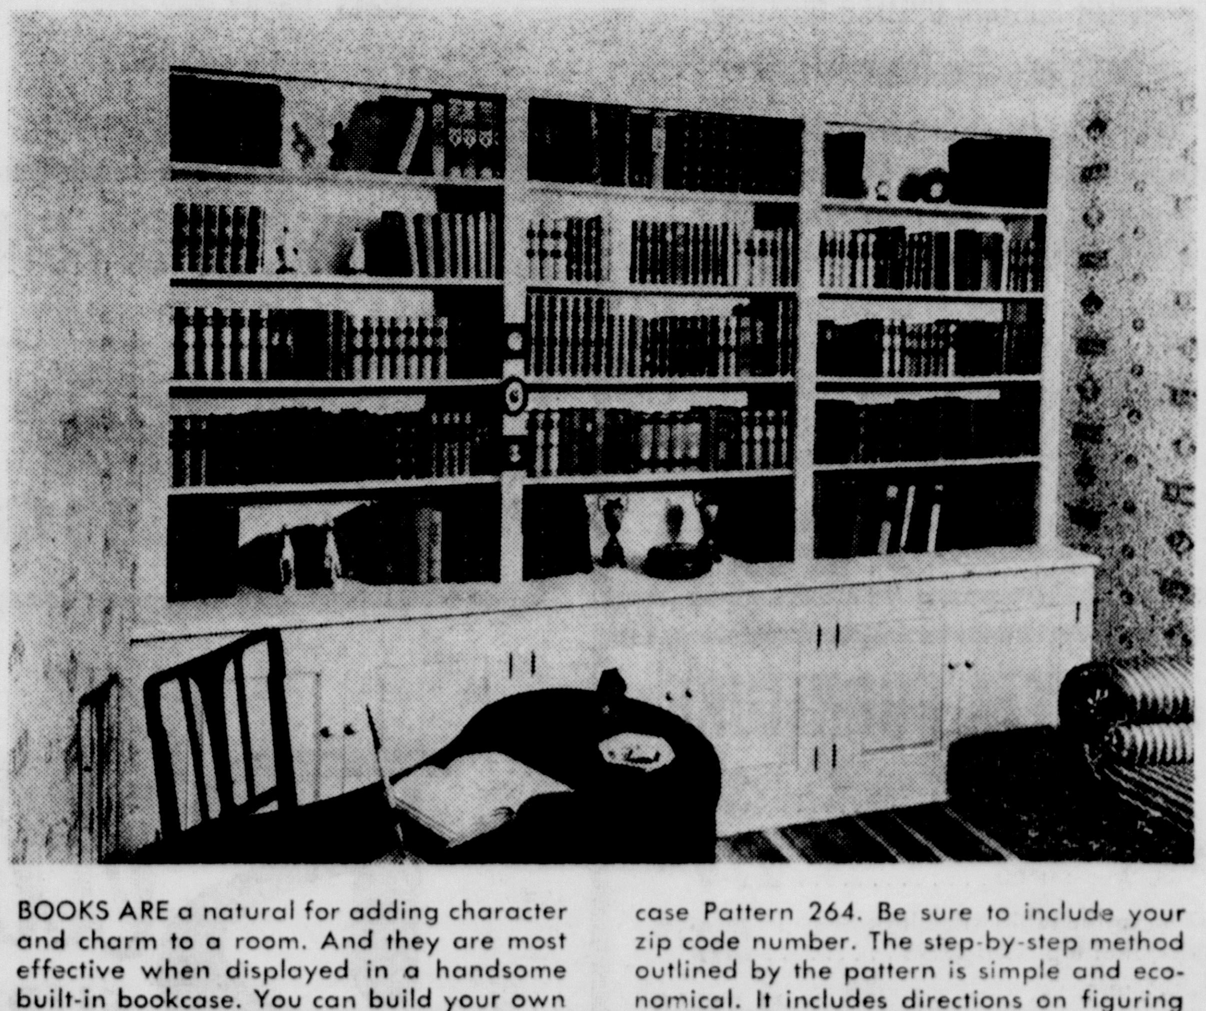
SUPER-SIZE bath towels can be stacked neatly on slide-out shelves inside cupboards, and supplies of soap and tissue are best handled that way, too. Prescriptions and such, however, belong in shallow wall cabinets with push-button combination locks on the doors.

Handsome is as handsome does, but with the wide variety of woods and finishes available, there's no excuse for the cabinetwork to be anything but pretty. You can spend what you want—little or lots.

One of the most attractive but least costly materials is solid Douglas fir lumber which has been glued to make big panels easily cut to the desired size and shape. The edge-glued panels of solid lumber have unusual strength and stability, and the fir can be finished with stain, clear varnish, or paint.

A CLEAR finish captures this wood's rich orangy-gold coloring which works well into the warm-toned color schemes currently favored. Stain can change it to any other wood shade desired. Paint is least practical, simply because it requires more upkeep and shows smudges and fingermarks.

In addition to having good cabinetwork, you can pamper yourself with giant three-way mirrors, single handle faucets, pretty oval lavatories, simulated marble countertops, ceiling heat and sun lamps, wood paneled walls, and carpeting, all of which are down-to-earth practical but look lavishly luxurious.



BOOKS ARE a natural for adding character and charm to a room. And they are most effective when displayed in a handsome built-in bookcase. You can build your own by sending 75 cents to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N. Y., 10510, and asking for Built-In Bookcase Pattern 264. Be sure to include your zip code number. The step-by-step method outlined by the pattern is simple and economical. It includes directions on figuring materials and specifying widths. Only stock moldings and plywood are used. Beneath the counter there is cabinet space to house a high fidelity or television set.
